Cooler weather for today and the holiday weekend—but no letup in the ruinous drought—was forecast here last night following a day of sweltering heat, a brief dust and windstorm, hail and rain, and steep drop in temperature.

The mercury rose to 95 yesterday, within two degrees of the year's high. A half hour later, at 4 p. m., the temperature was still at 94. By 5 p. m., after a crashing thundershower announced that cooling winds had arrived from Canada, the temperature plunged 20 degrees to 74.

The Weather Bureau foresees comfortably cool weather today and tomorrow, with clouds, but little likelihood of more rain like yesterday, when 0.21 inches fell between 4 and 7:30 p. m. It rained through the night.

Wind Fells Trees

The heat yesterday accounted for a death by drowning and four prostrations; the wind felled nearly a score of trees, and tied up traffic on Eighteenth Street Northwest between H and I Streets. The hail and rain brought relief from the hot, sultry weather.

Eleven-year-old Calvil Peters, colored, of 2100 block Newport Place Northwest, was drowned while swimming off a sand barge at Thirtieth and K Streets Northwest.

Five persons were prostrated. They were Mary Blanchard, 23, colored, of 519 New Jersey Avenue Northwest; Lawrence Morland, 34, of Piscataway, Md.; Benjamin F. Rosch, 51, of Cheltenham, Md.; William Brown, 52, colored; John McCauley, 27, of Arlington, Va.

Serious Health Risk

Virginia State Health Commissioner Dr. I. C. Riggin said yesterday that the heat wave and dry spell carried "a very serious public health risk" and urged people who use private water supplies to be cautious.

Maryland, too, has suffered severely from subnormal rainfall, and yesterday's precipitation didn't help much. The State Forestry Service warned that conditions throughout the State already were worse than prevailed in the drought of 1930.

In the District it was expected that the rain would to a small extent, at least, relieve the water situation here. On Wednesday the water works reached its maximum consumption for a day with 150,244,000 gallons. This, it was said, is the limit for a steady draw on the supply. In nearby counties restrictions on use of water have been in effect for more than a week.

Including yesterday's downpour, the rainfall here is more than 2 inches below normal for the month, and about 7 inches deficient for the year. Rainfall was recorded here on eight days during May, but only on three—yesterday, the 23d, and the 8th was the precipitation more than two-tenths of an inch.

Nation-Wide Sabotage Plot Hinted; Army and Navy Act

Fort Dix Soldiers Ordered Back to Post; Threat Made to Fort Custer's Security

Several agencies of the United States Government moved last night to nip what apparently was believed to be a Nation-wide sabotage effort, presumably timed for Memorial Day.

Most spectacular of the Government's actions was the cancellation of troop leaves at Fort Custer, in Battle Creek, Mich., because of a possible "threat to the security of the post."

In Washington at 12:30 a. m. today, the press branch of the War Department's bureau of public relations told The Post: "The action at Fort Custer was due to a report received by Col. R. T. Phinney, acting commandant of the post area, of "a threat to post installations."

The press officer added that nothing had been found to substantiate the report.

Other incidents yesterday and last night which added up to an indication of extraordinary Government watchfulness in defense industries and the armed services were these:

1. Military police patrolled the Times Square area in New York City and bus and railroad depots to round up all soldiers on leave from Fort Dix, N. J., and order them to return to camp.

It was explained that thousands of soldiers had left Dix early Thursday for a Memorial Day holiday before camp officials received an unexpected command from headquarters in Washington to cancel all furloughs. Men visiting their homes received telegrams ordering them to return, the Associated Press reported. At Dix, Maj. Gen. Clifford R. Powell, commander of the Forty-fourth Division, said the men would be ordered to return to camp by 5:45 p. m. Saturday to prepare for a trip next week to

Ickes Sees Power, Oil Emergency

Crisis May Force 'Gasless Sundays' And Ban on Night Baseball, He Says

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

No night baseball . . . Nation-wide daylight saving time . . . fewer neon lights . . . "gasless" Sundays.

That is what national defense may mean soon, Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes said yesterday, if shortages of power and oil are to be met.

As an expert of the Federal Power Commission foresaw a power emergency, "perhaps the most serious in history," Ickes told reporters:

"I consider it more important to have aluminum than to have neon lights or to play night baseball."

The blunt spoken Cabinet member was not among the 25,000 cash customers who filled Griffith Stadium Wednesday night for Washington's first night baseball game, played under a 180,000,000 candlepower system costing $120,000.

Urges Priorities

Saying he did not wish to be "an alarmist," Ickes stated "in the near future there isn't going to be enough power to meet defense needs."

He said priorities ought to be established on power distribution, to give precedence to defense needs over those of civilians.

He also warned that persons living on the East Coast may have to cut down use of oil, such as by "gasless Sundays," unless the shortage of transportation facilities from the Southwest oil fields is alleviated.

It was T. R. Tate, of the Power Commission, who added gravity to Ickes suggestions by predicting a power emergency, "perhaps the most serious in history." He revealed that a study was being made of ways to divert electricity from civilian to industrial uses, so that the flow of arms production would not be interrupted.

Ickes suggested that President Roosevelt might employ measures under his unlimited emergency proclamation to conserve power if citizens declined to cooperate. A 1920 law gives the Federal Power Commission authority to ration electrical energy in an emergency.

Advocates Pipe Lines

To alleviate an oil shortage, Ickes advocated pipe lines from the South to the East, where severe shortages of oil are feared because of transfer of one-fifth of the American tanker fleet to British war service.

While the Secretary spoke, the House Interstate Commerce Committee acted to ease the pinch in oil. It approved legislation authorizing President Roosevelt to have oil pipelines constructed if he believes it necessary to national defense, from the great Southwestern fields to the East Coast.

The bill would give the Government powers of eminent domain to pipeline construction certified by the President, thereby superseding

Running a Gantlet

By International News Service

Cairo, May 29.—Arrival of fresh British troops and material on the embattled Island of Crete was revealed in Cairo tonight after it was officially admitted that Britain's exhausted imperial forces were compelled to retreat east from the Suda Bay naval base.

The new British reinforcements, running a gantlet of continuous German bombings, were hurled into Crete in a mighty, eleventh-hour effort to stem the swelling tide of the German invasion that has already engulfed the island's bomb-ruined capital of Canea, as well as Suda Bay.

Royal Air Force Cairo headquarters at the same time announced that several fires and numerous explosions were wrought among more than 100 Nazi warplanes grounded on Crete's beaches between Kolmuari, Irlage and the Spellakos River in heavy R. A. F. attacks Tuesday night and early Wednesday.

Great Battle Raging

The Maleme airdrome was raided anew and a stick of British bombs was said to have kindled a large fire on the nearby German-occupied island of Searpanto where an airdrome was attacked.

The "heaviest fighting" that the ten-day-old struggle has yet developed was raging tonight between the southern shore of Suda Bay and the western shore of Almyro Bay to the east, according to a Cairo military spokesman.

Following the German capture of Canea Wednesday, the invaders were again "heavily reinforced," the British Middle East high command announced, declaring that in the face of further attacks "our troops were withdrawn to positions east of Suda Bay."

Fleet Covers Landing

It was believed the British eastern Mediterranean fleet, which has repeatedly gone into the thick of the battle, escorted and covered the transport and landing of imperial troops and equipment.

Long-distance Royal Air Force bombers and fighters, taking off from Egyptian bases, continued to intercept and battle German aerial

'Europe's Worst Master'

(Eden's Text, Page 26)

By the Associated Press

London, May 29.—Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, laid today before empire, ally and friend the nation's first comprehensive outline of war aims and this resolution:

"We must never forget that Germany is the worst master Europe has yet known. . . . She must never be in a position to play that role again."

Eden's speech was made before a distinguished group of national leaders and diplomats, including Herschel V. Johnson, Minister Counselor of the United States Embassy, at Mansion House, official residence of the lord mayor. It began with England's thanks for President Roosevelt's address of Tuesday night, which Eden called "a great act of faith and statesmanship."

Frankly, Eden used as the keynote and foundation for his outline of war aims Mr. Roosevelt's "four freedoms"—freedom of speech and worship, freedom from want and fear—which the President expounded last January.

His main points were these:

1. "The lasting settlement and internal peace of the continent as a whole is our only aim."

2. The world cannot expect a complete solution of the economic riddle after the war, but the United States, Britain, her dominions and "free" friends alone will possess the material means to evolve a postwar order "which seeks no selfish national advantage for any one of us, an order where each member of the family shall realize its own character and perfect its own gifts in liberty of conscience and person."

3. "We have learned a lesson in the interregnum between the two wars. We know that no escape can be found from the curse which has been lying on Europe except by creating and preserving economic health in every country."

4. The United States and other "free countries" unravished by war must help the British organize a transition to peaceful activities after the war; the British Empire can contribute from the enormous overseas stocks of

Naval Base Falls

By the United Press

Berlin, May 29.—British defenders are trapped between German and Italian troops in the eastern third of Crete without hope of evacuation after being driven from Candia, the island's largest city, and the vital Suda Bay naval base, an authorized military spokesman claimed tonight.

Complete occupation of the rocky Mediterranean island by Axis forces appeared imminent after 10 days of savage hand-to-hand fighting as Germany announced victory after victory, and it was disclosed that Italian troops had been landed in the eastern part of the island to help deal the finishing blow.

Occupation of Candia, 58 miles east of Canea, as well as the adjoining harbor and airfield was announced by the official D. N. B. news agency a few hours after the high command reported that the Suda Bay naval base had fallen and the British had been swept back 18 miles to Armyro Bay.

Only a Few Escape

Only a few British soldiers have been able to escape from Crete, the authorized spokesman said, and the remaining troops are believed entirely cut off.

[The Associated Press said D. N. B. reported British troops concentrating on the southern shores of Crete as if for escape are under heavy air attack by the German air force.]

Arrival of Italian troops in the eastern end of the island, apparently by sea, was said to have blocked escape in that direction. The rugged southern coast has no facilities for docking ships of any size, it was said, and evacuation from that shore appears impossible.

Obviously jubilant over the Axis victories, the spokesmen stressed that Germany would not pause after completing conquest of Crete, but would press on against the British in other areas.

Prisoners Taken

Capture of Suda Bay was considered an especially damaging blow to the defenders, as it was their only good deep-sea naval base. The Germans now can reinforce their air-borne invasion army with heavy materiel and troops landed by sea.

Several hundred prisoners were taken at Candia, D. N. B. said.

D. N. B. said the occupation of Suda Bay was completed on Wednesday after heavy fighting. "Particularly heavy resistance" by Anglo-Greek forces was reported along the east coast of Suda Bay, but hundreds of prisoners and large

Show of Arms To Honor Dead Of Wars Today

Memorial Day Rites To Be Held at Tomb Of Unknown Soldier

Memorial Day, 1941—the seventy-third annual tribute of the Nation to the men who died that it might live—will be observed today throughout America with parades, speeches and services. All over America, and in foreign countries where Americans died, the graves of soldiers and sailors will be decorated with flowers and wreaths.

Washington will lead the national observance of the day with solemn services at Arlington National Cemetery under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, which originated and has carried on the idea of Memorial Day, or Decoration Day as it was first called.

The ceremonies at Arlington will begin at 11 a. m., when the President's wreath will be placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Sergt. Alvin C. York, World War hero, will serve as aide de camp to Joseph C. Menendez, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and will place a wreath on the Tomb on behalf of that organization.

Other organizations that will offer wreaths for the grave of the nameless doughboy who died in France will be the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, the United Spanish War Veterans, the American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, Woman's Relief Corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, United Spanish War Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary, American Legion Auxiliary, and Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary. The ceremonies will be directed by Haywood N. Saunders, D. C. department vice commander, American Legion.

After the rites at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Memorial Day services will be continued at the Arlington National Amphitheater, beginning at 1 p. m. Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans' Affairs, and Sergt. York will give the principal speeches, and James Melton, Metropolitan Opera tenor, will sing, accompanied by the Marine Band.

The traditional Memorial Day parade will begin at 9:45 a. m. and will follow Constitution Avenue from Ninth Street past the reviewing stand at Sixteenth Street to Eighteenth Street Northwest, where it will disband. Taking part in the parade will be the surviving mem-

D. C. Nutrition Group Urges 5-Cent Milk

Surplus Marketing Official Says Reforms Will Be Made Here

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Measures which would bring low-cost surplus milk within reach of far more Washington needy than are now permitted to buy it are asked in a resolution adopted yesterday by a special subcommittee of the D. C. Nutrition Committee.

Meeting at the Y. W. C. A., the group, headed by Dr. Margaret Nicholson, pointed to the Surplus Marketing Administration, District Board of Public Welfare and Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association as the agencies which should collaborate in working out a more equitable distribution program.

The resolution states:

That the present system of extending 5-cents-a-quart milk solely to families on public relief or whose heads are certified for WPA jobs, but not yet assigned, excludes many indigent women and children.

That the disappointing participation in the project, inaugurated last August, indicates a need for an investigation to determine whether it might be increased by making the milk available at a greater number of outlets.

That the quantities of milk which eligibles may buy are too rigorously limited.

That a satisfactory method of qualifying needy Washingtonians for the low-cost surplus milk can be worked out, in a manner which will protect farmer producers against the danger of the product's falling into hands of those who can afford to buy at the regular market prices.

Bright Sign Seen

The District of Columbia Nutrition Committee is an official unit of the national hookup of State nutrition committees under the sponsorship of the Federal Security Agency, Mrs. Elizabeth O. Grant is its chairman.

A bright sign that the resolution will receive earnest consideration by the Surplus Marketing Administration, which administers the nickel-a-quart program here and in other cities, was seen in a statement by Dr. Edwin W. Gaumnitz, assistant administrator.

"Reforms can and may be instituted here," he told The Post. "The milk depot plan was chosen for Washington partly because that was the system in vogue in the beginning and because distribution

Nazi Planes Sink Destroyer In Sea Battle

100 of Bismarck's Crew Are Saved; Prinz Eugen Hunted

By the Associated Press

London, May 29.—An admiralty epilogue to the thunderous death of Britain's 42,100-ton H. M. S. Hood and Germany's giant battleship Bismarck disclosed today that a British destroyer was sunk by German planes at the end and that more than 100 of the Bismarck's crew are safe as British prisoners.

After British torpedo planes helped to sink the 35,000-ton Bismarck in revenge for her destruction of the Hood, Nazi aircraft pounced on the victorious British fleet and sank the 1,850-ton destroyer Mashona with probable loss of one officer and 45 men.

Meanwhile, the admiralty said, British ships had picked up more than 100 survivors from the Bismarck after her destruction 400 miles west of Brest last Tuesday, while only three survivors of the Hood had been accounted for.

"On the day after the sinking of the Bismarck," the admiralty announcement said, "some of our naval forces which had taken part in operations leading up to destruction of the German battleship were heavily attacked by German aircraft.

Planes Hunting Prinz Eugen

"During these attacks H. M. S. Mashona, a destroyer of the Tribal class (Commander W. H. Selby, R. N.), was hit. The board of admiralty regrets to announce she subsequently sank and one officer and 45 ratings are missing."

British warships and long-range Catalina (American made) and Sunderland flying boats still searched tonight for the Prinz Eugen, the Bismarck's cruiser escort which left her before the sinking. But the

Berlin Denies Schmeling Was Killed

He's in Hospital And Has a 'Tropical Disease,' Nazis Say

By the United Press

Berlin (Friday), May 30.—Authorized German sources said today that Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight champion reported by the British as having been killed in Crete, is alive.

Informants said Schmeling now is at an air force hospital, where he was brought from Crete after contracting a "slight tropical disease" a few days ago.

Schmeling was revealed for the first time to be a lance corporal in the German parachute force.

Spokesmen said he was among the first group of parachutists landed in western Crete, where he took part in the fighting. Operating under great difficulties, they said, he helped establish the bridgehead there which made possible the landing of reinforcements.

Schmeling has not been wounded, and his condition is not serious, the Nazis said.

Ambulance Driver Tells How Max Died

Cairo, May 29 (AP).—Max Schmeling, one-time heavyweight boxing champion turned paratrooper, was killed on Crete fighting "like a wild bull" after his capture by the British, a New Zealand ambulance driver related today.

"Before he did any damage, however, someone let him have it, and that was the end of Max."

The New Zealander gave this ac-

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 29.—Dr. Kurt Heinrich Rieth, who was disclosed last Sunday to be in the United States on a special Nazi mission of economic appeasement, was arrested this afternoon in his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria by agents of the Department of Justice and taken to Ellis Island to await deportation proceedings.

Attorney General Robert Jackson, announcing the arrest in Washington, said that the Government would seek to deport Dr. Rieth on the ground that "his application for a visitor's permit did not state the true purpose of his visit."

In his application for a visitors' visa when he entered the United States at Brownsville, Tex., on March 22, Dr. Rieth stated that he was bent on a "personal financial mission." The Herald Tribune disclosed, however, that Dr. Rieth had been trying in New York to buy up for the German government American-owned oil properties in southeastern Europe, which are now of little value to American citizens because of the war.

Crete Attack Well-Prepared

Nazis Seen Towing Huge Glider Fleet Over Greece Before Battle

By Daniel DeLuce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, May 29.—The German luftwaffe towed a huge fleet of gliders across northern Greece a fortnight before opening the aerial invasion of Crete, it was reported today by a neutral merchant stranded in Salonika by the German occupation.

"If remnants of the British secret service still operate in Greece they should have been able to notify GHQ well in advance of the attack," this source said.

"I looked up from my front porch one morning and was dumfounded to see big transports towing apparently broken-down planes at an altitude of 12,000 feet. Then I got my field glasses and discovered it was a glider convoy.

"Each transport trailed a cable to which five gliders were attached. The gliders had long, slender fuselages with tremendous wings and possibly were able to carry from 10 to 20 men apiece.

"The astonishing sight continued for hours, the convoys flying in three sections. Altogether I counted 200 motorless craft and couldn't help but think what soft pickings they'd be if the R. A. F. contacted them.

"It remained a mystery to me how

Question of Defense

D. C. Officials, Citizens Split On Ickes' Daylight Saving Plan

Officials and citizens alike split last night in their reaction to Secretary of Interior Ickes' proposal yesterday that daylight saving time be extended over the Nation to conserve power for national defense.

Everyone expressed a desire to aid national defense, but the question arose whether moving up the clock an hour actually would save power.

For the District Ickes' Nation-wide proposal reopened a 20-year-old controversy. President Harding established daylight savings here for four months in the summer of 1922 and then discarded it. And ever since, especially in 1937, attempts have been made to revive it.

Typical of comment from those who approve the Ickes plan is that of C. E. Stotler, garageman, of 5403 Hawthorne Street Northwest:

"I wish we had daylight saving. It would give us more leisure time."

But others, like Frank Christy, newsboy on the corner of Fourteenth and F Streets Northwest, don't like the idea.

"It's better to get an extra hour's sleep in the morning," he said.

Both Commissioner John Russell Young and Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz, registered personal disfavor with the idea, but said they would not object if it were found widely advisable. Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada,

The Gallup Poll

Number Who Think U.S. Will Fight Is Growing

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 29.—The number of American voters who think the United States will likely get into the European war sometime before it is over has nearly doubled since the war began 20 months ago.

Although public opinion surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion have repeatedly shown that the majority oppose entering the war at this time, a survey just completed indicates that more than eight voters in every ten hold the fatalistic belief that the United States will be drawn into the conflict.

This sentiment began to rise sharply at the beginning of the year—during the period of debate over the lend-lease bill and the period when British ship losses were mounting rapidly—and was accelerated by Hitler's invasion of the Balkans in April.

In fact, an examination of the 20-month trend of sentiment on the question indicates that during periods of German military successes there is generally an increase in the number of Americans who think the country will get into the war. On the other hand, when the Greeks were winning battles in Albania and the British were pushing the Italians out of Libya last winter, there was a decline in the number who felt the United States would enter the war.

Other Institute studies have shown that whenever Britain has met with reverses, sentiment for aiding her has generally increased in this country. The vote on today's question is correlative evidence along the same line—evidence that British reverses tend also to increase the number who think we will eventually go to war on Britain's side. For a substantial majority of voters, surveys show, say at this time that they would rather see the United States go to war than see Britain defeated.

The trend on the question whether the United States will go to war, as measured in 12 successive surveys since October, 1939, follows:

"Do you think the United States will go into the war in Europe sometime before it is over, or do you think we will stay out of the war?"

	Think U. S. Will Go In	Think U. S. Will Stay Out
Oct., 1939 (Outbreak of war)	46%	54%
Feb., 1940 (War's quiet phase)	32	68
May, 1940 (Invasion of France)	62	38
June, 1940	65	35
September, 1940	67	33
Dec., 1940 (Greek-British Successes)	59	41
January, 1941	72	28
February, 1941	74	26
March, 1941	80	20
April, 1941 (Balkan Invasion)	82	18
Today	85	15

Some voters in the latest survey gave it as their opinion that "America is already in the war."

Two-Point Significance

The latest result is significant on at least two counts. First, if the United States does go into the war, it will come as no surprise to the majority of Americans. Second, psychologists and students of history have often argued that when a nation expects war, or considers it inevitable, there is greater likelihood that it will get into war.

American noninterventionists can take comfort from the fact, however, that in the 20 months since war began in Europe the number of Americans who think we should get into the war has shown no such phenomenal rise as the number who think we will get into it.

At the beginning of the war, 5 per cent thought the United States should get into the war. In the last reported survey on the subject—May 16—21 per cent favored going to war now, with 79 per cent still against going to war at this time.

There has been, however, a sharp and equally important growth of sentiment for aiding England "even at the risk of war"—a growth from 36 per cent at the time of the invasion of France, to 62 per cent in the most recent study.

Britain's Powerful Cruiser York Lost in Battle for Crete

WHEN WASHINGTONIANS SAW THE YORK—District residents lined the railing at Hains Point in October, 1935, to watch H. M. S. York cruise up the Potomac and into the Anacostia to drop anchor at the Washington Navy Yard on a good-will visit. Yesterday the British Admiralty announced that the 8,250-ton cruiser had been lost in the battle for the Mediterranean Island of Crete. The warship had been under repair in Suda Bay, British naval base on the embattled island, and was destroyed by bombing from the air troop carriers and strafe Nazi forces already landed on the island.

Dive-Bombers Sink British Cruiser York

Cairo, May 29 (AP).—German dive bombers, in endless assaults destroyed in Suda Bay the 8,250-ton British cruiser York, as she lay crippled and under intermittent repair. But, official announcements tonight indicated, all but seven of her 600-man crew—two dead and five wounded—got away unscathed.

Possession of Suda Bay, itself, admittedly perfected a bridgehead for sea-borne reinforcements. Until now, Malemi and the nearby beaches have formed the main gateway for the air-borne invaders.

So far, the British say, very few Axis troops have landed by sea, although the British have received some sea-borne help themselves.

The British, Australians and New Zealanders, with their Greek and Cretan allies, made several counterattacks that cost the Germans many lives, but they were forced slowly back by sheer weight of numbers.

Canea had been abandoned by the civilian population and Suda Bay, too, had been cleared of all the ships that could leave. It is a watery graveyard for semisubmerged hulks as the result of dive bombings which, long before the invasion, made the harbor one of the most hellish spots on earth.

The other two main settlements on the northern coastal belt, Retimo, 35 miles east of Canea, and Candia, 30 miles farther east, like Canea have scarcely a stone on top of one another. The Greek emigre premier, Emmanuel Tsouderos, said today that fire in these cities has completed the work of the dive-bombers which, themselves, "literally plowed up" the towns.

67,000 Homeless

Canea once had 26,000 people; Candia, 33,000, and Retimo 8,600.

Despite the German advance, however, the territory they undisputably hold is but a small fraction of the island area, consisting, so far as is known here, of a strip along the north coast from Malemi to an undesignated new line east of Suda Bay.

The steep and cavernous mountains of the interior offer good defensive positions.

Minton Takes Oath As Appeals Justice

Sherman Minton, of Indiana, took the oath of office yesterday as a justice of the Seventh Federal Circuit Court of Appeals.

The oath was administered in the Senate clerk's office by Associate Justice Black of the Supreme Court, who, like Minton, is a former Senator.

Minton's Circuit Court has jurisdiction in Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin.

the right of way now held by other carriers such as railroads. In this connection, Ickes at his press conference said the railroads "very shortsightedly" had blocked in the Georgia Legislature an attempt to build the pipelines.

Southern public power officials issued appeals, meanwhile, for conservation of electrical energy on a voluntary basis and it was said this type of cooperation might be extended to other areas.

Authorities in Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina asked that residents try to cut down use of electric power, wherever possible.

Night baseball, an innovation here, has existed for some time at major league ball parks in seven other cities—Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and New York.

Minor baseball leagues have cut down their night games. Several Southern cities have dimmed or blacked out their "white way" lights.

President Roosevelt some weeks ago forecast the oil shortage when, in a letter to the House, he warned that oil rationing in the East was a "distinct possibility."

Through the United States is the greatest oil producing country in the world the shortage in the East has been caused by diversion of 50 tankers for shuttling oil to Great Britain.

Tate, who is director of the national defense power staff of the Power Commission, predicted that 'if we are going to double airplane production, quadruple tank production, treble powder, small arms ammunition and rifle production, and multiply output of machine guns and other materials, then by the end of 1941 the power situation will be critical indeed."

In a move to give the Nation more electrical energy, meanwhile, President Roosevelt asked the Senate to ratify an amendment to an old treaty with the United Kingdom to permit an additional diversion for power purposes of Niagara River waters above the falls.

The change, described as for "the duraton of the emergency," would furnish added power for chemical and other defense industries in the Niagara area.

Meanwhile, Leon Henderson, Government price administrator, told Senators that officials were investigating recent gasoline prices with an eye to possible price ceilings for the petroleum industry.

Henderson attributed recent increases in gasoline prices to transfer of the tankers to the British and said he would set "price ceilings" if the upward tendency continues.

British War Aims Defined by Eden food and materials which she will have accumulated.

5. "Under a system of free economic cooperation, Germany must play a part. But here I draw a firm distinction: we must never forget that Germany is the worst master Europe has yet known. Five times in the last century she has violated the peace. She must never be in a position to play that role again. Our political and military terms of peace will be designed to prevent repetition of Germany's misdeeds. . . .

6. "Social security must be the first object of our domestic policy after the war . . . Abroad not less than at home. It will be our wish to work with others to prevent starvation in the post-armistice period, currency disorders throughout Europe and the wide fluctuations of employment and prices which were the cause of so much misery in the 20 years between the two wars . . ."

7. "When peace comes we shall make such relaxations of our wartime financial arrangements as will permit revival of international trade on the widest possible basis. We shall hope to see the development of a system in international exchange in which trading of goods and services will be the central feature."

8. The British Empire, their Allies, the United States and South America are alone able to restore social security to the world, "for irrespective of the nature of the political settlement, continental Europe will end this war starved and bankrupt of all foods and raw materials which she is accustomed to obtain from the rest of the world. She will have no means, unaided, of breaking the vicious circle. She can export few goods until she has, first of all, received the necessary raw materials. Wasteful wartime cultivations in many lands will leave agriculture almost as weak as industry; thus Europe will face vast problems of general demobilization with a general lack of the necessary means to put men to work."

9. On the other hand a victorious Germany could offer Europe nothing, Eden said, save "a state of collapse."

Nazis Seen Towing Huge Fleet Of Gliders Over North Greece

the Germans got the gliders into the air, nor did anyone else in Salonika seem to know the take-off method.

"None landed in Salonika. Supposedly they went to the Peloponnesus without stopping."

The merchant, an old friend of mine, had just left Salonika but requested anonymity.

"I saw 1,500 British soldiers grouped miserably in a dirty prison camp outside Salonika subsisting mostly on bread and water," he related.

British Are Kept Busy

"Before Greek prisoners were released on the day of Hitler's latest speech some were kept in an adjoining camp and shared with the British food that civilian friends brought.

"The German guards kept the British busy moving a pile of rocks from one end of a field to the other, then back again.

"Preceding the Axis victory march through Athens, Greek newspapers printed a German military notice ordering the population to shutter windows and stay off streets where the Axis troops were parading.

"Greeks believed the order was given to avoid a riot because of Italian detachments heading the parade.

"The Greeks likewise were enraged by a rumor that Mussolini wanted to bring 15,000 Greek prisoners to Rome to exhibit them as proof of the Fascist triumph.

"German propaganda tried to win popular support, but Salonika restaurants which the Nazis patronized were shunned by Greeks.

Scoff at German Claims

"Much wheat stock was shipped out by the Germans, presumably to the Reich. In one small Macedonian town the people had almost no flour, but the Germans were feeding Greek wheat to army horses.

"The Greeks scoffed at Hitler's estimates of small German losses in Greece. Several soldiers who participated in the defense of Ruppel Pass said the Germans lost 15,000 men just to reach Salohika. They wept when told how Greece finally was forced to surrender.

"The Germans brought in thousands of motor vehicles, of which probably two-thirds were equipped with American-brand tires. They never seemed short of gasoline.

"They trucked all their supplies southward because most of the bridges and tunnels of the Salonika-Athens railway were demolished. It will take years to rebuild them.

"Most of the Greeks seemed convinced that Hitler had robbed them of their Albanian victory. No criticism was heard of the present provisional Greek government in exile, but there was plenty against the old government's alleged failure to supply more ammunition to the Metaxas line troops."

4. A Federal investigation of a dozen Boston Navy Yard workers was begun last night as it was learned by the Associated Press that each of the men received notice during the day that they were suspended by direction of the Secretary of the Navy "pending inquiry as to whether their presence in the navy yard was inimical to the United States."

5. Twenty extra guards have been detailed to duty on the San Francisco waterfront because of rumors that "something big" might happen to property there Memorial Day, Joseph F. Marias, president of the State board of harbor commissioners, said last night.

Nat J. L. Pieper, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office in Los Angeles, told the Associated Press "the situation is receiving our attention."

Marias said rumors had reached him of possible sabotage efforts, and added: "Naturally we can't take any chances." He added that "suspicious fires in numerous ports have broken out recently, and we are going to see that they do not happen here."

6. The International News Service reported in Philadelphia that "a plot to bomb the huge Eddystone Locomotive Works, holders of millions of dollars' worth of national defense contracts, was disclosed by G-men and immediately caused a search of all employes, their cars, and incoming shipments."

The news service said that John F. Sears, head of the Philadelphia office of the FBI, supervised the search conducted by more than 100 company police, and that guards found three metal cylinders labeled "hand grenade" in the automobile of an inspector in the plant's ordnance department but that he was released after questioning.

The United Press reported that the move affecting Fort Dix canceled ten-day furloughs for more than 16,000 men and officers of the Forty-fourth Division.

In the move to guard aircraft factories, antiaircraft equipment and gun crews made their appearance first at the Consolidate Aircraft plant in San Diego. Consolidated officials said the Army had declared the guns were installed for maneuvers and practice which will be conducted "in the near future." Three of the guns were placed on the roof of the huge plant, while one was installed in front of the main administration building.

Other airplane plants placed under guard were Douglas, Lockheed-Vega, North American, Northrup and Vultee.

At Fort Custer, guards were placed around a power substation in Battle Creek, Mich., and around a water-pumping station. Every one of some 4,000 soldiers left at the fort was placed on guard duty, all carrying "live" ammunition. Guards were reported wearing undershirts over their uniform shirts to identify each other.

British acknowledge that the Prinz Eugen might by this time have reached some friendly port.

Meanwhile, Britain eyed with deep concern the mounting toll of her already overworked Royal Navy.

In less than a week the nation has learned of the destruction of more than 75,000 tons of warships, including the Hood, three cruisers, five destroyers and a submarine.

If the heavy losses in the Mediterranean—where the three cruisers, the submarine and four destroyers were lost—had insured the retention of Crete and the failure of Germany's first large scale airborne invasion, Britons could feel much better. But the latest news from Crete was decidedly gloomy.

The Prinz Eugen, if still loose in the Atlantic, would be a big menace to British shipping. With a speed of 32 knots, substantial armor, 8-inch guns and a cruising range of 10,000 miles, she could be a most dangerous raider. The British have few cruisers that could catch and kill her single-handed.

"After talking with him at length our officers were convinced he was Schmeling.

"Later in the day he was being taken to a field hospital by our ambulance corps when more German parachutists descended on top of us and a dogfight opened."

It was then, the New Zealander recounted, that Schmeling sprang into action.

through grocery stores, for example, would have involved several complicating factors.

"However, the whole project is still in an experimental stage. Any changes that can be worked out to effect improvements will be made."

At present, 5-cent milk can be bought only at the following locations:

Southeast—No. 5 Police Station, Fifth and E Streets; No. 11 Police Station, Nichols Avenue and Chicago Street.

Southwest—No. 4 Police Station, Sixth Street and Virginia Avenue.

The District Independent Food Distributors, representing approximately 700 groceries, this week offered to handle surplus milk for the needy for a service charge of one cent per quart.

Dr. Gaumnitz, recalling that this is the same offer which the organized independent grocers made before 5-cent milk was launched here last August, described it as "very fair."

That the Nicholson committee's resolution will be weighed carefully by the Board of Public Welfare, as well as by the Surplus Marketing Administration, is certain.

Robert E. Bondy, retiring director of the board, originally sought to have all needy, within certain limits, made eligible for the nickel quarts, not solely those on public relief or certified for WPA employment. He also recommended that the bottles be sold in groceries for greater accessibility.

However, favorable action on the resolution also would entail cooperation by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. Representing the bulk of dairy farmers who supply the Washington milkshed, under terms of the Agriculture Department's marketing agreement, the association has opposed liberalization of the 5-cent milk regulations.

Bruce B. Derrick, its manager and spokesman, declined an invitation to attend the luncheon meeting at which the reform resolution was adopted yesterday.

Meantime, public school officials yesterday continued to survey elementary school enrollments and the proportion now receiving free milk to determine whether consumption may be increased sufficiently to obtain a "penny program," also under auspices of the Surplus Marketing Administration. A report is expected to be submitted Wednesday to the Board of Education.

He expressed considerable worry over the one-time sovereign's condition but said no members of the family had yet been summoned to Doorn.

Lindbergh Fears War of Hemispheres

By International News Service

Philadelphia, May 29.—Charles A. Lindbergh asserted tonight that if the policy suggested by President Roosevelt in his Tuesday broadcast is followed, "We will start a war between the hemispheres that may last for generations."

Addressing a rally of the American First Committee in the Sports Arena, which has a capacity of 10,000, Lindbergh said:

"Our own President says that the safety of America lies in controlling the Cape Verde Islands, off the coast of Africa. Even Hitler never made a statement like that."

The speeches of Lindbergh, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Kathleen Norris were broadcast locally by Radio Station WFIL, but not over the national networks.

(The America First Committee announced in New York that the National Broadcasting Co., Columbia Broadcasting System and Mutual Broadcasting System had all "declined" to broadcast the speeches. "The reason they gave us," a committee spokesman said, "was that the America First people have had enough time on their networks.")

In a lengthy declaration in which he accused the President of advocating "world domination," Lindbergh said:

"The philosophy of the interventionists is a philosophy of failure. Nothing shows that more clearly than a study of their record in this war. They cannot point to the achievement of a single important success, either in America or Europe."

Of the President's remarks about the Cape Verde Islands, Lindbergh said:

"Suppose the Germans said that the safety of Europe lay in controlling the Fernando Noronha Islands off the coast of South America. Obviously this couuntry would go to war. If we take the attitude that we must control the islands of the Eastern Hemisphere, Europe has just as much reason to demand control of the islands of the Western Hemisphere.

"If we say that our frontier lies on the Rhine, they can say that theirs lies on the Mississippi. If we attempt to follow a policy such as the President suggests we will start a war between the hemispheres that may last for generations.

"Such a policy means that one of the hemispheres must dominate the other before it can be satisfied or successful. Mr. Roosevelt claims that Hitler desires to dominate the world. But it is Mr. Roosevelt himself who advocates world domination when he says that it is our business to control the wars of Europe and Asia, and that we in America must dominate islands lying off the African coast."

Lindbergh closed his address with a statement that the America First Committee stands for the right of free speech and the right of the vote. Remarking that the former right is "not yet suppressed in this country," he added:

"The issue of peace and war was not honestly presented to us at the last election. We stand for the right of a free people to make the choice of war or peace."

The Lindbergh address opened with a charge that the present plights of France and England were caused by interventionists who advocated war without preparation and he predicted that if Americans "permit the Government to take us into war," they will deserve the consequences.

Lists Allied Defeats

Asserting that interventionists had turned away from a negotiated peace without regard to the "military realities," he listed the defeats sustained under Nazi onslaught and drew attention to the increasing demand for American aid.

"Now it is Crete," he said. "Always the same story—one defeat after another since the war began. And always the demand for more assistance from America. First they said 'sell us the arms and we will win.' Then it was 'lend us the arms and we will win.' Now it is 'bring us the arms and we will win.' Tomorrow it will be 'fight our war for us and we will win.'"

Lindbergh disclosed that he had believed in the wisdom of a negotiated peace ever since "Germany attacked through Holland and Belgium, the British army evacuated the continent and France fell." In a section in which he scoffed at remarks in the Presidential broadcast envisioning the possibility of a German air invasion of America, he said:

"At that time (the fall of France) many of us who did not want to see England defeated advocated a negotiated peace in Europe. We realized how futile it was to carry on a war for which no nation but Germany had prepared.

"Reputations at Stake"

"We knew that it would only send the best men of Europe to die by the hundreds of thousands and that with each month that passed England would be in a worse position to negotiate than she was before.

But the interventionists were still in control. Their personal reputations were at stake . . .

"They attempted to stampede our people through hysteria and fear. If England fell our turn would be next, they cried; our Nation of 130,000,000 people would be invaded like Luxembourg, Holland and Belgium. Our cities would be destroyed by nonexistent fleets of transatlantic bombers. German parachute troops would descend on the streets of New York.

"Our own President spoke of an air invasion from the Arctic wastes of Greenland, and of bombing planes with speeds far exceeding any yet attained, even on the drawing boards of our greatest engineers."

Lindbergh concluded his criticism of interventionists with a renewal of his demand for a "new leadership."

"The interventionists," he said, "have forgotten their promises that all the steps they asked to take were to be short of war. They now say that the only way for us to defend America is to cross the Atlantic Ocean and fight Europe; to cross the Pacific Ocean and fight Japan; to fight possibly Russia, Italy, France and Spain as well."

Vichy Accuses R. A. F. of New Syrian Attack

By the Associated Press

Vichy, May 29.—French officials accused Britain tonight of continuing her attacks on French colonial possessions, despite a formal French protest, and Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan laid the responsibility for the European war at London's door.

The French said the latest attack by the British was made on a railroad station of the important Syrian town of Homs, where one native was killed as a Blenheim pilot dropped four bombs on his objective.

Vichy had lodged with the United States Department of State for delivery to London a protest against the British bombing of Sfax, Tunisia.

(An R. A. F. communique tonight admitted British bombers scored four hits on a vessel of between 4,000 and 5,000 tons in Sfax harbor. "From the enormous explosion and vast column of smoke which resulted," the report added, "it was apparent that the ship was loaded with munitions.")

To Journalist Henry Beraud, known for his anglophobe attitude, Darlan declared:

"It was England who was the instigator of the war. We were only a plaything in her hands."

From 1919 to 1939, said the interview, England did everything possible to prevent French naval construction.

"Then, in 1939, she begged us to accelerate construction of our battleships," Darlan continued. "In 1940, after the armistice, she tried to destroy them."

Dispatches from Sfax yesterday said British bombers which attacked the port were pursuing Italian merchantmen, two of which were hit.

The official News Agency Notes today referred to the 3,313-ton Italian ship Florida II, saying she had been in port at Sfax since Monday afternoon because of damage and that her presence there conformed to international law.

Winner of this group was the Bellehaven Garden Club.

Japan Believed Offered a Way Out of Treaty

By the Associated Press

The United States Government's relations with Japan were described as unchanged by Secretary of State Hull yesterday, but it appeared that efforts were being made to give Tokyo an avenue of "escape" from Axis commitments.

Whether the Japanese government would take advantage of this opening in the event of war between the United States and Germany was less evident.

Secretary Hull's comment at his press conference apparently was intended to counteract assertions by responsible legislators concerning the reasons for the omission of any mention of Japan from President Roosevelt's "fireside chat" Tuesday night.

They attributed this to a growing belief in Administration quarters that Japan's ties with the Axis were weakening; that business interests were growing more influential in Tokyo and might eventually gain the ascendency over more militaristic elements.

Secretary Hull said only that American policies and relations with Japan had not changed. This was believed to rule out any possibility that the United States would be willing to make economic or other concessions to Japan to induce her to break away from the tripartite pact.

On the chance, however, that Japan herself may want a way out of the pact, President Roosevelt was believed in diplomatic quarters to have phrased his speech carefully to provide such an escape.

Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese foreign minister, reaffirmed Japan's loyalty to the three-power pact in a speech yesterday, but he said also that Germany and Italy had accepted the original Japanese text of the accord without modification—a possible hint that Japan had left a "loophole."

Under this pact the three nations undertook "to assist one another with all political, economic and military means when one of the three contracting parties is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war or in the Sino-Japanese conflict."

Japan's decision in the event of war between the United States and the Axis was believed to hinge on an interpretation of the word "attack."

President Roosevelt's emphasis that this word now had a new meaning was considered significant in relation to Japan. The President reasserted that the United States was mustering its men and resources "only to repel attack" but declared that "we in the Americas will decide for ourselves whether and when, and where, our American interests are attacked or our security threatened."

Fireside Chat Given Display In Moscow

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 29.—The Soviet press published President Roosevelt's Tuesday night speech and emergency proclamation prominently today.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, reports from Washington led with the President's assertion that Germany is aiming at world domination.

Pravda, Communist Party newspaper, gave the story two columns at the top of its foreign news page, but without comment.

Red Star, the army organ, reviewing the situation in the Pacific, declared that military cooperation between Britain and the United States was "assuming a closer character and more concrete forms" there.

Pointing out that planes from aircraft carriers figured heavily in the sinking of the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck, the navy publication, Red Fleet commented that "the importance and value of torpedoes again was confirmed."

Talk Called "Ambiguous"

Vichy, Unoccupied France, May 29 (AP).—President Roosevelt's Tuesday night speech was called ambiguous today by newspapers in both occupied and unoccupied France.

An editorial in Paris-Soir was headed "The President Evaded Answering Admiral Raeder, and Le Petit Journal of the unoccupied zone entitled an editorial on the speech "Too Much or Not Enough."

[Germany's Grand Admiral Erich Raeder said two days before the President's talk that the Nazi navy would consider American effort to see that war materials reach England as an act of war.]

La Croix, a Catholic publication, said the speech indicated the United States was not ready for "brusque action."

Chinese Satisfied

Chungking, May 29.—An early and completely definite alignment of forces in the Far East is seen here as one of the potential results of President Roosevelt's speech. Authoritative observers believe the speech will mean American action that will bring a clash with Germany or at least so sharpen United States-German relations that Japan will be compelled either to take action in support of the Reich or to indulge in extensive appeasement of the United States and England and compromise with China.

Extras, which are rare in Chungking, were issued carrying the speech, and the army organ Sao Tang Pao hailed the talk as foreshadowing "real Chinese-American military cooperation."

Widespread satisfaction was voiced at Mr. Roosevelt's mention of aid to China. The speech is regarded as another step in aligning China definitely to the Anglo-American front.

Daylight Saving Meets Opposition

chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, ranking minority member of the committee, expressed themselves as traditionally against daylight saving.

Several office workers, in a "how would it affect you?" sampling, were apathetic toward the idea. They said they "wouldn't mind" the shift in their schedules but weren't enthusiastic.

John Lloyd, 1820 G Street Northwest, information specialist in the U. S. Office of Education, who has to go to work at 8 a. m., said he wouldn't object to the plan but that "it would probably work a hardship" on many of the Government workers who have to be at their offices at 8. "They would probably stay up just as late at night, and it would mean losing an hour of rest the next morning. The question is, would they be as efficient—at a time when efficiency is so important."

Mrs. Louise Mull, secretary to Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of District public schools, has to spend a half-hour coming in from her Silver Spring home to reach her office by 9 a. m. After pondering that side of the question, she added: "But daylight saving would give me an extra hour to work in the garden." She said she did not feel strongly, one way or the other, about the plan, but would not oppose it.

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said that "I am against it for Washington, and see no benefit in it—for ordinary times. But if it is done on a Nation-wide scale, that is different. If it is done from the standpoint of national defense, I am sure the federation wouldn't want to oppose it, even though it were basically against the idea in ordinary times.

"We're for it," said Dr. and Mrs. R. P. Kelley, of 8401 Sixteenth Street Northwest. "It'll mean more time for recreation after work."

"More time to play," agreed Jim Mayfield, of 1305 E Street Northwest, a shooting gallery assistant.

A policeman who was patrolling a downtown beat was dubious. "I get up early enough anyway, at 5:30," he explained, "and I think 4:30'd be too early."

A woman who refused to give her name, said she was a housewife and mother of several children and insisted that daylight saving for her, and other women, would mean getting up an hour earlier than customarily, and an extra hour's work, and the added problem of feeding hours for young children.

Secretary Ickes yesterday suggested that the United States may have to resort to restricted use of electricity and have "gasless Sundays" to meet shortages of power and oil.

A spokesman at the Department of Interior pointed out that the Secretary recently said daylight saving would be advantageous specifically for Washington because in the defense program the Government is doing business with large industrial centers which are on daylight savings time, and synchronization would be helpful.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech commented on the economy angle, when he said: "In the interest of economy, it might result in savings, through conserving electric light power. I think it should be nation-wide or not at all. As an economy move, now is the time to do it."

Britain Gains In Air Power, Halifax Says

Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, last night predicted that "within a few months, when American production gets going, the scales are bound to turn against Germany."

Indicating that further British reverses in the eastern Mediterranean would not destroy his confidence, the envoy told a press conference at the British Embassy:

"Let the imagination run riot and picture German armies established on three continents—paying dearly, of course, for each advance. Meanwhile, Britain is gaining power to send 500 to 1,000 planes a night against Germany, instead of 100 to 200 once or twice a week, as is now the case.

"Through all this we hold the center of resistance, the British Isles, and the freedom of the seas. It is not imaginative to foresee a time when the Germans, many of whom thought a war against Poland was a good idea, begin to wonder about the wisdom of a war to occupy the world."

Lord Halifax dismissed rumors of a "negotiated peace" with the blunt observation, "You can't make peace with a mad dog."

"We can't believe anything Hitler and his gang might say," he continued, "and the English people have made up their minds there can be no peace or security or order in the world until that man is stopped."

The Ambassador said he believed some of the peace rumors in this country are conveyed through "innocent channels of German propaganda—it's the sort of story I should expect the Germans to put about, with the idea of creating fog, doubt and misunderstanding."

"Britain will carry on the war whatever happens," he continued, "but our people know, of course, that the more you help them and the more quickly the shorter will be the war."

Asked if American aid could become fully effective without this country's actual entry, Halifax replied that there were undoubtedly "certain things" a nation could do as a belligerent which it can't do as a nonbelligerent but that he had no doubt the response to President Roosevelt's speech Tuesday would greatly accelerate American production.

Halifax touched only briefly on the war in the eastern Mediterranean. "Whatever happens in Crete," he said, "the defense has exacted very heavy payment, has gained valuable time for Gen. Wavell and his armies and has undoubtedly dislocated German plans to support and develop the trouble in Iraq."

He said he thought the Germans "would draw the conclusion from Crete that an air-borne invasion is a very difficult undertaking, even when you have a preponderance of air power. It would naturally be still more difficult if the territory to be invanded commands substantial air power."

Halifax told correspondents it was hard to be "very specific" about peace aims, "until you know what sort of shape the world will come out of the mangle in."

"There should be a distinction between the economic terms, because the contentment of the German people must depend on their economic life, and the military terms, which must prevent the German people and the world from being led again into such a catastrophe," he declared.

Halifax spoke with pride of the destruction of the battleship Bismarck, which he called a "remarkable example" of coordination between air and sea power.

Balancing the loss of the Hood against the Bismarck, the exchange was "of immense advantage to us," he said, since it leaves the Reich only three capital ships, two of which would have come out from Brest to aid the Bismarck "if they hadn't been knocked about so badly" by British bombers.

Of the third remaining Nazi battleship, the new Tirpitz, he said, "We hope it comes out."

Bill Will Give McCarran Aide, Leader Predicts

When an appropriations subcommittee meets Monday to put the finishing touches on the legislative appropriation bill it will include an item to hire an expert assistant for Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee, it was predicted last night.

McCarran has made his continued acceptance of the committee post dependent upon Senate approval of an assistant with expert knowledge of municipal administration. McCarran said he believed the job should pay $6,000 a year.

A member of the legislative subcommittee declared he was confident that body will do "what the Senator wants."

Pepper's Move For Confidence Vote a Failure

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, yesterday failed to obtain consideration of a resolution approving President Roosevelt's address of Tuesday night and expressing "full confidence" in the Chief Executive.

The Florida New Dealer, a militant advocate of a more active war role for the United States, surprised both supporters and foes of Administration foreign policy by seeking unanimous consent for action on a resolution reading:

"Being informed of the forthright and straight-forward address by the President on May 27, it is the sense of the Senate that the President was right and deserves the full confidence of the Congress and the country."

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, opposed consideration of the resolution on the ground that it would "precipitate an unnecessary and a most regrettable debate" and "promote no spirit of national unity."

Isolationists Silent

"It could be productive of no good," said George, who has piloted through the Senate all the Administration's foreign policy legislation of the present session.

Senate isolationists sat silent while Pepper, replying to George, asserted that the argument of the Foreign Relations Committee chairman amounted to an admission that "there is such disunity in the Senate on the fundamental truths uttered in the President's address that we dare not consider this resolution of confidence."

"If that is so," Pepper cried, "the people of this country and of the world are entitled to know it. The sooner we tell the world, the less the danger of their disappointment, the less danger of some tragedy in the wake of such denial."

Pepper said individual members of Congress "are interpreting the President's speech this way and that way and the heart is being eaten out of it. The people deserve to know whether Congress is back of the President or whether Congress is torn by disunity."

The Pepper resolution now "lies on the table" and can be called up by unanimous consent, but its sponsor did not indicate whether he would attempt again to bring it onto the floor when the Senate convenes next week.

"It would lose most of its value if it were approved days after the President's speech," he told reporters. "Everybody is asking the country to rally around the President. I thought it wasn't too much to ask Congress to do a little rallying around."

U. S. Will Train British Pilots At the Rate of 8,000 a Year

The British-aid program moved into a new phase yesterday as the War Department announced plans for training 8,000 Britons annually as combat fliers.

First of the fledgling airmen will enter Army flying schools a week from tomorrow for a 30-week course leading to a fighter or bomber pilot's wings. The group of 550 will be followed by a like number every five weeks, while smaller groups will be trained in American civil flying schools.

In another defense development, President Roosevelt asked Congress to appropriate an additional $114,091,080 for the Navy for the balance of the current fiscal year.

Army officials, at the same time, predicted that the War Department would soon ask Congress for authority to keep the National Guard in active service after a year of training.

Although no decision has been reached in the matter, most officers believe that the declaration of an unlimited emergency made it virtually certain that the Guard would not be demobilized. The War Department has said that a decision on the matter will be made next month and will depend upon world conditions.

The Navy funds' request included $50,015,000 for additional shore facilities, including a new $14,990,000 Marine Corps air base at Neuse River, N. C.; a $6,375,000 lighter-than-air base at Elizabeth City, N. C., and $2,000,000 for strengthening the new operating base at Newport, R. I.

Secretary Stimson, in announcing the R. A. F. training program, said it can be handled "without interfering at all" with the Army Air Corps' plan to step up pilot training to 30,000 fliers a year. Army flight training is well ahead of warplane deliveries, he explained.

The War Department chief also declared, in a formal statement, that there will be a shortage of military equipment for the large scale war games now getting underway which will last through the fall.

Every man has a rifle, and there are enough .30-caliber machine guns for all units and almost a 100 percent complement of light tanks and 81-millimeter mortars, he said. Major shortages are in antitank guns, antiaircraft weapons, field artillery 105's and 155's, motorcycles and the larger trucks, it was said.

Stimson said, however, that before the end of the calendar year many of these shortages will have been filled. He also disclosed that the present manpower strength of the Army is 83,000 officers and 1,262,000 men, including 507,000 selectees.

The British pilot-training program is in three phases. Four thousand men from England or the empire will be trained annually in the army schools, 3,000 a year in British courses to be set up in civilian schools in the United States, while 1,000 will be trained as aerial navigators at the Pan-American School at Miami.

Britain will pay for the transportation, pay, clothing, subsistence and lodging of her students, while the other costs will be paid for under the lend-lease program.

Adm. Woodward Recalled to Duty

Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, who was retired from the Navy April 1 when he reached the 64-year age limit after more than 40 years of service, was recalled yesterday.

The admiral was appointed as the Navy's representative on the Board for Civilian Defense, and appointed to the Office of Civilian Defense created by President Roosevelt last week.

Admiral Woodward, who graduated from Annapolis in the class of 1899, was commandant of the Third Naval District and of the New York Navy Yard when he retired.

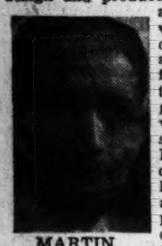
Martin Tells Goal of U. S. Plane Builders

(Editor's note: Glenn L. Martin, creator of some of the world's fastest airplanes, turned from World War planes to transoceanic clippers and then to fast land bombers and Navy patrol bombers. In this story he outlines the problem of air rearmament in terms of design. Tomorrow, Maj. R. H. Fleet says this Nation can't be topped in bomber output.)

By Glenn L. Martin

President the Glenn L. Martin Co.

Baltimore, Mal 29 (The Special News Service).—To keep ahead of our potential enemies in the air, we American aircraft manufacturers are being called upon to design and produce airplanes that are at once invulnerable and overwhelming. I am not being funny. That is the dead-serious goal toward which we must strive constantly — using for comparatives the known striking and defensive powers of the other fellow's equipment.



MARTIN

Let's put it another way. If we can produce in quantities airplanes of all classes that are faster and more heavily and intelligently armed and protected against the bullets of possible enemies, then we will enjoy superiority. But if we fail in any one of these departments, our superiority is subject to dispute.

Of course, the entire burden does not fall on the shoulders of the manufacturers; it is shared by the Army and Navy, whose trained observers are ceaselessly appraising the world's warplanes. It is through their findings that we get our directives from the armed services, whose materiel officers tell us what our new airplanes must do. It is up to us to design and build them to these requirements.

America has been singularly fortunated in one respect. We have the tactical experience of warring nation to guide us in our rearmament effort. We know the strength and weakness of current combat types; we can avoid the mistakes that heretofore have been so costly.

Factors Almost Canceled

World War II was young when we recognized glaring weaknesses in the combat planes of both of the chief contenders. The German craft were faster, but they were weak in their defenses. The British ships were slower, but they had more guns, greater fire power. Superior numbers on the one side and superior quality of men and machines on the other again were almost cancelling factors.

American military airplanes, then, must be faster than the German types and more heavily defended than the British, if they are to be the best. Too, allowances must be made for forthcoming improvements of foreign aircraft, not to mention some improvements of our own. These are the basic considerations in our directives from the Army and Navy.

The United States has held one tremendous advantage. At the time war flamed in Europe, we had high-powered engines already in production, while neither Britain nor Germany had anything much over 1,200 horsepower. In addition, we already had even higher powered engines past the design stage and almost ready for production, and our engines quickly proved their greater reliability and longer service.

Designed for Long Flights

A development of great importance in this country also has been the long-range flying boat patrol bomber type. With defensive power enormously increased, these ships are designed for long service away from their bases. Their great range and their speed allow them to cover vast areas of ocean, both independently and in cooperation with the surface fleets. Their mission is to contact the enemy at far greater distances than those feasible with surface vessels; to strike heavy bomb or depth charge blows in force and to guide the surface ships in for mop-up work.

Of course, there are other things to be considered in the comparative values of airplanes. Maneuverability is a factor. Durability is another. Bomb-sights may give one air force an important edge over another. Certain other equipment may add greatly to operational efficiency. A sufficient distribution of types counts heavily.

But, in the main, the ability of an airplane to defend itself from certain onslaught is the critical consideration.

Element of Surprise

That has been true of all fighting machines, and throughout the history of warfare it has been a game of ring-around-rosy development of powerful weapons of offense on one side and the building of defenses against them on the other. The element of surprise is important in giving effect to these improvements, for any new war machine is approached with caution until its abilities are known.

Finally, America has enjoyed comparative serenity in its aircraft development. Uninvolved, as yet, in actual strife, our industry has been able to stand aloof from the struggle and look with a clear eye upon the progress of combatants. No longer are we building peacetime military craft; our current production types embrace all of the advances of the world's air armies and navies.

Moreover, we are looking ahead, bringing into play the creative genius and production ability for which our country is famous—building new weapons against which others may have to set up defenses.

3 D. C. Robbers Get Prison Terms

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough imposed 5-to-15-year prison sentences on three members of a holdup gang in the District Court yesterday.

Given the limit for robbery were Frank J. Kane, 23, Bernard W. Rhine, 23, and Theophil Tiverney, 27. All pleaded guilty, as did a fourth member of the gang, Richard K. Oliver, 21. Assistant District Attorney George McNeil said Oliver will be sentenced Monday.

Tiverney admitted nine robberies, and was sentenced for each, but the sentences were made concurrent.

Dies Group Exposes C. I. O. Aide as Former Communist

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

The head of a C. I. O. union in the North American Aviation Co.'s plant at Inglewood, Calif., where 11,000 men working on bombers are threatening to strike, was dramatically exposed yesterday as a one-time registered Communist.

He is Elmer J. Freitag, and he himself unwittingly caused the disclosure by taking part in a noisy, unscheduled quarrel during a luncheon recess of the Dies Committee.

Freitag is president of an aircraft division local of the United Automobile Workers of America, C. I. O., in the North American Co. plant at Inglewood. He is here in Washington to appear before the Defense Mediation Board, which will choose a panel Monday to negotiate the wage dispute which threatens to tie up the plant.

Freitag and other C. I. O. representatives were in the audience at the Dies Committee hearing and heard Hugh Ben Inzer, himself former president of a C. I. O. local, tell of a widespread revolt against Communist leaders on the West Coast, and also tell how these Communists were working "hand in hand" with German Bund leaders to obstruct the defense program.

Protested Testimony

When the recess was called, Freitag and two of his colleagues hurried back behind the committee table and confronted Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California. They protested Inzer's testimony. They insisted that they were 100 per cent Americans. Freitag vehemently denounced the Communist tag which he said Inzer had hung on the North American workers.

In the tumult, Dr. James B. Matthews, research chief for the Dies Committee, handed Representative Voorhis a telegram from Los Angeles. The message, a routine one, had come in a half hour before from the committee's West Coast investigator. It said that Freitag had registered as a Communist Party voter in the election of 1938.

Representative Voorhis turned to Freitag.

"You are a registered Communist, aren't you?" he asked.

"Not that I know of," said Freitag, who apparently didn't know what was in the telegram.

Dr. Matthews then asked Freitag if he would be willing to go before the committee and deny under oath that he was a registered Communist.

"You've got me," said Freitag.

Grilled on Stand

Richard K. Franklin, an anti-Communist worker from Los Angeles, who had taken part in the recess argument, sarcastically told Freitag that he ought to go back to his hotel and get "new instructions."

At the afternoon session, Freitag was called as a witness by Acting Chairman Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama.

"On the eighth day of January, 1938, did you register as a member of the Communist Party?" Starns asked.

"I would say that I am not a member of the party," Freitag answered.

"Did you register as a Communist voter on January 8, 1938," Starnes persisted.

"Yes," Freitag said, "but after about two months I changed my affiliation to the Progressive Party."

Lew Michener, C. I. O. regional director in Los Angeles, who was accused by other witnesses of consorting with Communists and seeking to put down the revolt against them, told the committee that he would be glad to testify as "a patriotic American." He probably will be called early next week, the committee having recessed yesterday until further notice.

R. T. Frankensteen and other C. I. O. officials charged at the Capitol that the Dies Committee, in the Freitag case, was trying to embarrass the negotiations before the Defense Mediation Board in the North American case.

The testimony of Inzer, Franklin and other West Coast workers, in which they told how the C. I. O. rank and file out there was in revolt against Communist leaders, greatly interested the committee.

"It looks as if we are going to have a real American labor movement, not one dominated by Communists," Starnes observed. "These fellows who have testified have a hard job ahead of them, and they deserve every encouragement."

Former Navy Man

Inzer, a former Navy man, told how he resigned as president of the C. I. O. local in the General Motors plant at Southgate, Calif., so that he could fight the Communists who, he said, dominated the C. I. O. on the West Coast. He continues to work in the plant, but heads the Vigilant American Committee, composed of C. I. O. workers.

His testimony marked the first time that the committee had heard of actual collaboration between Communists and German Bund leaders. Inzer told how, after he had been elected president of his local, he was summoned to a meeting at C. I. O. regional headquarters in Los Angeles.

Present at this meeting, he said, were Michener, the regional chief; Wyndham Mortimer, described by Earl Browder as "close to us"; Pettis Perry, a colored man who has run for office on the Communist ticket, and Hans Diebel, a German-American Bund leader, who runs the Aryan Bookstore in Los Angeles, and who has been denied American citizenship.

Inzer quoted Michener as saying that it was important that all U. A. W. leaders get together and cooperate in case there was a general strike on the West Coast. He said that Michener, after making a statement, would turn to Perry and Diebel, and they would nod their approval.

Printed Pamphlet

Inzer further quoted Minchener as saying that Diebel would "cooperate with us" by printing the necessary literature in the case of a strike, and pointed out that he had been printing a pamphlet entitled "The Yanks Are Not Coming."

Inzer said he was "shocked," and after making an investigation tried to arouse the rank and file workers. He and like-minded workers, he said, formed the Vigilant American Committee.

"I am absolutely for organized labor," he said, "and I am for the C. I. O. 100 per cent. But I do think it ought to be controlled by Americans, and not subversive and racketeering elements.

Oscar C. Crozier, of San Gabriel, Calif., who organized the U. A. W. local in the Studebaker plant, joined with Fred Bailey, Edward Bolling and the others in agreeing that the Communists had a powerful grip on the C. I. O. on the West Coast, but that rank and file of members were loyal Americans eager to build up America's defenses.

Auhagen Pleads Not Guilty To Breaking Propagandist Law

Dr. Frederich Ernst Auhagen, alleged Nazi propagandist, pleaded not guilty to charges of failing to register as an alien propagandist with the State Department yesterday and his trial in the District Court was set for June 23.

Dr. Auhagen entered his plea after Justice F. Dickinson Letts overruled a demurrer to the indictment filed for him by Attorneys Leo A. Rover and Roger Robb.

Meanwhile, Justice James M. Proctor overruled demurrers to similar charges filed for Transocean News Service, Manfred Zapp, manager, and Guenther Tonn, his aide.

The first trial in the United States for failure to register as an alien propagandist is scheduled before Justice Letts for June 9. Accused are Raphael Rush, Morris Liskin and Norman Weinberg, alleged associates in a Soviet propaganda agency known as Bookniga Corporation. Liskin pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to register the company as a propagandist but faces trial with the others on a charge of conspiracy to evade the registration law.

Rush and Weinberg protested yesterday against being forced to stand trial in company with Liskin, claiming that his plea of guilty would be used against him and could hardly fail to prejudice their position before a jury. They asked for a severance, in a petition filed with the District court clerk.

Legion to Aid In 2d D. C. Registration

The second draft registration on July 1 will be handled exclusively by local draft boards throughout the country without aid from voluntary workers, National Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

Despite this order, 400 volunteer members of the American Legion in Washington will do most of the actual registration work, District Draft headquarters said, but responsibility for the job will rest with the individual local boards.

Efforts of the Legion will relieve pressure on members of local boards who are now working at top speed to classify remaining registrants in their areas in line with recent orders from national headquarters, it was said.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, said yesterday that while we are grateful for the "whole-hearted" assistance of volunteers outside the Selective Service system in the first draft registration, this time we are certain local boards will be able to conduct the registration without their assistance.

Meanwhile, yesterday, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District Draft Director, issued a fatherly message to all selectees awaiting induction. He made eight suggestions so that their "road may be made smoother." They were:

1. "Go to it cheerfully, soberly, and alertly."
2. If you are employed remind your employer there is a "chance" you may be rejected at the induction center. Ask him to hold your job for you until you are certain of induction.
3. If you are unemployed, register with your State Employment Service before you leave. It will help you get a job when your national task is completed.
4. "Travel light." Take a small bag with a few clean clothes. Leave jewelry, large sums of money and other valuables at home, for they are easily lost. Take a little spending money to tide you over until your first pay day.
5. Leave your automobile or motorcycle at home.
6. Keep in touch with your friends and family, but ask them not to write until you have a definite and complete address in the Army.
7. When you go to the classifier at the reception center think back over all the jobs you have had and exactly what you yourself did in them. Give all the information asked for honestly and completely.
8. Go to the Army with an open mind and forget any ideas which you now have unless you know they are correct.

"Your country needs your help," said Gen. Cox. "With your assistance all of us will achieve our common goal—the maintenance of the free heritage to which we were born."

bers of the G. A. R., who will ride in automobiles at the head of the procession. Units of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, in full battle array, will be among the marchers. Included in the military sections of the parade will be a composite battery from the Twelfth Infantry from Arlington Cantonment, commanded by Capt. John D. Lawler, which will include Companies A, C, K (rifle) and M (heavy weapons). One platoon of the antitank company, the Third Cavalry Band, Troop E of the Third Cavalry, one section of the machine-gun troop and one section with .50-caliber machine guns of the special weapons troop, Third Cavalry, all commanded by Lieut. R. Hosmer, and all of Arlington Cantonment, will take part.

Grand marshal of the parade will be Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, director of Washington's Selective Service system. He will be assisted by William Leo Collins, of the District American Legion, and C. Francis McCarthy, chef de gare of the Forty and Eight Society.

The watergate will be the scene of a picturesque Memorial Day tribute when members of the Fleet Reserve Association, Branch No. 4, hold their annual services for sailors who died in action. Rear Admiral George C. Pettingill, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, will deliver the memorial address, and the floral anchor will be floated on the Potomac while the boatswain sounds his pipe.

Sailors who died in the Spanish-American War will be remembered in two ceremonies, sponsored by the United Spanish War Veterans. The first, at the tomb of Admiral George Dewey, in Washington Cathedral's Bethlehem Chapel, will begin at 9 a. m. this morning. The other tribute will be at the Maine mast in Arlington Cemetery at noon. Members of George Dewey Naval Camp, No. 7, U. S. W. V., will sponsor the latter rites, and Representative Martin Smith of Washington will speak.

At the National Cemetery at United States Soldiers Home, the annual memorial exercises will be held, beginning at 9 a. m., under the direction of Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, U. S. A., retired, governor of Soldiers Home. Representative Smith will be the principal speaker at this ceremony also.

Symbolic services at the Argonne Cross, Arlington, will commemorate the 30,000 American soldiers who lie buried in eight cemeteries of German-held France and Belgium. Instead of the usual rites, which, because of the war, can no longer be held at the cemeteries themselves, the American Legion is sponsoring the symbolic services. Eight crosses, representing the eight American graveyards in Flanders, have been erected for the ceremonies, which begin at 2:30 p. m.

British Take Town in Drive To Bagdad

By the Associated Press

Cairo, May 29.—British troops advancing on Bagdad over roads flooded by broken irrigation ditches today captured the Iraq village of Khanuqta, midway between Fallujah and the Iraq capital, it was reported by the R. A. F. The town is 17 miles from Bagdad.

Earlier the British said troops east of Fallujah captured one Iraq rebel officer and 92 other ranks.

[In Bagdad dispatches the Iraqi government claimed more than 350 British imperial troops were killed or wounded today in a fierce battle in western Iraq and in artillery bombardment of British positions in the Persian Gulf region.]

A small advance was registered by empire forces besieged for weeks at Tobruk, Libyan port, the Middle East general headquarters said. The British at Tobruk struck out to improve their position and caused Axis casualties without loss to themselves, it was said.

Patrol action was the sole activity in the Salum, Egypt, area, the British said, with the Axis troops making no attempt to extend their lines from positions covering Halfaya ("Hellfire") Pass, near Salum.

The British declared their patrols vigorously harassed the Axis around Salum.

In Ethiopia, patriot forces were reported to have surrounded Bako, in the lakes region.

Gruber Guilty Of Tapping Wires of SEC

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 29.—Jacob Gruber, former assistant general counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission in New York, was found guilty today by a jury on United States District Court of tapping and conspiring to tap the commission's wires between here and Chicago in a vain effort to obtain information in an SEC matter concerning a private client of his.

The jury deliberated three and a half hours before reaching a decision. Gruber, who conducted some of the SEC's most important investigations in this district from 1934 to 1938, faces a maximum jail sentence of 12 years and a fine of $20,000.

He was convicted on two counts charging him with violating the Federal Communications Act and on one count of conspiracy. After the verdict was announced, John L. Burling, assistant United States attorney, told Judge Robert A. Inch that it would take ten days to prepare a probation report on Gruber and sentencing was set for June 10. Elizabeth Miller, former chief telephone operator in the SEC's office here, who pleaded guilty before the trial, will also be sentenced at that time.

Miss Miller was accused of arranging the telephone system so that Gruber or his secretary, Fay Werthmann, could sit and listen in on a conversation between SEC officials.

Fay Werthmann was freed during the trial when the case against her was dismissed by Judge Inch on grounds of insufficient evidence.

Before he became an SEC counsel, Gruber was an assistant attorney general of New York. He remained at liberty today on bail of $1,000.

Davis Jury Disagrees, Is Discharged

Philadelphia, May 29 (U.P.).—A Federal court jury deliberating the fate of J. Warren Davis, once the Nation's highest jurist outside the United States Supreme Court, who was charged with selling justice to William Fox, bankrupt motion picture magnate, was discharged tonight when it failed to agree.

The jury had started deliberating at 3:17 p. m. and reported to Judge Robert N. Pollard, of Virginia, assigned to the case by the United States Supreme Court, at 10:17 p. m. that it was hopelessly deadlocked.

Davis, retired United States Circuit Court of Appeals judge; Fox, and Morgan S. Kaufman, Scranton attorney, were indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States.

Fox pleaded guilty and turned Government witness. The Government charged that Davis, through Kaufman, received $27,500 in return for favorable decisions in Fox's tangled bankruptcy affairs.

Maximum penalty on the charges is two years imprisonment, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Bern, Switzerland, May 29.—What appeared to be a preparation for the implementing of Vichy's promise to the Germans to reconquer De Gaullist West African territory, got under way early this week with the arrival in Dakar of the first of several convoys of men and materials in French transports, according to information received here tonight.

The material is described as consisting of heavy and light field artillery, some armored cars and a few tanks—all of which would appear to have been returned to the Vichy French by the occupying authorities, since all material in this category had to be surrendered under the armistice terms.

Considerable quantities of gasoline are also reported to have arrived and several squadrons of French planes are expected to arrive from Morocco before the middle of next week.

When questioned about the authenticity of this information, semi-official French circles here either denied the report flatly or referred to "possible natural defensive measures being taken there in view of developments in the eastern Mediterranean."

De Gaullist sources here implied awareness of this latest development and intimated it had been going on for some time. According to information in their possession, the French have strengthened the Dakar garrison by more than 5,000 troops within the last month and the convoy mentioned above was understood to be the sixteenth to arrive in that port during that period.

Some indication of the haste with which this reinforcement is being carried out under difficult circumstances may be gathered from a further statement that the boats all arrive and leave in the space of less than 12 hours.

Police, Firemen's Pay Rise Bill Delayed to June 9

Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee, announced yesterday postponement of the regular Monday committee meeting to June 9, when the police and fire pay increase bill will be the first order of business.

Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, said so many committee members expect to be out of the city Monday that he doubted he would be able to assemble a quorum.

The chairman is scheduled to give the commencement address at Storer College, Harpers Ferry, W. Va., at 10 a. m. Monday, to accompany Federal Security Administrator Charles A. Taft to graduation exercises at Elkins Monday afternoon and to address the national convention of the National Aeronautical Association at Louisville Tuesday.

Shipyard Pickets Defy Demand Of Senators to Return to Jobs

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Picket lines continued about San Francisco shipyards yesterday despite demands from the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that the striking machinists comply with President Roosevelt's no-defense-strike policy.

Both the committee and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor called upon the strikers to return to work and settle the dispute by arbitration, but word from the West Coast gave little indication of an end to the stoppage holding up $500,000,000 in ship construction.

The Associated Press reported from San Francisco that E. F. Dillon and Harry Hook, business agents for the striking A. F. of L. machinists, said on their return from testifying before the committee here that they would not recommend a return to work.

However, a member of the Alameda County A. F. of L. Building and Trades Council said an increasing number of other A. F. of L. workers returning to work through the picket lines indicated the President's Tuesday night speech was affecting the strike and predicted it would soon be broken. The council opposed the walkout.

On the Senate floor here, Chairman Truman of the Defense Investigating Committee declared that after its investigation of the strike the group believes that the "desperate need" of the United States for ships ought not be used by the union to obtain closed shops.

"The Senate committee believes that the machinists of San Francisco are loyal Americans," he said, "and that they will give heed to the unlimited emergency proclaimed by the President and to the request of the President that the vital defense program of the Nation be not impeded by the stoppage of work on defense projects."

The Associated Press reported that earlier in the day Dillon had wired the strikers that he and Hook had been "accorded brutal treatment" by the Senate committee when they appeared before them Wednesday and that he had urged them to "hold your picket lines tight."

Last night, on their return to San Francisco, the two labor leaders were quoted as saying they would not recommend that the men go back to work. Dillon said that it was "entirely up to the boys," and Hook that "the end of the strike is just as far in the offing today as it was when we first went out" May 10.

Senator Truman said he was "perfectly disgusted" with the refusal of the union leaders to recommend that the men go back to work and arbitrate the strike, and said the committee will write each of the machinists as soon as their names and addresses are furnished, asking them to answer "yes or no" whether they will return to work.

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, who was active in labor circles before entering Congress, declared that while the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. is also at fault, continuance of the strike was "without reason or sense." Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, also urged that the men return to work.

Henderson Upholds Price Ceiling Powers

By the Associated Press

Brushing aside Senatorial protests of "socialism" and "illegal authority," Leon Henderson testified yesterday that the Administration held sweeping powers to fix "price ceilings" and was determined to use them.

The rotund economist selected by President Roosevelt to direct the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply told the Senate Agriculture Committee that legal authority to fix maximum prices came from powers "inherent in the office of President."

"We don't want the feeling that we are being officious, walking around with a club, or trying to bring about reforms," he testified. "We are trying to avoid disastrous inflation through price spiraling."

Henderson testified that his agency could fix maximum prices for everything from farm products to steel "if these prices got out of line" and intended to do that unless Congress expressly said no.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina); Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and others openly questioned authority of Henderson, his agency, or the President to fix prices without express authorization from Congress.

Challenged by Taft

"There is not a shadow of authority for this, Senator Taft said.

Henderson recalled similar price-fixing powers exercised during the last World War, and pointed out that Congress already had voted authority to commandeer factories for national defense under the Selective Service bill.

Certainly if the Government can seize plants, the witness argued, it has the power to fix price maximums on essential products.

Smith charged that this was "socialism;" that soon "Washington will control everything from marriage licenses to babies."

"If these seem arbitary, nonstatutory, and socialistic then some of the finest people who did this during the last war are in that class," Henderson said.

Lucas Backs Plan

Support for the price-fixing moves came from Senator Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, who told Henderson that if speculators tried to skyrocket prices for "corn, hogs or any other products of my section I want you to stop it."

Much of the criticism centered on Henderson's schedule fixing a ceiling on combed cotton yarn prices at 42 cents a pound for a standard grade that sold for 31 cents last fall and then jumped to 52 cents this month.

Southern Senators asserted that yarn prices were directly related to what farmers received for their raw cotton and that Henderson's agency was attempting to "freeze" farm prices far below fair exchange levels.

Henderson bluntly denied this, saying the high yarn price benefited only "speculators and jobbers."

Bill Allowing Seizure of Foreign Ships Sent to White House

By the Associated Press

The Senate approved and sent to the White House yesterday legislation permitting the Government to take over more than 80 foreign ships now lying idle in American harbors.

The measure, a compromise between the original Senate and House versions, was approved by the House earlier this week.

Under the bill, the Government may take over foreign ships by purchase, requisition or charter.

The bill provides that, except by purchase, no ships can be acquired which actually were owned by foreign governments at the outbreak of the war, September 3, 1939. The Senate Commerce Committee was advised that only two small vessels in American waters fall into this category.

Great Britain may provisionally waive self-proclaimed rights to seize enemy ships transferred to neutral flags, it was learned authoritatively yesterday, opening the way for Western Hemisphere republics to operate freely the 200-odd foreign merchantmen lying idle in their ports.

President Roosevelt's reaffirmation of the doctrine of freedom of the seas, although primarily directed against any Axis plans to dominate the oceans, was expected in informed quarters here to exert great influence on Britain's final decision.

As a belligerent, Britain has claimed the right to capture or sink all vessels flying the flags of Germany, Italy and Axis-conquered or dominated countries, including any such vessels which may have been sold or transferred to neutral nations.

The 21 American republics have taken the contrary position that foreign flag ships immobilized in American ports may be taken over and operated to promote the trade, peace and security of the Western Hemisphere.

A tentative working agreement between Britain and Chile i sexpected to be announced in the immediate future, it was learned, by which five Danish ships, seized by Chile, would be permitted to make one round-trip to United States ports pending further diplomatic efforts to achieve a final settlement of a problem created by the conflicting American and British claims.

There are at least 15 other Danish vessels—nine in Argentina, five in Brazil and one in Nruguay—which could not be operated, even if taken over by those republics, under the present British policy.

Britain's relinquishment of belligerent rights involving ships acquired by the American republics by seizure, purchase or charter would greatly smooth the way of the inter-American financial and economic advisory committee, now seeking agreement on a unified hemisphere policy on the shipping question.

OPM Places Steel Under Priority Rule

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Less than 24 hours after a Presidential report forecast prospective deficits in steel this year, the OPM acknowledged that the shortages were already in evidence and accordingly placed steel under a priority control to guarantee deliveries for defense purposes.

The order, which applies to the largest industry yet to be brought under the scope of priority rulings, was issued by OPM Priorities Director E. R. Stettinius, jr.

He declared that "the overall demand for steel, including defense and civilian demand, is greater than the apparent capacity to make deliveries of certain types of steel and steel products promptly."

The regulations he promulgated are more flexible and less formal than blanket, mandatory rules applying to several other materials under a priority status, but they are considered to "give defense needs and essential civilian needs first call on all forms of steel."

They provide that any customer who has been unable to obtain satisfactory placing or delivery of his steel orders can make a sworn statement of his difficulties to the priorities division and may be required to explain why his order was rejected or deferred.

"Upon the basis of this information," Stettinius said, "the division will take whatever priority action is necessary to fill defense and essential nondefense needs for steel promptly."

Although other priority actions have been applied to the industry, such as placing iron and steel products on the critical list and subjecting them to inventory control, yesterday's step is the most direct and unequivocal.

It was promulgated following a report on the industry presented to President Roosevelt on Wednesday by Gano Dunn, special OPM engineer and consultant. The study revised estimates made by Dunn in February that steel capacity was adequate for all needs, military, British and civilian, and declared instead that there would be a deficit this year, growing larger in 1942.

Observers believed yesterday that the priority order would be applied most frequently at first to special steel forms—probably structural shapes and plates—where delivery problems have been most marked.

If the deficits intensify in line with the forecasts of the Dunn report, however, the priority regulations are expected to have wider application.

Army Calls 2 Nurses

Two Reserve Army nurses from Emergency Hospital have been ordered to one year of active duty, the War Department announced yesterday. They are Second Lieut. Mary Grimsley Clement and Second Lieut. Winifred Coleman. Both will report on June 1 to Fort Benning, Ga.

Mediation Board Takes Steps To Apply Public Pressure

The National Defense Mediation Board took steps yesterday to apply its weapon of public recommendations—newly fortified with increased authority by President Roosevelt's Tuesday night speech—to end three labor disputes in defense industries.

A board spokesman announced that a resumption of meetings in the soft coal dispute was scheduled for Wednesday, in the hope that the "rest" over the weekend might facilitate acceptance of the board's recommendations by the disputing C. I. O. United Mine Workers and the operators of Southern mines.

At that time, it was believed, unless agreement is reached the board will make public its proposal for settling the dispute, which threatens a recurrence of the April soft coal strike of 400,000 miners.

A few hours earlier, board vice chairman William H. Davis implied that the board's proposals to end the strike of 12,000 loggers and lumber mill workers in the Puget Sound area had taken on the status of "recommendations" and, in the light of the President's speech, should be accepted by "loyal citizens."

Davis' comment was made in a press conference at which he made public a telegram sent the strikers by Board Chairman Clarence A. Dykstra after the workers announced their refusal to accept the board's suggested settlement of their three-weeks-old stoppage. Dykstra's telegram cited the President's declaration of a national emergency and asked the workers, "as patriotic citizens," to reconsider their decision and thus "give precedence to the needs of the Nation."

Meantime, a third board panel, seeking to settle a dispute among employes and management of the E. W. Bliss Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Toledo, Ohio, announced that it had failed to secure a negotiated agreement and would appoint a special investigator to fully determine the facts, on the basis of which public recommendations would be made.

The company holds $30,000,000 of defense orders for torpedoes and heavy machinery and employs 1,500 workers. The C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, seeking reclassification of wage rates and employment categories, agreed to defer a threatened strike at the board's request.

The Seattle area loggers dispute, it was believed, will supply the first test of the acceptance of board recommendations in line with President Roosevelt's declaration Tuesday night.

Recalls President's Words

Davis told his press conference, "You will recall President Roosevelt said in his speech that recommendations of the Mediation Board should be accepted. I assume he meant what he said."

On May 27, the board proposed a settlement of the strike, which involves the C. I. O. International Woodworkers of America, on the basis of temporary wage increases and vacation allowances. In addition, it suggested creation of a commission to investigate the entire West Coast fir industry, with the proviso that future wage and monetary adjustments made in the light of the findings be retroactive.

Employers accepted the proposal but unionists recently voted to reject it.

Dykstra's wire to the strikers said in part:

"The President of the United States in his proclamation of May 27 proclaimed the existence of an unlimited national emergency which requires that the country's military, naval, air and civilian defense be made ready to repel any acts or threats of aggression directed toward any part of the Western Hemisphere. The President called upon all loyal citizens engaged in production for defense to give precedence to the needs of the Nation to the end that a system of government which makes private enterprise possible may survive. He called upon loyal workmen as well as employers to merge their lesser differences in the larger effort to insure the survival of the only kind of government which recognized the rights of labor or of capital. In the light of the President's proclamation and with a conviction that the present strike in the logging and lumbering industry in the State of Washington constitutes a serious threat to the success of the Nation's preparations for defense the National Defense Mediation Board recommends the acceptance of its proposal of May 23 and calls upon all the representatives of the striking employes as patriotic citizens to reconsider their decision and to accept the board's recommendation. The board requests that you bring this telegram to the personal attention of every one with power to vote upon the acceptance or rejection of the board's recommendation."

An intensive drive to bring the telegram to the attention of every striker, even as an appeal over the head of union leaders, was seen in board arrangements to have the telegram broadcast at frequent intervals by 18 radio stations in the Seattle area.

More Daylight, Please!

Secretary Ickes has contributed a valuable thought to the cause of defense by suggesting that daylight-saving time be adopted for the entire Nation. There are many arguments in favor of setting clocks ahead one hour during the summer months when no emergency confronts the people. All the routine arguments pro and con are now overshadowed, however, by the apparent need of conserving electric power. The Federal Power Commission forecasts a shortage of electric energy—"perhaps the most serious in history." Even if getting up an hour earlier in the morning would mean real inconvenience for many people, few would complain if that inconvenience can make possible the production of more aluminum for airplanes. Universal daylight-saving time is one of the minor adjustments likely to be necessary in the coming months to give the manufacture of defense weapons precedence over civilian comforts.

Counterrevolution

Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy's speech at Oglethorpe University pooh-poohing the possibility that America can be invaded provides the opportunity for saying that a Nazi invasion of the United States and of every other country has already started. Hitler is head and front of a revolution against the idea of liberty everywhere. It is simply squint-eyed of Mr. Kennedy to talk in terms of the impossibility of a military invasion when Hitler's tactics have been shown to exclude military invasions till every other kind of invasion has failed.

How successful Hitler has been in his ideological invasion of the United States is proved by our current discussions. The very stuff of our debates nowadays has to do with liberty as opposed to totalitarianism—with something we had taken for granted as opposed to a disruptive and competitive force introduced from without. Hitler, moreover, has invaded the United States with something more personal than an idea. Just as he searched out the Quislings in Norway, the Musserts in the Netherlands, the Lavals in France, so without a shadow of a doubt he is even now searching out the dissidents in the United States. They are the men upon whom he relies to undermine the resistance of the people in the "pluto-democratic" world upon which he has declared war. Their job is to promote discord and sabotage, to sow the seeds of suspicion and doubt, to kill our priceless unity. In this country Hitler's job is less difficult than some people imagine. We are still a melting pot, and in our midst are many Germans whose relatives are held in Germany almost in the role of hostages. Once a German, always a German—that is the Hitler motto. In the setup of Germany's government, indeed, all people of German blood, no matter where they live, are deemed to belong to a province of the Reich. The reason, doubtless, is that they are regarded as part of the Hitler army (now augmented by the active agents and bemused followers of Hitler's ally, Stalin) which is paving the way for the antilibertarian revolution of the world.

Mr. Kennedy's speech shows that he would let this revolution lap up most of the world, and make a fight against it only in Latin America. Is this, to say the least, prudent—especially as we know (and, if we don't, the Latin Americans will tell us) that Hitler would provide such a challenge for our Nation as surely as the night follows the day? But one has to have a passion for our free institutions in order to sense the danger to those institutions which has come from the spread of the antilibertarian Hitler, and to be prepared to take forehanded measures accordingly. Has Mr. Kennedy such passion? The question in any case would be valid. But it is particularly valid in view of this speech. For he said that in case of a Nazi victory we could settle down and "gear ourselves to an intelligent and self-contained national economy and still enjoy a fair degree of prosperity." The gearing, obviously, would have to be done by the Government. And thus at one swoop freedom of the individual to trade abroad would have to be eliminated, and so would freedom to travel. This is the way that all free economies have disappeared. The Germans themselves developed their own economic authoritarianism directly out of a decision to embark upon a closed economy. It began at the ports and worked back to the factory. A government which is trying to keep the country self-contained would have to police our factories in order to prevent overproduction. It would have to redirect our entire economy, especially in the area in which Mr. Kennedy was speaking, namely, the South.

A man who could talk so complacently about the disappearance of our free economy shows how far the Hitler invasion of our country has gone. If we prize our free institutions, we must now make them, as we did when we won them, the standard of a counterrevolution. The "sacred fire of our liberty," as George Washington called it, can never be kept burning if we follow Mr. Kennedy's example and stay on the sidelines while a modern Attila is trying to put it out.

Twilight In Crete

The capture by the Nazis yesterday of Suda Bay and Candia marks the beginning of the end of the epic struggle which has been raging in Crete for the past two weeks. The Nazis had hitherto been compelled to invade the island from the air, a circumstance which, despite its success, resulted in a terrific wastage of men and planes. They will now be able to send reinforcements of men and supplies by sea. For without Suda Bay the British fleet, which has blocked the sea route from the Greek mainland to Crete, no longer has any tenable base from which to operate. So while desperate fighting is reported to be still going on, it now appears to be merely a matter of time before the British and Greek troops, which have so valorously defended the island against steadily increasing odds, will have to give up the fight.

The loss of Crete will be a blow of very real magnitude to Great Britain and her allies. It was with this in mind, and with the full realization of the possible costs of doing so, that the order to defend Crete to the death was given. It proved an extremely costly venture. Three British cruisers and four destroyers were sent to the bottom and an untold number of other ships were damaged. These losses do not, as Berlin boasts, mean the elimination of British sea power from the eastern Mediterranean. But they are serious, nonetheless. Moreover, the concentration of so considerable a British naval force in the Crete area undoubtedly made it possible for the Axis to send additional reinforcements to Libya by sea, a possibility borne out by the capture of Helfaya Pass, near Solum, this week.

In control of Crete, Germany will have another base from which to bombard Alexandria and the Suez Canal and harass British shipping in the eastern Mediterranean. Furthermore, the Nazis are now in a position to attempt the capture of Cyprus, the fall of which would leave the path clear for the landing by sea of German troops in Syria. The capture of Crete may also have a determining effect on the attitude of Turkey, the southwestern coast of which is surrounded by islands in the grip of the Axis.

The Cretan venture was not inexpensive for Hitler, however. German losses of men and planes were tremendous, if eyewitness accounts are to be believed. And in view of the smallness of the Anglo-Greek garrison on the island, and its shortage of material, the tremendous effort which the Germans have had to make to win Crete bodes ill for any hope they may have had of a successful invasion of Great Britain. And it is Great Britain herself which must be conquered or strangled before a German triumph can be achieved.

Hospitals For D. C.

Hospital executives in Washington have shown commendable initiative in planning a comprehensive building program to supply the needs of this rapidly growing city. The mere fact that thousands of people are pouring into Washington every month suggests that more hospital beds will soon be an urgent necessity. No one hospital could hope to meet this potential demand by separate action. By acting as a group the hospitals should be able to provide adequate beds as well as much better accommodations than are now available.

Since each of these projects is a part of a master plan, it may be possible also to arrange the order under which construction of the various units will be undertaken. The executive committee of the Health Security Administration, which devised the plan, has already given a good deal of thought to its integration with the national defense program. That program has created heavy demands for steel and other building materials. If it should develop that materials are not available for all of the hospital replacement projects, doubtless some means of giving priority to the most urgent requirements could be worked out.

The plan is only indirectly related to the proposed construction of a District Health Center in the Northwest section of the city. But most of the arguments which can be made for new private hospitals can be repeated with increased emphasis for the construction of this public clinic. By assembling present disease prevention facilities in one building, and thus increasing their efficiency, the Health Department hopes to avoid the necessity of heavy investments in more public hospital facilities at present. Likewise it plans to relieve the burden on Gallinger Hospital by the acquisition of convalescent homes where patients can be cared for at one-half the cost of hospitalization. While plans for new private hospitals go forward, Congress certainly cannot afford to neglect public institutions of this sort.

How Much Steel?

Gano Dunn, senior consultant to the OPM's Production Division, has reported to the President that steel-making capacity this year will fall short of requirements by 1,400,000 tons and in 1942 by 6,400,000 tons. Three months ago he estimated that there would be a surplus this year of 10,100,000 tons and in 1942 of 2,100,000 tons. This ought to be sufficient indication of how hopeless it is to try to figure out consumption requirements with any degree of accuracy. As Mr. Dunn himself points out, there are now, and there will continue to be, unknown factors which militate against accurate prediction. The provisions of the lend-lease program and other developments of national policy have already invalidated Mr. Dunn's February estimates. Further defense requirements for Army, Navy, maritime and other purposes may increase the military share of steel capacity, now estimated at 25 per cent. And if the national income continues to rise, as it seems bound to, civilian requirements will go up, too.

One conclusion seems inescapable. For the time being, at least, the public will simply have to get along with fewer refrigerators and washing machines, fewer of the countless other common objects which are made of steel. Automobile production for 1942 has already been curtailed by 20 per cent, thus saving 4,800,000 tons of steel. It may be further curtailed. Moreover, E. R. Stettinius, director of priorities, yesterday announced an order designed to give preference in the delivery of steel to defense industries and essential civilian enterprises.

Curtailment of the civilian use of steel would not be necessary, of course, were it possible to expand capacity on short order. But it takes a year and a half to two years to build blast furnaces, finishing mills, and so on. To increase capacity by 10,000,000 tons would require at least two years, cost $1,250,000,000, divert 4,160,000 tons of steel from other purposes, and create a whole new set of bottlenecks. What clearer proof is needed that we must get along in the immediate future as best we can with present capacity of some 91,000,000 tons? That this is sizable, however, is indicated in the fact that it is nearly as much as the combined capacity of the rest of the world.

Ever since last fall there has been a considerable scrap going on between a few New Dealers, who have urged expansion of capacity to take care of all anticipated civilian requirements, and the American Iron and Steel Institute which, with an eye to the inevitable letdown after the emergency is over, has consistently advised against the dangers of overexpansion. There is no reconciling these opposing standpoints. About all that can be said is that if the country comes through the crisis with sufficient steel for defense (of this there seems no question), and if civilian use is not too severely restricted, can more be asked?

Pledge Of Loyalty

Leaders of the American Federation of Labor have responded in good spirit to President Roosevelt's no-strike policy. The President was candid and firm in telling employers and unions that the defense program must not be interrupted by labor disputes. Yet his appeal was essentially a bid for cooperation in the common cause of defending democracy. The executive council of the A. F. of L. has sensibly accepted it in that light and responded with a pledge of full support. To the President's demand that the conference table take the place of the picket line these A. F. of L. leaders replied: "We must do this. We can do this. And we pledge our good faith as Americans to the President that we will do it." That forthright and unstinted pledge may well become a model for other labor organizations to copy. For, though the A. F. of L. will undertake to discipline local unions violating this policy, strikes in defense industries can be abolished only if a similar stand is taken by an overwhelming majority of the rank and file. Some local unions in the C. I. O. as well as the A. F. of L. have already accepted the President's challenge. None should neglect to do so. Nor is it likely that any will neglect to do so if the members realize that democracy and all the institutions which it protects are on trial. It is heartening to note the A. F. of L.'s courageous acknowledgment of that fact. And it will be still more heartening when the spirit embodied in the A. F. of L. statement brings all defense-industry strikes to an end.

SEED OF CASSANDRA

The ostrich thrusts his fearful head in sand.
The crocodile shuts tight his troubled eyes.
The snail retreats within his shell and lies
Snug from the things he does not understand.
But we, we mortals, see the present spanned
By past and future, watch forbodings rise,
And lift the stubborn cry, "Fools' paradise,"
To those who hide them deep in burrowed land.

For though our armor be but nakedness
And weak, uncertain words our only sword,
A heart unbowed is bulwark in distress,
A sturdy pride stout weapon shall afford.
Because man stands erect in his duress,
His giant captors shrivel powerless.

For Bill Cunningham

Upon reading Bill Cunningham's article on our "Army of Nice Kids," I became so indignant that I am writing this immediately after setting The Post down. And in a white heat. So we are just a bunch of nice, soft, little kids, eh, Bill? And some day the Army is going to crack down and really slap us with the old discipline, eh? Where in tarnation have you been for the last few months, Mr. C.? Certainly in no Army camp.

If I had five bucks I would hunt up one of these swell shindigs that Mr. Cunningham attended to get some real low-down on the selectee Army. But there isn't five bucks in the whole barracks this close to payday, and besides it would cost me a few days in the stockade, as we are not allowed out of the camp without passes, and passes are hard to get. So I guess I will have to stay ignorant of what is going on in this "boy's Army." And after being in it for four months. What a shame!

I would give five bucks (after payday), though, to get that tough old soldier scribe down here in Virginia when we started out for the rifle range at 3 a. m. in full field packs to hike 3 miles before sunrise and "shoot it out" all day, coming back in the dusky hours, tired and dusty, to a plate of beans—and nothing else. No, not even coffee.

Or one chilly spring morning, when a fire call called us out in our scanties at 3 a. m.

Or any morning before inspection (yes, our outfit has inspection every morning, where formerly inspections only occurred on Saturday), when the barracks have to be spotless and the bunks smoother than possible. (Or else weekend K. P. for the delinquent party.)

Or—but what is the use of going to great lengths? I suggest that, rather than going to fancy dress balls at "a fiver" a crack to gather material for a survey of our new Army, Mr. Cunningham spend a week at any Army camp (pick one at random). Boy, will he be glad to drag himself back to his typewriter and rap out an apology to all draftees for attempting to put forth an expose without adequate research. But come incognito, Bill. Some selectee may have read your article and what would be forth coming would not be such a slap on the back as is reserved only for generals and colonels and such-like. As a matter of fact, the striking power of our new Army might be brought very quickly and forcibly to your attention, indeed.

No hard feelings, Soldier Bill, but for Heaven's sake, wake up. The "honeymoon," as you call it, was over long ago in the Army. We are trying to do a job of work out here. It is not a boy's job or a soft one, and every man here knows what the score is. It is about time you got wise, too.

Protests Cartoons

I wish to protest very strongly the tenor of cartoons on your editorial page, such as the one printed on Tuesday, May 27, entitled, "Who'll Stop This Beast?" The purposely inflammatory title and the vulgar sketch of an ape in Nazi helmet is repulsively suggestive of propaganda which aroused public sentiment to acquiesce to our entry into the last war.

After this war, when picture books of propaganda posters and cartoons are published, sketches of animals in German uniform will appear very obvious and crude even to the most naive.

Right Of Self-Defense

While America is officially and theoretically a Christian Nation and we are glad to have it so, there is danger that a misunderstanding of the peace principle may do immense harm, even if it does not utterly destroy us.

To neglect national defense is to invite disaster and ruin. The right of self-defense is most fundamental and practically every animal and plant in the world has been provided with some means of self-defense.

The flag of freedom will not long wave over a nation of cowards or deadheads. Meekness and forbearance are very commendable virtues, but they should never be confused with cowardice. Real Christians are always brave. Without bravery there can be no other virtue.

Christians can, should, and will fight when all efforts of reason and conciliation have failed. When a very devout Christian has been smitten on the right cheek, he will turn the left one also; but after that he should use the most effective means of defense at his disposal.

Americans should not stand idly by and placidly fold their arms while Hitler and his fanatical followers destroy all that is sacred or worth while in civilization.

We would be very happy to find a way to live in peace with all nations and all men; but our common sense ought to tell us that we cannot obtain any real or lasting peace by sending petitions to Congress or protests to the White House or by opposing the national defense program.

We want no traitors, no slackers, no cowards among us. Let us all be true Americans—sensible, loyal, and unafraid. L. C. FARRAR.

Italian Void

We are conscious of a void, not an aching void, but it is big. It is caused by the absence of Mussolini. Hence we have the same feeling one has after passing through a boiler factory then coming out into the silence; we miss the noise—where is Mussolini anyway? My recollection is he was heard from last a little more than a month ago about the time the German technicians (?) in Italy had separated thousands of Italians from their families, herded them into sealed cars and transported them to Germany as slave labor. Since that time the pictures of Mussolini have vanished from the press, his name does not appear in the dispatches and no references to him on the air. Indeed his spokesman is not quoted any more.

The Post with its superior, far-reaching facilities, can find out and let us know where he is, or should it be taken up with the Missing Persons Bureau?

Posy For H. I. Phillips

Please accept these few lines as an appreciation of H. I. Phillips' poem "Flanders Field—May 1941" in The Post of May 22. This stirring bit of poetry in my estimation shows Phillips at his very best and I consider myself very fortunate in not having missed it. You should congratulate yourself upon having such a fine feature writer and through the medium of your paper I tender him my unbounded admiration.

Of Pan-Islamism

In a recent edition of The Post I notice a story by Miss Clarissa Lorenz on "Moslem Federation." The thesis of this article was that there is a great drive towards Pan-Islamism, "began in Saudi Arabia" and spreading "over Egypt and Syria." In developing this point, Miss Lorenz then assumes the existence of this Pan-Islamic movement, and asks for a proper understanding of same.

It seems to me that Miss Lorenz is confusing two different movements when she presented her discussion of the situation in the Near and Middle East. She is confusing Pan-Arabism and Pan-Islamism. There is a great distinction between the two, as any student of that part of the world well knows. In the first place, to assume that Saudi Arabia can be the center of a Pan-Islamic movement is to forget that Ibn Saud is a Wahabite, and that Wahabism has not yet even secured a modicum of recognition from many of the other Moslem groups, such as the Sunnites and Shiites. Second, to consider Egypt as participating in a Pan-Islamic movement is to neglect the general trend of Egyptian history since the days of Lord Cromer and Mohammed Ali. At best, the Egyptians might listen to the idea of some loose federation, but certainly not participate actively in anything that would shift the center of activity to the Middle East proper. To include Syria in this Pan-Islamic setup is to also neglect the fact that the Syrian Christians would certainly resent being swallowed up in that movement.

When it comes to Pan-Arabism, the problem is just as fraught with difficulties. In the first place, no Egyptian likes to be called an "Arab;" certainly the Iraqi or Iranians don't want to be classified as such. Pan-Arabism, being more exclusive than Pan-Islamism, holds little chance for a liberal union so long as there is a conflict between the Hashimite family and that of Ibn Saud. Certainly, the Moslems of India would not want to be swallowed up in a Pan-Islamic movement that would destroy their Indian culture; just as certainly, they would have no place in a Pan-Arabic movement. There is much more than can be said on this problem, but Miss Lorenz's article, in the light of its confusion of terms, demanded emendation.

The Japanese Navy

Nations have the right, and the duty of self-defense! We are not sure of our position and our strength in the Pacific. But for the Japanese navy we could move our Pacific Fleet into the Atlantic and become sure of ourselves. Without the Oriental threat of Tokyo we could, and the chances are that we would, strike nazism the fatal blow.

Would not and could not our future be brighter if our Pacific Fleet and the British Pacific fleet based at Singapore were to suddenly converge upon the Japanese fleet and unceremoniously sink it without warning or fuss and feathers? Why does Japan need a navy if not for aggression?

The United States has the right and the duty of self-defense. There is no reason why we should not immediately proceed to remove this threat from the Pacific, and there is every reason why we should remove it. Let's remove the Japanese navy and put our full naval strength in the Atlantic.

The only law of the seas today is the law that the Axis makes and breaks at will. This is the ancient barbaric code of the survival of the fittest. We may not like to revert to it but we do not have any choice. We may accept the doctrine of Hitler's will or we may reject it. If we are to reject it, our most strategic stroke will be to sink the Japanese navy now!

The Post Impressionist

The Incredible Cleo

Newspaper and advertising photographers usually said she was the most satisfactory subject they had ever "shot." Feature writers described her as "a natural." And over the radio she was a "wow."

When she walked along the street—which wasn't very often—male observers turned to look after her, and feminine promenaders catalogued her clothes and her style before she had passed. Usually, however, she rode in cabs, or in well-appointed private cars, although never at her own expense.

She was popular with both men and women. The former liked her because she really understood them, and would listen to them virtually forever, without interrupting to say a thing herself. The latter liked her for the same basic reason. She rarely opened her mouth, and therefore her acquaintances could get twice as much off their minds as with other women.

Whenever she was called upon to say anything, it was always the right thing. If you told her it was a nice day, she would look around with wide and candid eyes and say, "Yes, indeed." Or if you told her it was a rotten day, she would always reply, "Yes, isn't it?" She would answer this way no matter what kind of weather it actually was, for obviously the weather itself could not get its feelings hurt.

This tendency gained her a reputation for considerable wit, because, whether there was a piece in the paper about her, or whether she had agreed to say something over the radio on behalf of some advertised product, she would always say what her interviewer or her sponsor wanted her to say.

Physically she was almost perfect, because she arose obediently every morning and went through setting-up exercises in rhythm with the music and directions that came out of the radio. And besides that she had been entered in any number of bathing beauty contests, in most of which she came out "Queen." Thus the sunlight had had a chance to inject its vitamins pretty well throughout her system.

Most of her diet, as well, was controlled by either the printed or spoken exhortations of experts who reported their findings about this or that pep-producing modern product through expensive advertising. Not infrequently they illustrated the effects of these products by reproducing in vivid coloring the appearance of the super-femme whom I am trying to describe.

The above circumstances were those that caused her eventually to be known throughout the length and breadth of the land, through panegyrics in magazine articles and Sunday newspaper supplements.

It was because of the unvarying rightness of everything she was and did and said that she eventually came to bear the respectful nickname, "The Incredible Cleo." It was composed on the principle that anyone so perfectly right in all respects was much too good to be thoroughly credible, and on a diminutive of her given name, Cleopatra. The latter was bestowed on her by her mother at birth, with who can say how much of prophetic insight.

Yet, although she carried this nickname, it was entirely one of admiration and wonder, and had no edge of satire. For to most women she represented a dream in which they saw their own essential selves. While it is almost certain that from time to time she engaged in various tasks in order to provide a living for herself, they became less humdrum because she pursued them. And by dint of what she was she was never forced to live or dress at any level below the luxuriously comfortable one that Americans have come to consider normal. So it turned out that when she became engaged, on his first year out of college, to an All-American football guard, with a wealthy Dad, everyone considered the matter predestined. The meeting occurred because the footballman, in order to show his Dad that he could make his own living, had taken work that summer at a seashore resort where they specialized in lifeguards who could play football. And Cleo showed up at the same place that year as "Miss America." It was as though two comets had crossed each other's orbits and merged. At least it was described that way in one Sunday feature article, and both Cleo and her husband were ever afterward to refer to the meeting in exactly those terms.

Since the wedding, the husband's father has died, leaving most of his estate—in trust—for his son, and there has been slightly less in the general press about either of them than there was before. There have not been any children, partly it is believed, because of the chance that they might depart from the nice point of development reached by the parents, and partly because someone once persuaded Cleo to sign a tract in favor of "controlled parenthood," and she has been loath to admit her control is less than perfect.

This has not prevented the couple, however, from establishing for themselves a perfect American family, for they have adopted both a boy and girl, and are giving them all the advantages of one of the best homes conceivable. It is said that the boy is being coached by a whole series of tutors in the use of all musical instruments, in the hope that some day he will be able to lead the best swing orchestra in the world. The girl is being instructed in nothing less than the conquest of ultimate beauty.

This last intention has been evolved not only in order to carry on the claims to fame of her foster mother but also to heighten them. Cleo summed it all up recently by what is believed to be the first spontaneous utterance to which she has ever given birth.

"Beauty is only skin deep," she said, eying her foster child fondly as the latter reclined in a chair with a mud-pack on her face. "But," she added, "who wants to go deeper?"

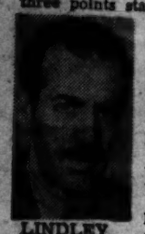
President's Speech

By Ernest K. Lindley

A Clear And Cold-Blooded Talk

IN COMPARING the President's latest fireside chat with his earlier speeches on foreign affairs, three points stand out:



LINDLEY

1. On Tuesday night he spoke more clearly and coldly in terms of American security than on any previous public occasion.

2. His view of the strategy of the war, and of our part in it, has not changed significantly in many months.

3. There is no real conflict between doing what is necessary to protect the Western Hemisphere and looking forward to the destruction of the Nazi system.

POINT No. 1 reflects the influence of hard-headed advisers who understand the hard-headed side of the American character. For several years Roosevelt's foreign policy has been planned and executed better than it has been explained. For several years denunciation and moralizing were the main ingredients of Administration speeches on foreign policy. The language of Wilson, the international lawyers, the League of Nations group of the post-war period, and those who hated naziism most volently because of its vicious internal policies, was the standard language of Administration speakers. This language appealed to a minority of American voters, but not to those who had declared their independence of Europe.

The President was more hard-headed than were many other spokesman for his Administration, but when he spoke he tended to adopt their verbiage.

This explains, in part, why the President and his entire Administration actually fell behind public opinion in the summer of 1940 after the fall of France. Many Americans, who wanted nothing more to do with wars on the continent of Europe, suddenly felt that their own security was menaced.

OVER A YEAR the President gradually has talked more and more in terms of American self-defense. This is due partly to the course of the war, which has come close to us, creating a clearer menace to our security. But it is due partly to the fact that in formulating his pronouncements he has listened less to extremists, such as Felix Frankfurter and William C. Bullitt, who have little knowledge of American psychology. Bit by bit the President has moved away from exhortation and denunciation to the kind of practical analysis which appeals to American citizens who long ago wrote off most of Europe as a mess which their forefathers had the good sense and courage to escape from, and are chiefly interested in the preservation of the United States and its way of life.

THE President's Tuesday night speech went farther than he has ever gone before in interpreting the war in terms of American security. It was designed to crystallize a maximum of support in this country and Latin America. It was intended to enlist the enthusiastic support of all except fifth columnists, conscientious objectors to war, and those who refuse to recognize the first lessons of either modern war or the old defensive principle of the balance of power.

The President's speech did not satisfy the "war party." It revealed that his conception of our part in the struggle has not changed in recent months. Our part is twofold: to be the arsenal and to share the risk of seeing that the products of the arsenal are delivered where they can be used. This, as he sees it, has become chiefly a naval and air war. The immediate stakes are not control of the continents of Europe and Asia, but control of the seas leading to other continents. The two continents of our primary concern are North and South America. Our first objective—which is purely defensive—is to keep the Nazis and their allies bottled up in Eurasia. To do this we must, in collaboration with the British, keep control of the seas.

TUESDAY NIGHT the President reconciled this purely defensive objective with the destruction of Nazi power:

"But if the Axis powers fail to gain control of the seas, then they are certainly defeated. Their dream of world domination will then go by the board; and the criminal leaders who started this war will suffer inevitable disaster.

"Both they and their people know this—and they and their people are afraid."

In short, the President believes the Axis system can be beaten without invasion of Europe or Asia. He believes that if it fails to break through the cordon of sea power it will know it is beaten. When it knows that it will begin to crack. And when it begins to crack it will crumble.

This is a logical analysis. It explains why the President can talk of defense of the Western Hemisphere and freedom of the seas in one breath, and the destruction of naziism and the four freedoms in the next breath. For the Axis, as he sees it, the alternatives are to win all or lose all. And he has no doubt which it will be.

George Spelvin, Jr.

THE SON of George Spelvin, American—not the one they call Dummy, who is a cheap and shiftless little cynic with a mind and spirit fed on scandal and swing, but the other one, who is a freshman at college—has written a letter to his mother, as follows:

"I received a very bedraggled letter from you yesterday. Have you taken to chewing your letters before you mail them, or am I to blame this maceration on the post-office?

"I have selected my room for next year and made out my schedule of courses. Our room is very nice, but there is much doubt that I shall ever occupy this room. The latest news is that all of us who have become 21 since the last draft by July 1 will be registered.

"There is considerable talk of war here. It is, in fact, the principal topic of conversation at table now, as never before. The question now is when rather than whether. So there is considerable bother in my mind. Of those who are taking the military science course only the best will be accepted into the advanced course, beginning junior year. I have only been doing D work in this course, so this obviously let me out. For this reason I have decided not to take the course next year, as the elementary course by itself is worth nothing, as far as the draft or any preferment in the Army itself goes.

"I do feel that I ought to get ahead of the game somehow, although at the moment I have no particular plans in mind. Some are taking up flying, but this I have rejected because I don't think my stomach would stand it, and planes have never interested me. Someone mentioned the Plattsburg course in the summer, but I know nothing about this. I have nothing definite in mind, you understand. I am just musing.

"As far as the summer job goes, I am not going to let it stand in the way of this thing. Few of us feel that we will get through more than next year, if that. New draft legislation and things coming up make it look as if our sophomore year will be our last, and although I try to make plans as if I were going to stay four years, personally, I don't think so.

"The whole thing is that I am really terribly confused. I don't know what to think and, because there's no surety of any kind of future, I can't plan. I am utterly unable to make up my mind and, all in all, it is a most unpleasant affair. I feel that I ought to spend my summer in something that would be really profitable, not in the way of experience for a future job or anything like that, but rather something that will get me ahead in the Army when I go.

"Senator Nye was up here the other day preaching the cause of peace. It was strange how angry his speech made me. The ostrich over again. He spent his time denouncing the New Deal and declaring that this was not our war and that we would be fools to make again the mistakes of 1917, as if the situation were exactly the same.

"I realize that this is a very chaotic sort of letter, but I am sort of chaotic myself these days. Really, I don't want any part of this beastly business. I want four years more of college. I want to read good books and get a good liberal education. I want to learn to appreciate the fine things of life. I am just beginning to realize what a storehouse there is in the past. It is as if I had just caught a glimpse through the keyhole of a great world. I am suddenly consumed with a great passion to learn. There are literally scores of courses I want to take. I want to study music, drama, art (from a comprehensive rather than a productive view), philosophy, other languages, psychology (spelled better than that, I trust). 'I want to write. I want to read, travel, do things. Dammit, I want to live. It must be the spring.

"I cannot imagine what has produced this very glum letter from one who was supposed to cheer you up. It may be the reaction to the war news in the papers and to many individual worries of my friends."

HAVING READ the letter, Mrs. Spelvin, American, went off to a corner and worried, but her other son, Dummy, said he was practically set. He is fixing to join a band touring the camps to cheer up the soldiers and get indispensable.

After The Speech

By Mark Sullivan

A Special Conference Is Called

THE SUM of President Roosevelt's positions about the war this week has left Washington puzzled. Certainly this is true of 218 newspaper correspondents, the unprecedented number who attended a special press conference the President called.

SULLIVAN

He had delivered his fireside talk Tuesday night. Wednesday forenoon there was a buzz of estimate about its effects. At noon Wednesday, Presidential Secretary Early sent out word that there would be a special press conference at 4 in the afternoon. That stirred the newspaper fraternity to alertness, for special press conferences are exceedingly rare (other than the regular ones on Tuesdays and Fridays.) The purpose of the special conferences—so the newspapermen understood Mr. Early to say—would be to clarify what the President had said about convoys in his speech the night before.

WHEN THE newspapermen crowded into Mr. Roosevelt's office, they found in him no sign of their own alertness. Neither in manner nor words, at any time during the conference, did Mr. Roosevelt show any sign that he had any particular reason for calling a special conference. Indeed, the conference began like one of those occasional regular ones when Mr. Roosevelt has nothing special to say and goes through the performance perfunctorily.

He began by saying, as is sometimes his formula for opening, that he had one or two matters to give out. His first was about a not very important control of exports to the Philippine Islands. The other was a report on steel manufacturing capacity, important but not exciting—certainly nothing to justify a special press conference.

THAT, apparently, was all Mr. Roosevelt had to say; so far as he initiated anything, the conference could have ended there. Only when a newspaper man introduced a question was there any allusion to Mr. Roosevelt's speech the night before. The question was about convoying. Mr. Roosevelt's answer was listless, merely a brief repetition of what he had said in the speech—there would not be any convoying, convoying is an outmoded technique anyhow. There were other questions about the speech, and answers equally listless. To several questions, Mr. Roosevelt's answer was that that is something Hitler would like to know. Upon a question about the allusion to labor and strikes in his speech, he became momentarily alert. But his alertness took the form of wariness—he had the manner of a man tip-toeing on eggs, and was careful to say nothing.

In the entire conference, there were but two points which gave the newspaper men anything to bite into, and both were brought out by persistent questioning. One was, Mr. Roosevelt does not intend to ask Congress to repeal the neutrality law. After Mr. Roosevelt had been led to say this, other questions brought up a dilemma. If the neutrality law is not to be repealed, and if there is to be no convoying—then how is Mr. Roosevelt going to insure our supplies getting to Britain, as he had said in his speech he would. To this, Mr. Roosevelt fell back on his stock reply—that is something Hitler would like to know.

THE OTHER fairly important point was about the "complete national emergency," which Mr. Roosevelt had proclaimed in his speech the night before. About this, the tenor of Mr. Roosevelt's replies to questions was to calm any excitement his announcement might have given rise to. He said that his proclamation, as such, has no immediate or concrete effect whatever. Nothing happens because of it, and nothing immediate is contemplated under it. The proclamation merely gives him authority, if he later chooses, to take steps under certain statutes. No such steps are now contemplated. All that Mr. Roosevelt said about complete emergency was of a piece with what he said about everything else—all had the effect of mere matter-of-factness.

As the newspapermen had come to the press conference in extreme expectancy, so did they leave in a spirit of let-down. In conversation with each other they tried to arrive at explanation of why Mr. Roosevelt had called the press conference; whether at first he had had an impulse to say something important, and then thought better of it. These speculations arrived at no answer. If you wished to attribute to Mr. Roosevelt great subtlety, you might surmise that his speech Tuesday night had created an atmosphere of excitement and that the following day he wished to create an atmosphere of calm.

YET IN SUCH a time as this, no week passes without progress toward a predestined end. Of the incidents of this week, it is Mr. Roosevelt's speech that is important—the speech is a document and a landmark. In the speech he notified Germany that our supplies to Great Britain will be delivered, by aid from the United States of a nature which Mr. Roosevelt does not choose to reveal. Also he notified Germany that in defending ourselves against attack we will give a broad interpretation to the word "attack." We will oppose any attempt by Germany to occupy points from which attack upon the western continent might later be launched. This is, on our part, a portentous declaration.

The Once Over

Darlan Explains All

What! Hitler ask me for the fleet?
What silly stuff is that!
He never even mentioned it——
You're talking through your hat!

He never once referred to it;
No veiled hint have I caught;
The Nazis I am certain have
Not given it a thought

I sometimes wonder if he knows
An admiral I am,
Because upon such matters he's
As silent as a clam.

He calls me Francois, friendly like——
He's plain Adolf to me;
We chat about most everything——
Except about the sea.

Perhaps he knows I have a fleet
And even knows just where,
But, if he does, I'm certain that
He doesn't even care.

He never calls me "Admiral,"
Or bellows "Ship ahoy!"
About my navy it is quite Amazing he's so coy.

He never once has asked me for
French colonies, not one!
And if he mentioned it I know
That it would be in fun.

He never urges me to fight
The British or their friends;
On very little help from me
He tells me he depends.

He never gives the slightest hint
He's not a friend of France;
I know his major aim in life's
To give us every chance.

The Germans are the Frenchmen's friends——
They love us more and more . . .
(I don't know why we French did not Discover this before!)

'Tis England whom we have to fear——
(Also the U. S. A.);
If it were not for them we'd not
Be where we are today.

So, Frenchmen, grasp the Nazi hand
And make no further fuss!
Remember every one's to blame
But Germany and us!

This department hasn't been so absorbed by a book in months as it has been by Bayard Veiller's "The Fun I've Had." Here is a picture of the theater for half a century, and of Manhattan Island since Twenty-third Street was away uptown, and crammed full of great stuff. "Within the Law," Veiller's first hit, he reveals, was rejected by almost every producer in New York, including George Cohan, Wagenhals & Kemper, George C. Tyler, Charles Frohman and Erlanger, and his "Thirteenth Chair" was turned down by almost as many.

Incidentally, he tells how Bill Brady, who decided to take a chance on "Within the Law," sold it to Al Woods and Archy Selwyn for $10,000 after the Chicago opening, thereby losing a fortune.

Veiller expresses the startling opinion that "movies are on the way out" and that the radio drama will eclipse them, due to the fact the radio play gives a great outlet for the public imagination. "Radio plays stimulate an audience," he says. "Pictures drug an audience. Go to the ordinary picture and hear them snore."

"There is this about dictators," says Dave Green, "They worship the ground you walk on."

Accessory Fever

He's a sucker for the gadget.
He can't resist its call;
Any shiny patent gimcrack
Is sure to make him fall.

If it's new and nickel-plated,
Can be fastened on the wall,
Or bolted to his motor car
He simply must install.

For any kind of gimmick
He seems to have the price;
The lure of chromium doodads
Has become with him a vice.

Be it dingus for his fender
Or trays for freezing ice,
He'll pine and run a fever
Till he gets the new device.

In The Tradition

By Barnet Nover

The Monroe Doctrine Modernized

ON DECEMBER 2, 1823, President James Monroe addressed a message to Congress which has been the sheet anchor of American foreign policy ever since.

Last Tuesday—May 27, 1941—President Franklin D. Roosevelt, addressing a visible audience consisting of representatives of the 20 Latin-American republics and the Dominion of Canada, and an invisible audience extending clear around the globe, charted what some regard as a wholly new course of action for the United States in its relations with Europe.

NOVER

That is not the case. The President's pronouncement of May 27 did no violence either to the letter or the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine. On the contrary, for all its immediate urgency and its intensely dramatic overtones, Mr. Roosevelt's speech was in essence nothing more than a restatement of the Monroe Doctrine in modern terms, a Monroe Doctrine adjusted to a world of vastly foreshortened distances and blitz war.

THE MEN responsible for the Monroe Doctrine never assumed, as some isolationists assume, that the water barrier dividing Europe from the Americas is impassable. The opposite is true. The Monroe Doctrine arose from the acute realization that the Atlantic is a highway over which conquering armies had repeatedly traveled from the Old World to the New, and would do so again. The real barrier, they realized, was not the ocean, but sea power, and sea power in the hands of a nation or combination of nations hostile to such conquests and determined to prevent them.

That is why Thomas Jefferson, whom the isolationists have appropriated as one of their patron saints, was so quick to grasp the far-reaching implications of the offer made by George Canning to Richard Rush, our Minister to London in 1823, and so eager to have that offer acted on by the United States.

Canning had proposed the formulation of a joint policy, something in the nature of an Anglo-American alliance, which would be operative in the event that the Holy Alliance sought to restore the status quo in Spanish America.

The offer was a tempting one. It was obviously to this Nation's interest no less than to the interest of Great Britain to prevent Old World interference in New World affairs. But possessing as it did only limited sea power the United States was not then in a position to render effective opposition to any attempt by European powers to interfere in the affairs of this hemisphere.

"BY ACCEDING to her (Great Britain's) proposition," Jefferson wrote to Monroe, "we detach her from the bands, bring her mighty weight into the scale of free government, and emancipate a continent at one stroke, which might otherwise linger long in doubt and difficulty. Great Britain is the nation which can do us the most harm of any one or all on earth; and with her on our side we need not fear the whole world. With her, then, we should most sedulously cherish a cordial friendship; and nothing would tend more to knit our affections than to be fighting once more, side by side, in the same cause. Not that I would purchase even her amity at a price of taking part in her wars. But the war in which the present proposition might engage us, should that be its consequence, is not her war, but ours. Its object is to introduce and establish the American system, of keeping out of our land all foreign powers, of never permitting those of Europe to intermeddle with the affairs of our nations. It is to maintain our principle, not to depart from it. . . . With Great Britain withdrawn from their scale and shifted into that of our two continents, all Europe combined would not undertake such a war. For how would they propose to get at either enemy without superior fleets?"

THE RELATIONSHIP between sea power and the defense of this hemisphere which Jefferson so clearly understood is the same today as it was in the time of Monroe. But the setting has undergone a revolutionary transformation during recent years.

Britain's "mighty weight" is again being thrown into the "scale of free government." But it has been sapped by the defeat or defection of her continental allies, by the multiplication of burdens which her brave people and her far-flung fleet have been called upon to bear and, last but by no means least, by the new factor of air power which Germany has employed with such devastating effectiveness. Furthermore, the menace to the safety of this hemisphere which President Monroe perceived in the plans and stratagems and philosophy of the Holy Alliance is as nothing compared with the menace represented by Adolf Hitler.

DESPITE Jefferson's enthusiastic approval of Canning's offer, the United States did not, in 1823, ally itself with Great Britain. We did not do so because it was not really necessary to do so. Since the British government, as Canning made clear to the French Ambassador, M. de Polignac, was prepared to defend the Spanish American republics against the Holy Alliance anyway, the United States could derive all the benefits of such an alliance without any of its obligations. From this circumstance arose the belief, which has no basis in history, that it was the Monroe Doctrine alone that kept European powers from interfering in the affairs of the New World. The actual fact is that the defense of the Americas was first made possible by the British stand and later, as we grew in power, resulted from parallel action by the United States and Great Britain.

As long as British sea power remained what it was, therefore, the defense of the Monroe Doctrine could be considered without reference to the outermost limits of the oceans which wash the shores of this hemisphere. That is no longer possible now. Because of Britain's multiplying difficulties and because of the air factor the defense of the Americas must begin at every point from which an assault on this hemisphere can be launched.

In emphasizing this circumstance the President has brought the Monroe Doctrine up to date. We cannot safely repeat the mistake of Great Britain which, by refusing to defend the bastion that was Czecho-Slovakia, brought the front line of the war into every British home. So far as Europe is concerned the Atlantic is our bastion. And the Atlantic does not begin at the 3-mile limit or along the western coast of Greenland or at the bulge of Brazil.

Showdown Near In Japanese Trade Talks With East Indies

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, May 29.—Following the recent statement of Japanese spokesman Koh Ishii, the trade negotiations between Japan and the Netherlands East Indies are approaching a showdown.

It was announced today that the Japanese government has made formal representations to both the Netherlands and Great Britain to break the deadlock.

The Dutch government, through its minister to Japan, J. C. Pabst, was served with a demand to "reconsider" its attitude, which was declared to be "insincere." The British government, in the words of the newspaper Asahi, has been requested through its ambassador, Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, "to refrain from putting obstacles in the way of the negotiations."

As represented in the press, the Netherlands are refusing to redeem previous pledges to deliver certain materials to Japan, ostensibly because of Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's speech in the Diet including the Netherlands East Indies in the "greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere," against which the Netherlands protested at the time. Domei, the Japanese news agency, says the Dutch are using the speech merely as an excuse. The Asahi denounces the Netherlands for "daring to repudiate the East Asia co-prosperity sphere."

On the other hand reports from Batavia, Java, insist the issue turns on Japanese guarantees not to reship the materials to Germany. Expansion of trade between Japan and Germany is one of the objectives of the mission of Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, now here. According to Ishii, the demand and supply of goods."

the oil agreement between Japan and the Netherlands East Indies which allotted a definite quota to Japan commensurate with its domestic needs, functions satisfactorily and will be continued until it can be incorporated in a wider agreement. The other main products from the Netherlands East Indies are rubber and tin, and it is assumed these are the principal materials involved in the negotiations.

In his broadcast on navy day Capt. Hiraide served notice that Japan is ready to fight if subjected to such economic pressure as might threaten its right to existence. The newspaper Kokumin recently stated that inasmuch as the United States, though not even a formal Ally of Britain, is giving all help to Britain, "it would be only natural for Japan to give every assistance to her allies." And the Japan Times Advertiser today writes:

"If America feels itself justified in keeping essential resources within its control, there is related justification for Japan's demand for retention of resources in the Western Pacific and East Asia."

At the same time Admiral Toyoda, minister of commerce and industry, told a conference of economic bureau chiefs of the prefectural governments today:

In view of the difficulties of importation of various important materials, which are increasing with the growing tension in the international situation, it is presumed the supply goods during the current fiscal year will be tightened more and more. The nation must be prepared for even greater control over the demand and supply of goods."

Treasury Asks Figure On Spending

The Treasury recognized yesterday that Government spending in the fiscal year starting July 1 will go high above original estimates, but there was no sign that the Administration will request a tax program stiffer than the one already presented to Congress.

Acting Treasury Secretary Daniel W. Bell asked the Budget Bureau to prepare new and revised figures on how much money will actually be spent in the 1942 bookkeeping year—July 1, 1941, to June 30, 1942.

The last estimates, made in March for use in planning the tax program, forecast spending of $19,000,000,000. Since that time President Roosevelt has asked $3,329,000,000 more for military planes, has ordered that ship and bomber construction be speeded up, and has promised increased aid to Great Britain.

Even more outmoded are the figures in the budget message the President sent to Congress in January of this year. Since that time, when he asked $17,485,000,000 for fiscal 1942, the $7,000,000,000 lend-lease law has gone into effect and the scope of the national defense program has been vastly broadened as country after country has fallen into Nazi control.

While asking for the new figures on spending, the Treasury also said it was preparing new estimates on how much revenue it would take in next year.

The March 15 returns will indicate higher receipts than the $8,200,000,000 originally expected, officials said.

Unanswered was the question whether the higher rate of spending for national defense would also mean the Treasury would have to ask Congress for stiffer taxes than those already recommended. Informed quarters predicted, however, that the Treasury is unlikely to ask levies any higher than it has suggested to Congress, at least for the present.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau has been using $19,000,000,000 as the total of spending in making his calculations and he recently said he thought that outlays could be held to that figure.

Experts of the Office of Production Management have said, however, that $24,000,000,000 would be a more realistic spending total.

U. S. Planning International Wheat Talks

The State Department disclosed plans yesterday to call an international conference in Washington soon to consider the wheat surplus problem.

The disclosure was in the release of an exchange of notes between the United States and Canada in connection with President Roosevelt's action yesterday in imposing quotas on wheat from Canada and other countries.

In a note to the Canadian government, the United States said:

"In taking the action referred to above, the Government of the United States recognizes that the wheat problem is, in fact, an international problem and one in which the governments of Canada and the United States have mutual interest.

"It is for this reason that the Government of the United States welcomes the recent indication of the Canadian government of its willingness to resume discussions on an international basis of the whole wheat surplus problem.

"The Government of the United States accordingly proposes to extend invitations for such discussions in Washington in the near future."

Ottawa, Ontario, May 29 (Canadian Press).—Canada will be glad to cooperate with the United States in an international wheat conference which was announced in Washington today, it was stated in official circles.

Notes have been exchanged between Washington and Ottawa, leading up to the decision to hold the conference, and they will be tabled in the House of Commons today by Prime Minister King.

"The discussions are to be of an exploratory nature," a Government official said, "in the hope that something can be done to meet the problem of large wheat surpluses in most wheat-producing countries."

Naturally Canada, with a surplus of some 550,000,000 bushels of wheat and a new crop coming up, is keenly interested in these discussions as will be Argentina and Australia.

Parity price arrangements for United States produce led to a spread in prices between Canada and the United States reflected in market quotations of yesterday when July wheat closed at 77½ cents at Winnipeg and 95¾ cents at Chicago.

WPA Constructing Ten Buildings At Camp Sims

Construction of ten buildings at Camp Sims is under way by the District Work Projects Administration, Paul Edwards, administrator, announced yesterday.

The new buildings, costing $76,769, he said, will bring the total cost of WPA improvements in the camp to $115,019.

Construction work will not stop selectees from using the rifle range and other camp facilities, Edwards declared.

Hornblowers Face Crack-Down In War on Noise

Strict enforcement of District antinoise statutes was ordered of his precinct commanders yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Numerous complaints from citizens that they are unable to sleep at night because of useless hornblowing, barking dogs, loud radios, etc., prompted the police chief to issue the "crack-down" order on "needless din."

Washington, overcrowded as it is, is filled with a superfluous clamor that floats through windows, disturbing rest and efficient labor, Maj. Brown asserted. "And of all the noisemaking evils, hornblowing is the worst," he declared.

In his order, the police superintendent reviewed several ordinances regulating noise, ordering:

"You will see that these regulations are strictly enforced."

'The Great American Broadcast,' at Capitol, Traces Familiar Romance Against Authentic Radio Background; Star-Studded Stage Revue

THOROUGHLY ENJOYABLE holiday entertainment is on tap for the new week at Loew's Capitol Theater. "The Great American Broadcast," while it follows a familiar formula of romantic and emotional development, possesses a factual background that lends it an interesting and substantial quality too often lacking from the conventional, run-of-the-mill musical. The stage revue, also dedicating itself largely to music and dance, is virtually all-star. With Mr. Kaufman's "Spring" overture, Lynn Allison the vocal soloist, and Art Brown's modified community sing added, there piles up a generous measure of hot weather diversion that would make you forget the heat even without the cooling system.

BELL

"The Great American Broadcast," enlists the stellar service of Alice Faye, Jack Oakie and John Payne—the spotlighted triumvirate of "Tin Pan Alley"—plus Cesar Romero and Mary Beth Hughes, with a host of supporting players and specialists adding to the variety of a story that traces the history of commercial broadcasting, rather than the vagaries of song writers and pluggers. This new one is the better story of the two. In romantic complications, thwarted love, bitter rivalries and a little despicable double-crossing, the two are to all intents and purposes identical.

The radio aspects of the tale are initiated with the first broadcast of entertainment from a tent atop a Jersey warehouse—a thin disguise of Station KDKA—and progresses through the airing of the Dempsey-Willard fight in Toledo on July 4, 1919, to the "great American broadcast" of the first program ever sent out over a Nation-wide hookup. There is a good deal that is fictional in all this, but there also is a good deal that is authentic.

Cast and Specialists Are A-1

Miss Faye and the Messrs. Oakie and Payne are about as they were in "Tin Pan Alley." Mack Gordon and Harry Warren have fitted them out with a splendid portfolio of songs and, of course, now and again, old, familiar melodies of the period of the action are introduced. Mr. Oakie is the mainspring of the comedy—and a very strong one this time—and Mr. Payne the unhappy symbol of defeatism turned into eventual triumph. Romero, naturally, is the "threat." Mary Beth Hughes is cast in a minor, but sprightly, role as a secretary. Those dancing demons, the Nicholas Brothers; the Wiere Brothers, eccentric funsters, and the "Four Ink Spots," who really are five, contribute specialities from time to time that may slow down the plot movement but pep up the customers.

Jack Joyce, an English importation—or at least recently from there—opens the stage bill by demonstrating that one leg and a perfectly balanced crutch are complete equipment for an especially gifted dancing barytone. Roy Smeck next proves again his right to be known as the "wizard of the strings" by his rare musicianship on the electric guitar, and the Del Rios, two men and a girl, while more gymnasts than dancers, are unique in their field. So are the Chandra-Kaley Dancers, in their exotic Latin-American dances, rather more pretentiously and competently presented than usual. Frank Libuse and his stunning partner are a piano-and-voice duet of funsters somewhat in the Al Trahan manner, although by no means an imitation. The Rhythm Rockets complete a gay bill in several of their most colorful routines.

Back Again as Broadcasters

ALICE FAYE, JOHN PAYNE, JACK OAKIE
last seen together in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Tin Pan Alley," now occupy the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater in "The Great American Broadcast," the same company's companion picture. Cesar Romero and Mary Beth Hughes also are prominent in the cast of this one

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 29 (INS).—Just as we went to press I learned that King Vidor had been put on "The Yearling" to direct and that Victor Fleming had bowed out. There had been rumblings of trouble and rumors that Victor and Spencer Tracy hadn't been in accord. But everyone expected that the difficulty would be ironed out after the hardships in Florida were forgotten. Today when E. J. PARSONS

"We didn't agree on the story and the production," Eddie told me. "And since Victor has the right to do things his way, he asked for his release. He felt that things hadn't been arranged properly for the company in Florida and perhaps he had his grievance, too.

Once more, the call has been issued, and once more the youths of this great Nation has responded. All praise to them. But this day belongs to the youth of another generation, whose reponse was just as loyal, whose courage was just as unflinching. There will be many wreaths laid today upon the graves of those who gave their lives for a cause in which we all believed. But I think that each of us should carry a wreath in his heart for those others, still living, many of them crippled and with broken health whose sacrifice was no less great.

Gene Tierney's mother tells me: "I've met lots of people here, but when I leave, Director Irving Cummings will stand out in my memory." Back of that statement is this story. You'll recall that Gene got the best role of her career in "Belle Starr," and in the middle of the picture, production was suddenly stopped because of Gene's eye trouble.

Many here thought Gene had failed in the role, and the eye business was just a way of easing her out gracefully. But the eye trouble was genuine, and Gene's director, Cummings, knew if she lost the part, the town would avoid her like one finished in the picture business before she'd actually got started; so he went to the heads and begged them to hold up production for three months if necessary. Now Gene's back in there working her head off—and to the Tierneys, Cummings is Santa Claus.

Fred Astaire tells about having a letter from his sister Adele just after her return to Dublin from London, where she went to see her dentist and arrived in the midst of the worst blitz. Now that she's safe in Ireland, she says, "I'm going to let my teeth fall out, instead of having them knocked out for me."

Funny sight on "Ladies in Retirement," watching Ida Lupino standing by while her husband Louis Hayward makes love to Evelyn Keyes. No, there's been no outbreak to date.

For the first time in his career, Charlie McCarthy will have his wires pulled by someone other than Edgar Bergen. Lucille Ball will manipulate Charlie in "Look Who's Talking," but Bergen will supply the voice.

This department thinks the Hays office should look into the matter of "Dumbo," that flying elephant in Disney's forthcoming production of "Dumbo of the Circus." We have it on irreproachable authority that the character was suggested by a girl who manages a liquor store in Beverly Hills. If Dumbo turns out to be pink, it's a cinch for a pinch!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, May 29.

Dickie Parran, son of Surgeon General Thomas Parran, earns extra money by distributing Washington's newspapers every Sunday morning at 5 o'clock. Dickie became ill recently, and his condition was aggravated by the fact that he could find nobody to take over his newspaper route the next morning. And so at 5 a. m., that rainy Sunday morning, if the subscribers had been awake, they would have seen a dignified gentleman—the surgeon general of the United States—trudging through the Washington downpour, pulling a newspaper wagon, and delivering their Sunday papers. [Editor's note: Confirming the incident, Dr. Parran said yesterday it happened more than a year ago.]

Melvyn Douglas deplores the fact that his name has been linked with the sponsorship of the Harry Bridges defense committee. Despite the national publicity, Douglas never joined it. Bernt Balchen and Clyde Pangborn have left for Singapore again, ferrying new bombers . . . On their way back to California, both famous fliers discussed their dreams. Pangborn confessed that he has no difficulty in sleeping—and that he has no dreams at all. Balchen, however, related that one dream is recurrent—a dream in which he's flying to Australia with Roscoe Turner, who clasps a pillow and shouts: "Help me get this up."

Elliot Paul, the author of "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," has been enjoying his Hollywood stay. He just completed his newest book, "The Joy of Living (or Intoxication Made Easy)" . . . Howard Lindsay, who has been appearing in "Life With Father" for more than 18 months, finally saw a performance of his show—when he went to Philadelphia to watch the Dorothy Gish company perform it. "I like it," he told them. "I think we should bring it in."

The President's speech was broadcast in all the night clubs Tuesday night. In every cafe on the East and West Sides the orchestra were stilled and all service was suspended—while the patrons listened to the message declaring an emergency . . . Columbia

For sheer escapism, you couldn't do better than "The Road to Zanzibar," with Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour for company. This is the filmusical which is at the Columbia after previous F Street glory. And if a leisurely safari through the African jungle isn't escapism in times such as these, then what have you?

What Bob, Bing and Dot have is a fluff very much like their previous comedy, "The Road to Singapore," plus the presence of Una Merkle and Eric Blore. This time, though, their escape is more terrifying, involving a tasteful cannibal tribe and a charming den of old bones. It's genuinely amusing banter throughout, halted only every so often by songs from Bing and Dot.

Nylon Gloves Now Latest Boon to Women

In Mesh Weave, Are Cool and Shapely on Hand

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

AND NOW we have nylon gloves! Coal, air and water—the three elements making up nylon, the modern wonder of the day—have again created another fashion for women.

Comes summer, women go for any fashion that helps to keep them cool and collected. Nylon mesh gloves are approved because they are air-conditioned and make the hand appear slim and narrow. They do not lose their shape, but fit snugly to the hand—possessing the same characteristics that have won fame for nylon hose.

Nylon gloves are not the first type of cool summer glove to gain popularity. Long before nylon came into existence women wore string and crochet gloves. This season they will find them more likable than ever. The seams are barely visible and they fit the hand more sleekly. The smartest string gloves come in pale pastels and beiges.

Four-Button Variety Popular

As to the more tailored type glove, the hand-stitched, four-button variety are still the volume seller over all other styles. In contrast to the long glove, there is the shortie style, which is always preferred by some women. The machine-stitched glove in the $1 price bracket, simulating those that are hand-stitched, are the most popular of the inexpensive gloves.

From scouting about the shops it seems women like any color of glove—so long as it is white. Ninety per cent of the gloves sold already have been white of cotton and rayon in the medium-price range. There is, however, an increasing tendency to pay more attention to quality. Many more of the expensive gloves are being purchased as women become more concerned with quality in fabric.

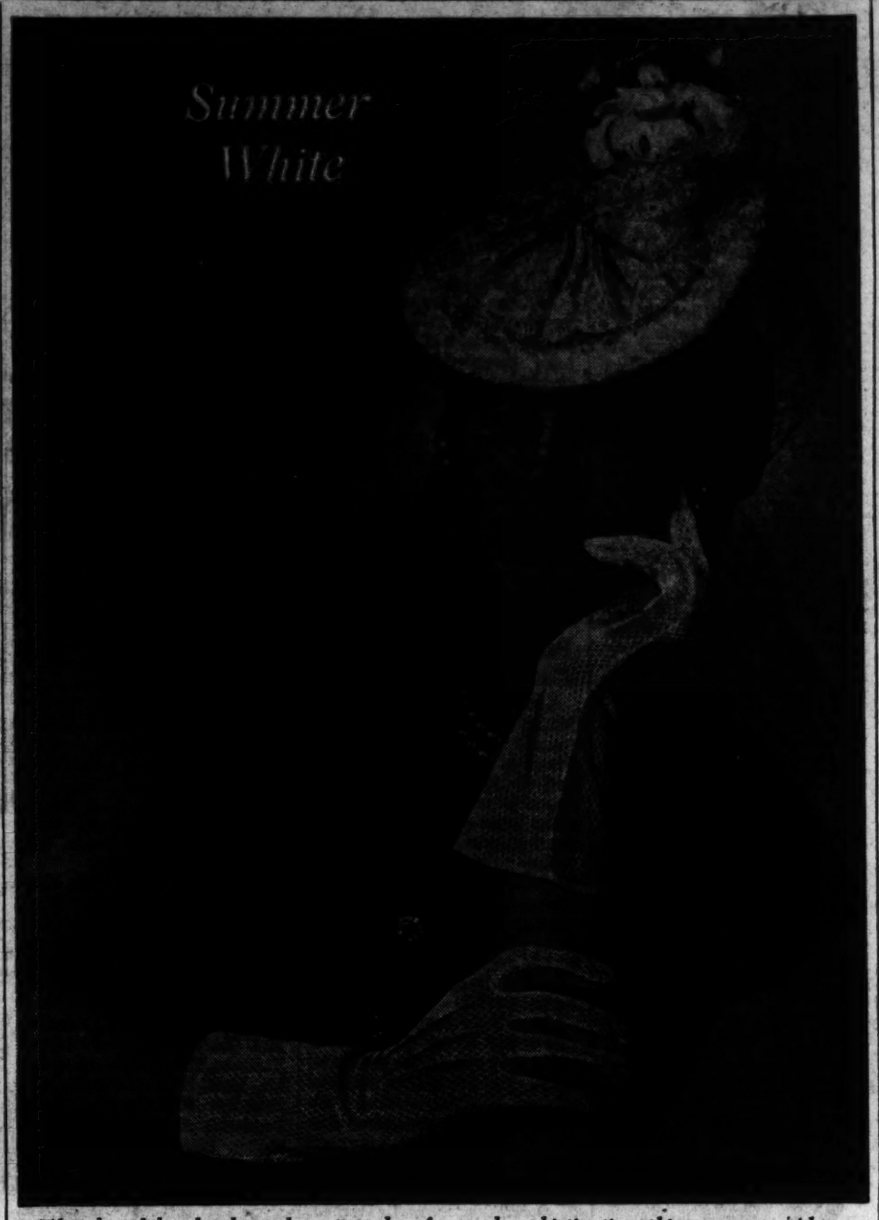
The imported gloves and fabrics are few this summer. Many thrilling sagas lie behind some of the gloves that were salvaged from blockade runners. But within the last few months there have scarcely been any glove imports—all of which means a boom to the American cotton and rayon industries.

Domestic Rayons Are Tops

The sleezy rayon gloves are now almost a thing of the past, and in their stead are the handsome new brushed and plain rayons. The domestic brushed rayons are far superior to the cottons formerly imported for glove making. They are cooler and have a softer feel on the hand. The casual observer would mistake them for cotton. Their most practical feature is that they wash more simply and dry more quickly than cotton gloves.

Glove decoration has changed so much in its styling that one can almost tell how old a glove is by the presence of "Paris points." They are the three parallel decorative marks on the backs of gloves. There is still some resistence to the disappearance of this bit of trimming and many of the better gloves have this neat touch in a hand-drawn effect.

There is no particular reason for the changing mode of glove decoration, other than the demand by women for something different. Backs are now often plain or have swirls and criss-cross decorations. The combination of two fabrics, one on the palm and one on the back, has greatly influenced restrained decoration over all the glove.



The gloved hand takes a bow to nylon for cool sophistication this summer. Above are crisp all-nylon gloves in white open mesh. In addition to their snug well-fitted lines and meticulous tailoring, they are easily laundered, dry quickly, and do not crush or lose their shape. Coolness is their special attraction, which makes them ideal for summer.

It's About Time

Wife Got FAT—
LOST HUSBAND'S LOVE

The above headlines appeared in a New York newspaper in connection with a divorce trial that had attracted wide attention: "She was a beautiful woman" one witness testified, "but she got fat and is not attractive any more."

Thousands of women are getting fat and losing their appeal just because they do not know what to do. If you are fat, how would you like to lose some of it and at the same time gain in physical charm and attractiveness—more energy—greater activity?

Why not do what thousands of women have done to get rid of pounds of unwanted fat? Take ½ teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts (a famous English formula) in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and keep it up for thirty days. Cut out pastries and fatty meats and go light on white bread, potatoes, butter and cream. Then weigh yourself and see how many pounds you have lost.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts will last you for 4 weeks and costs but little. Ask any druggist for a bottle of Kruschen plain or new effervescent—sparkling—pleasant—and start today to lose fat. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back.

Should Young Mother Let 2-Year-Old Daughter Spend Weeks, Periodically, With Grandparents? Her Older Sister Considers It Inadvisable

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young mother, 23 years old, and my two little girls are Alice, aged 2 years, and Marie, aged 6 months. My husband's people live about 175 miles from here and we visit them often,—at least every six months; and they come to our home four or five times a year. They are eager for Alice to spend a few weeks with them this summer. She was with them last summer for three weeks; and during the winter, for two weeks,—at the time the baby was born.

My older sister pleads with me not to let Alice go without me, insisting she will become spoiled or homesick. I must say, however, that her grandparents are exceedingly wise in caring for her. They make her mind, do not give her great amounts of candy, etc., and keep her on the schedule she is accustomed to. My parents have never seen the children, as their home is a great distance from here;—and I have wondered if this has any bearing on my sister's attitude.

My husband's people treat me as their own daughter and I feel very close to them. They have asked us when they may come for Alice, and I want your opinion before answering them. They have a lovely home and can offer Alice more in material comfort than we can; because we live in an apartment and the only time Alice can be outdoors is when I am with her. I do all my own housework,—washing, ironing, baking and sewing,—and am able to spend only a short while outside each day. When Alice visits her grandparents, I am able to catch up on sewing, dental work, shopping and rest.

My husband feels that my sister is trying to run our business and tells me I should not listen to her. But my problem is—should I let my child spend a vacation away from home alone? I am very devoted to the children and want to do what is best for them. I shall appreciate your advice and since you are a mother, I shall feel very safe in doing what you say. Sincerely, MRS. W. K. N.

Bond With Grandparents Is Beneficial to Child

DEAR MRS. W. K. N.: Psychologists tell us it is a good thing for a child to have a sense of being rooted in—of belonging to—a large family circle. Thus, if your little Alice is happy with her grandparents, and is learning to feel almost as much at home with them as with you—because her life runs as smoothly and systematically, as warmed by devotion and as steadied by quiet authority, under their aegis as under yours—I think it is a fine thing for her to have her social horizon expanded by occasional visits, of not too great length, with them.

The psychologically healthy child,—who has felt secure, since earliest infancy, in his emotional relationship with his parents; who has found them to be completely trustworthy guardians,—takes like a duck to water to the proposition of visiting around amongst his grandparents, if he finds them to be comparably congenial persons. And this is as it should be,—since it weans him by imperceptible degrees from his erstwhile infantile, total psychic dependence upon his parents; allowing him his first easy lesson in social adaptation to the larger life, apart from them, in which he must eventually participate resourcefully on his own powers, without their doting supervision and assistance.

Still another argument in favor of letting Alice visit her grandparents occasionally, for a few weeks, is the undeniably beneficial effects upon yourself. Even supposing she might be vaguely unhappy with them, if the vacation permits you to "catch up" on yourself—so that you are a better rested, more relaxed, more cheerfully affectionate mother as a result—she is going to reap dividends in the long run.

Whatever refreshes you for the job of child rearing makes for your children's good,—so long as your primary object, always, is to do for them what is best for them. Of course, if you would be shunting her aside for purely selfish reasons,—which obviously is farthest from your thoughts,—that would be a different story. But even then,—if you were that kind of mother,—one might think little Alice was at least as well off with loving grandparents as with you.

In my opinion, you can well afford to ignore your sister's doleful predictions. Because I agree with your husband that she is trying (for emotional reasons best known to herself) to run your business—without the comprehensive grasp of child nature and wholesome family life which would qualify her to give really constructive advice. I think—just as you surmise—that she is worrying lest Alice become more closely affiliated with your husband's people than with yours, in her earliest and most impressionable years. But if Alice learns early to appreciate—to feel at home with—one set of fine grandparents, she is going to be in the most receptive of moods for embracing the other set, later on.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Coffee Roll

THE FIRST crisp plump radishes and delicate young lettuce leaves are a source of great pride to every gardener. The cook knows just how he feels, for she has her moments when she discovers an interesting way to serve an old favorite.

Any cook who wants to experience an exalted moment can do so by baking a Filled Coffee Roll. It emerges from the oven looking elaborate, but one can secretly gloat over the simple job its making requires.

This is a hot bread to serve at supper—or any other meal. It is good enough to eat for its own goodness, but those who are health-minded will be glad to know it is good for them, too, especially if it is made with enriched flour.

Quick Coffee Roll

Peanut Butter Filling—Cream ¼ cup peanut butter with ¾ cup shortening, ¼ cup brown sugar and ½ teaspoonful salt untill well blended. Add 1 egg, mixing well. Add ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs and enough water (¼ to ½ cup, to make mixture of spreading consistency. Yield, about 1 cup.

Crumb Topping—Blend together with a fork until crumbly, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ cup flour, ¼ cup dry bread crumbs and ½ teaspoon cinnamon.

Foundation—Sift together 2 cups sifted flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Beat 1 egg, add 2-3 cup milk and add to dry ingredients. Stir until flour is moistened. Turn out in lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Roll into square sheet, ¼ inch thick. Spread two-thirds of sheet with filling. Fold in thirds, starting with unspread third. Bake on greased baking sheet in moderately hot oven, 425 degrees, 1 5to 20 minutes. Brush lightly with confectioners' sugar icing, sprinkle with crumb topping and "drizzle" more icing over topping. Serve warm or cold, in sloces. Yield, 1 coffeeroll, about 12 inches.

Make-up Base for Summer Skin

With the arrival of hot weather, it becomes increasingly difficult to keep make-up fresh and finished looking. Also, the darkening skin tones give the complexion a sort of muddy appearance. One way to combat that bedraggled summery look is to use a good foundation cream or lotion.

Among the many make-up bases is a new one, "Veil of Beauty." It can be applied before the rouge and powder are used as finish over the powder. Besides keeping the make-up intact in sun and wind, this foundation covers blemishes and imparts a flawless petal quality to the skin. Only small amounts of the cream need be used, as it merges naturally with the skin after cleansing and is applied with the fingertips.

The Sympathetic Friend

"Well, how are you feeling now?"

"Just fine."

"I'm so glad. I'd been a little worried about you. You were looking so tired there for awhile."

"Thank you, I'm all right now."

"How's George?"

"He's all right, too."

"Good! Is he still working himself to death?"

"Well no, not exactly."

"He really ought to slow down. You tell him I said so. By the way ,how's your daughter?"

"Jane? Oh she's just fine."

"No, I mean Marjorie—the married one in Chicago."

"Oh well—er, I suppose you heard?"

No, what?"

"Well, Marjorie's in Reno just now."

"Oh, I'm so sorry! What's the matter?"

"Oh well—It's just one of those things . . ."

"Isn't that too bad! Marjorie was such a pretty girl. She always reminded me so much of your sister."

"You mean Margaret?"

"No, Valerie. By the way, where is Valerie now?"

"Valerie? . . . Oh . . . Well, she's in New York. Valerie's married again."

"Oh, you don't mean it! Whom did she marry this time?"

"He's a—well, I don't know exactly what he does, but it has something to do with the theater."

"How marvelous! Oh, and by the way, how's your mother?"

"Just fine!"

"Isn't it amazing the way she keeps going—at her age! And how are all of George's people?"

"Just fine."

"I used to think so much of his sister Maude. Where is she now?"

"Maude? Oh she—well, I suppose you heard?

No?"

"Well it was all in the papers so much—I mean about Maude's husband . . . He got in all that trouble you know . . . that shooting affair."

"No! I never knew it at all! Oh, I'm so sorry . . . Tell me all about it."

Sun Vitamin D Develops Children's Bones, Teeth

(Fortified with facts and figures, Ida Jean Kain, delegate to the recent National Nutrition Conference here, gives you up-to-the-minute news of the new vitamin standards. Today in another of her series, she explains about the units in Vitamin D.

By Ida Jean Kain

VITAMIN D, the famous "sunshine vitamin" which is manufactured in the skin on direct exposure to the sun's ultra-violet rays, is something of a puzzler. Science does not yet know exactly how much you need, and you have no way of knowing exactly how much you get. But one thing is very clear: It is indispensable.

You probably identify this as the vitamin necessary for the prevention of rickets in infants and growing children. Rickets is a disease in which the bones are calcium-deficient and too soft to support the weight. The results are bow legs, knock knees, enlarged joints, beaded ribs and misshapen jaws.

But in seeknig a cure for rickets, it was found that the need was not for more calcium but for more vitamin D which would allow the calcium and phosphorus to be utilized. In this same connection vitamins A and C are also essential. This explains the increased demand for them during pregnancy and the nursing period.

Important in Growth

The requirements for vitamin D during pregnancy and the period of growth are set at 400 international units per day. Because of the importance of vitamin D to the development of good, strong bones and teeth, nutritionists recommend the use of fish liver oil—richest source besides the sun—as a daily dietary supplement for children and pregnant and nursing mothers.

Vitamin D is so important during growth that some foods, particularly milk, have had this vitamin added to them. Milk is now enriched with D by several methods. One is by exposing a thin layer of milk to strong ultra-violet light which activates sterols in the milk just as sunshine activates sterols in the skin. Milk is also fortified by the direct addition of D concentrates. Still another method is to add the vitamin to the feed given cows and chickens so that the milk, butter and eggs will be high in vitamin D.

Enriched milk is standardized so as to contain 400 international units of vitamin D per quart. It is generally agreed that growing children should be given codliver oil even when vitamin D milk is used.

Can't Go Through Glass

You can't always depend on getting your share of vitamin D from these ultra-violet rays. In the early spring and late fall they are very weak—and in the winter, weaker still. In winter they're only about one-twelfth as strong as in summer. So you have to store up enough in summer to last through the winter.

The ultra-violet light cannot pass through ordinary glass. Fog, smoke and dust are further hindrances. Clothing makes a difference, too. Even the strong ultra-violet light of summer can get through only one layer of light clothing. If you depend upon a sun lamp, keep in mind that it deteriorates and should be checked regularly.

With the aid of the new "Count Your Vitamins" chart, you can come close to planning perfect menus for your family. Every meal can be a tonic. Send large stamped returned envelope for this invaluable leaflet to the Promotion Department, Room 600, The Washington Post.

Decorative Needlework

From earliest times stitches have been used to ornament various types of fabrics, the art of embroidery and decorative needlework having been developed almost as soon as sewing. Earliest needles were made of thorns and bone. Needlework has never lost its place in the story of ornament.

Farewell Party and Welcome-Home Fete Share Interest of Society

By Hope Ridings Miller
The Post Society Editor.

ONE OF THE GAYEST rounds of the season took over yesterday afternoon's social calendar as a number of "after 5" and "after 6" parties had the party-going contingent out in droves. Half the town seemed to be on hand at the cocktail party given by the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de DeBayle, and many notables glimpsed there went on to Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner's "welcome home" for George Abell, or the farewell fete given by the retiring Argentine Air and Military Attache and Senora de Zanni; or one or more of the other events on yesterday's schedule.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

The Nicaraguan fete is described in detail elsewhere on this page, so I'll tell you about two other parties that drew their share of guests from the social register, the diplomatic blue book, the Congressional directory, and what-else-have-you.

From 6 until 8 o'clock, and even later than that, Mrs. Miner's lovely and spacious apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue was crowded to the walls with as interesting an assemblage as I have seen in months. Shortly after George Abell returned from the West Coast, the hostess, who hails from California herself, decided she would give him a welcome-home party, and yesterday's event was the pleasant result.

"You see, George lives right, and so do I," said Mrs. Miner, "and that's why the rains came just in time to 'save' the party for us." Privately, I had the idea that such a gracious hostess and such an engaging guest of honor didn't need the cooperation of the forces of nature to make their party a success; but cool breezes sweeping in the wide windows from the rain-swept street did add to the comfort of the company.

Receiving informally, Mrs. Miner wore a handsome turquoise jersey-crepe frock, cut on flowing lines and accented with a double strand of pearls to match her earrings. Mrs. Sayre Macneil, her niece, generally assisted, and was quite a fetching picture in a blue and white frock, fashioned with contrasting panels. After spending several weeks here, Mrs. Macneil will leave Sunday for her home near Los Angeles, but she made all sorts of promises to friends yesterday that she would "come again, and stay longer next time."

"Gimlets" — those innocuous-looking, but extremely potent cocktails—went the rounds; and so did a variety of other drinks, including the ever-popular pineapple juice. Masses of white peonies and roses decorated the drawing room, the adjoining sun parlor and the dining room, where guests gathered and stayed on until time to scatter to dinners that also drew their share of notables last evening.

The Netherlands Minister was there, accompanied by Mme. Loudon, who looked cool and lovely in a trim white frock and a wide-brimmed hat. They went on later, as did Mr. Abell, to the dinner given by Mrs. J. L. Houghteling. The latter was also among those present at Mrs. Miner's party.

"A plague on both my houses!" said Mrs. George Barnet to somebody, and when I edged in to learn why, I found she was talking about her Washington residence and her Virginia country place. Both, she declared, are giving her no end of trouble—since she's in the process of closing one for the season and opening the other.

Miss Louise Boyd Among Those Present

Miss Carolyn Nash came in with Mme. Fotitch and Mrs. Thomas Burke. Senator Arthur Capper made the rounds and then went on his way to another party. Miss Louise Boyd, explorer, who has a whole territory named for her —"Miss Boydland"—was among those present. She recently arrived here from her California home. Mrs. Eldridge Jordan was there, wearing a black ensemble accented with a cluster of white gardenias. Mrs. Sydney Cloman and Rear Admiral Arthur Hepburn chatted together—probably about California. Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion came in from another party, and then went on later in the evening to the poetry reading given by Stephen Vincent Benet at the Library of Congress.

Who else was there? Well, I saw Dr. and Mme. H. R. van Houten and Dr. H. H. Boon, of the Netherlands Legation; attractive Mlle. Emel Tek, daughter of the Turkish Ambassador to Japan, who told me she planned to be off June 15 for New York and would sail from there in July to return to Tokyo. I saw Maj. Juan Sedillo, Mr. and Mme. George Boncesco and Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, who went on to the Nicaraguan party and later entertained a few friends at dinner on their yacht.

Natalie Keeney Phillips was at Mrs. Miner's party, as were Mrs. Crosby Miller, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Robert Davis and her daughter, Miss Dita Davis; Ralph Snowden Hill, Seyfullah Esin, who was renewing acquaintances on all sides; the Rumanian Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Coste, Miss Dorothea Villard, Mrs. William T. Mann, George Williams and Mrs. Newbold Walmsley, who was going on later to the dinner given by Mrs. Atherton Macondray at the Chevy Chase Club.

Still others enjoying Mrs. Miner's party were Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Glenn Abbey, who will soon leave for his new post at London; Lady Gainsborough and her pretty daughter, Lady Maureen Noel; the Cuban Minister Counselor and Senora de Baron, Capt. Karl Wessel, of the Swedish Legation, and many more.

Zannis Leaving On Monday

Meanwhile, over in the 2400 Sixteenth Street apartment of Col. and Senora Zanni, the other party was merrily under way. A welcome-home and a farewell fete all in one day — almost too much for any one person, but I saw several guests who were on hand for both Mrs. Miner's cocktail party and the one given by the Zannis.

The hostess at the latter wore a smart spring print, floor-length and fashioned with a full skirt and a brief black jacket. Pink peonies decorated the drawing room and centered the tea table, which was laden with a variety of tea-time dainties.

Everybody present bewailed the fact that Col. and Senora de Zanni are leaving Washington so soon. They will be off to New York on Sunday and will sail for Buenos Aires on June 6.

Among those on hand to bid them goodby yesterday were the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Cuban Minister Counselor and Senora de Baron, Mrs. Adolf Berle, Mrs. Laurence Duggan, the German Military and Air Attache and Frau von Boetticher and the German Naval Attache and Frau Witthoeft-Emden, Mrs. Laurence Duggan, the Brazilian First Secretary and Senhora de Alencastro-Guimaraes; Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Miss Lilita Dawson, and virtually all military and naval attaches of the Latin-American embassies and legations, as well as several members of residential society.

Sterlings to Honor Miss Anne Bullitt

The Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Frederick Sterling have issued invitations to a reception and dance to be given on the night of June 12 at the Sulgrave Club for Miss Anne Bullitt, daughter of William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France.

Also delivered by the postman yesterday were cards from the former Ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter Edge for a tea in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Camilla Sewall Edge. This party, too, will take place June 12, from 5 to 7:30, at 1520 Eighteenth Street.

Will Be First Bud To Blossom Forth

Wallaces Feted By Bostroms

Several dinners accented last evening's social calendar. The Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace were honored by the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom; Senator and Mrs. Carter Glass were feted by Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Houghteling were hosts at a dinner at which the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon were ranking guests.

Senator and Mrs. Hughes entertained at their home, 2913 Glover Driveway. Guests, in addition to Senator and Mrs. Glass, were Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton, Senator and Mrs. Allan Ellender, Senator and Mrs. Guy Gillette and Mrs. William Smathers, Mrs. John Martin, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Hughes, and her house guest, Mrs. Alfonto Holley, of Bruton, Ala., who will return to her home today.

Mrs. Martin also will leave today. She is going to Miami, Fla., to join her husband, who is doing medical aviation duty with the United States Navy. Senator and Mrs. Hughes hope to get away in July for a trip to Panama. In August they will open their home in Rehoboth Beach, Del.

G. O. P. Women Plan Service Club Benefit

By Elizabeth Henney

The Democrats gave them a canteen; now the Republicans will give them a garden. So the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, which has been going full speed since selectees started pouring into and through the Capital City, is increasing by leaps and bounds. Plans for the garden were made yesterday.

At an iced-tea party at her lovely and surprisingly cool F Street home, in the heart of downtown Washington, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon gathered together yesterday afternoon a group of prominent Republican women to put the finishing touches on plans for a silver tea to be given at the Carlton on June 10, where guests will meet the wives of Republican Senators at a benefit for the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club at 1015 L Street.

Mrs. Bacon, wearing floating black chiffon, greeted her guests in one of the upper drawing rooms of the great, old brick mansion. There, mint-tea in tall iced glasses, cakes and sandwiches were served while plans were made for the event.

Recently the Democratic women raised funds for a canteen for the clubhouse, and the object of the party June 10 will be to present a garden to the club. There is already an old-fashioned courtyard behind the clubhouse and that will be converted into a garden.

Since the beginning of the emergency, the strain on the club has been terrific. Built to accommodate (as overnight guests) a maximum of 80, one weekend found 350 service men applying to put up there. With the help of cots from the Red Cross, place was finally made for all of them. Since then the club increased its capacity to 160 and is still enlarging. Selectees stop there on their way through the Capital, families meet "their boys" there during weekends, and hundreds of service men stop by for a meal or to write a letter home.

At yesterday's gathering were Mrs. Charles L. McNary, gowned in black and white print; Mrs. Harold H. Burton, in dusty rose-dotted swiss, with accessories to match; Mrs. Thomas M. Robins, in black and white print; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman in navy blue, and several more.

Members of the committee include Mrs. McNary, Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Mrs. Burton, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Clarence Hancock, Mrs. Tuckerman and Mrs. McCook Knox, who is in charge of the committee on "National Unity Pins," which will be sold to assist in raising funds.

Patronesses for the event include Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army; Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations; Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of Major General Holcomb, Commandant of the Marine Corps; Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Julian L. Schley, Mme. Cantacuzene, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, Mrs. Robin and Mrs. Virginia White Speel.

Nicaraguan Envoy Entertains For U. S. Minister at Legation

By Carolyn Bell

The heat, and ways to get out of it, seemed to be the main topic of conversation at the Nicaraguan Legation yesterday afternoon where the Minister and Senora de De Bayle entertained at a party in honor of the American Minister to Nicaragua, Pierre deL. Boal.

Standing just inside the long drawing room were the Minister and Senora de De Bayle with their guest. The clever hostess wore a frock of her own creation—a filmy gray lace with tight basque and gored skirt. Curling ruby earclips completed the ensemble.

Although it was definitely a Latin-American gathering a good many residentials and officials turned up to sip the iced coffee with ice cream in it or partake of a Scotch and soda. Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, made her appearance looking as cool as a cucumber. Her white feather hat had just one side to it—intriguing. The Mexican Ambassador (looking a bit on the warm side) came in with his wife, Senora de Castillo Najera. The Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso chatted gaily with various groups. Senora de Concheso wore a sea green crepe frock and a smart sailor hat.

Peonies, Mock Orange Center Tea Table

A bar had been set up in the adjoining room and in yet another room a tea table was arranged. Centering the table was a bouquet of lucious red peonies and fragrant mock orange. The iced coffee made quite a hit—for just about everyone came back for a second helping. Looking smart as paint was Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson in a sleek black frock and cunning white hat. Mrs. Adolf Berle chatted with a group of friends and not far away Mrs. Lawrence Duggan was conversing in Spanish.

Mrs. Claude Pepper wore not only a tiny American flag but a Union Jack also on her dark blue frock. The Minister of the Dominican Republic, Andres Pastoriza, made his appearance for the first time since returning from his homeland. The Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceras were there. Pretty Senora de Caceras was smartly turned out in green.

"But it was never so hot, that one had to get up at 3 a. m. to sit in a tub of cold water," said Oscar Herreo Arango who was refusing to admit that his native Havana could be this hot. The counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Gacitua announced that they plan to return to Chile this summer—but just for a vacation. Vivid Senorita Patria Mencia, wore a wide brimmed pink hat tilted fetchingly on one side.

Allan Dawson Attends Party

Recently returned from Bolivia, where he is with the United States Legation, Allan Dawson chatted with many of his old friends. He is now here on temporary duty at the State Department. Also there were his mother, Mrs. Thomas Dawson, and sister, Miss Lolita Dawson. Mrs. Charles McEnerney discussed plans for a summer that included a dip in the Atlantic Ocean now and then. Also planning to go off to the seashore are Dr. and Mrs. "Pete" Moran. Yesterday she wore a stunning all-white costume. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Grosvenor were there, she in a wide, purple hat picking up the color in her gaily printed frock.

The Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi were among the few European diplomats. With them was her daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, who wore a smart turban of black and white plaid. The Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron were there as were Mrs. Morsn Drury, in a bright red jacket; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris and the Minister of Bolivia and Mme. Guachalla.

Mrs. Robert Knowlton, who was accompanied by her husband, was full of tales about her 2-year-old neice whom she saw for the first time last week. She was in New York to greet her sister, Senora de Illanez, the former Chela Trucco, whose husband will be stationed at the consulate there.

Still others at the party were Mrs. J. J. Mack, Mrs. Elsa McGuire, wearing a cunning necklace she insisted was made by her from melon seeds; Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation and Senora de Vega, she wearing a pretty print frock, and scores of others.

Federation President To Be on Air

Mrs. Whitehurst Is Invited To Participate In Town Meeting

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, new president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, went by chartered plane to New York City yesterday to take part in the Town Meeting of the Air, at the invitation of George V. Denny, jr.

Mrs. Whitehurst was invited to participate as a result of the General Federation's defense program, which was announced following the triennial convention just closed in Atlantic City. As she was to be guest of honor at a large reception given by the Roland Park Woman's Club, of Baltimore, her home city, from 4 to 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the invitation presented complications. Even regular plane schedules did not fit in, so she chartered a plane for the trip.

Others on the program with her were Francis M. Shea, Assistant Attorney General, and James B. Carey, of the C. I. O.

Mrs. Whitehurst will remain in New York over the weekend to confer with Mrs. Harold V. Milligan, new chairman of national defense for the federation.

Will Come To Capital Monday

On Monday Mrs. Whitehurst will come to Washington to be at the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, 1734 N Street, for the first time since her election as president of the organization.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, whose three-year administration as president of the federation closed with the recent convention, left yesterday morning by motor for her home in Portland, Oreg. Following the heavy week of meetings at which she presided in Atlantic City, she and her sister, Mrs. Fay Lathrop, of Portland, who was there with her, went to New York City for a short visit. From there they returned to Washington to pack up for the journey home.

Mrs. Dunbar, because of the distance of her home from the general headquarters, took up residence here at the beginning of her administration. She remained in the Capital most of the time except for the journeys over the country that she made in order to visit the State federations, to address their conventions and confer with State presidents on their programs.

Mrs. Whitehurst, who lives in Baltimore, will continue her residence there and be at headquarters only on business.

Kenilworth Losers Entertain Winners

A contest held during the season by two groups within the Kenilworth Ladies Guild to raise money for the organization's charity work had its climax yesterday in a luncheon at which the blue team, which lost, entertained the red team.

Mrs. John W. Hinkel, 1502 Minnesota Avenue Northeast, chairman of the blue unit, opened her home for the affair. The party was to have been a picnic luncheon under the trees but because of the heat, it was decided to have it inside. Later the members walked over the grounds of the three-acre place, inspecting the old well and the catalpa tree, said to be one of the tallest in Washington, which is now in full bloom.

The guild, which is completing its twenty-eighth year, devotes itself to welfare work in the Kenilworth neighborhood. If a family there is found needing aid, the guild gives assistance. If there is illness, the members send flowers and visit the neighbor who is ill. At Thanksgiving and Christmastime, baskets always are provided for the needy, Mrs. Harvey Lynn is president.

Money for the work was raised by the blue team by means of a "brunch," a display of antiques and a benefit luncheon. The winning red team's projects included a luncheon, a "where-is-it" party and the sale of articles at the Christmas season. Mrs. William Saunders was chairman of the red team.

Members of the blue team, who were the hostesses, included Mrs. Hinkel, Mrs. Jesse Beihmeyer, Mrs. John Burroughs, Mrs. F. A. Deck, Mrs. J. Baxter, Mrs. Samuel Murphy, Mrs. Joseph Brashears, Mrs. Harry Rooliff, Mrs. Vernon Hill and Mrs. A. Donaldson.

On the red team were Mrs. Thomas Gibson, Mrs. Harry Kent, Mrs. H. L. Brown, Mrs. William McIntosh, Mrs. H. A. Lynn, Mrs. M. T. Hurlbut, Mrs. A. C. Petrie, Mrs. Samuel Green, Mrs. Jack Green and Mrs. George A. Lingeback.

Mrs. Nicholson Will Be Hostess To Pen Women

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson will be hostess at her home Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock to the Chevy Chase Pen Women, when the newly elected officers will make their plans for the coming season. This will be the last meeting before fall.

Mrs. Hester Beall Provenson, president, will preside and outline the program to be approved by the board.

The officers of the Chevy Chase branch of the National League of American Pen Women are: President, Mrs. Provenson; first vice president, Mrs. Charles Lueck; second vice president, Mrs. Carol Calhoun; third vice president, Mrs. Frances Troy Northcross; secretary-treasurer, Miss Viola Offutt auditor, Miss Mary Downey; historian, Mrs. Emma W. P. Slack.

Mrs. Provenson has named the following chairmen of standing committees: Ways and means, Miss Dorothy Nicholson; membership, Mrs. Rene Beard; entertainment, Mrs. Daisy Breau Calhoun; publicity, Mrs. Mollie Davis Nicholson.

These will be guests of honor at the last meeting of the season for the alumnae next month, the date to be announced later. Other officers for the coming year are Mrs. Preston W. Edsell, vice president; Mrs. Howard M. Lloyd, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. Dabney Jarman, recording secretary; Mrs. J. M. Cutts, treasurer; Miss Margaret Flory, program chairman; Mrs. A. S. Pilgrimage Set For June 7

The annual benefit pilgrimage of the Washington branch of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities will take place Saturday afternoon, June 7, when two colonial homes in Virginia will be visited.

The first will be Portledge, near Occoquan, historic home of Mrs. Fred A. Barnes, which will be open from 3 to 4 o'clock. From there the members and their guests will go to Rippon Lodge, estate of Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, situated on the Potomac, some miles beyond Mount Vernon.

There members of the pilgrimage will be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Ellis at a garden party from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Reservations for the trip must be made with the treasurer, Mrs. Virgil B. Jackson, 1801 K Street, before June 5. Mrs. Joseph Stiles Wall is chairman for the pilgrimage and has a large committee assisting her. Among those assisting are: Mrs. Jesse Lee Webb, Mrs. John F. Little, Miss Eleanor Fitts, Miss Angie Armat, Mrs. Edgar Lynham, Mrs. Royal D. Mead, Mrs. Chauncey Williams, Mrs. Mason Smith, Mrs. Eugene Sykes and Mrs. Charles Allen.

Mrs. Everhard Robinson Todd is directress of the Washington branch, with Mrs. William Cabell Moore, Mrs. William O. Owen and Mrs. Henry St. George Tucker as vice directresses.

MORE UNITY—The spirit of unity being stressed throughout the Nation has been expressed this season in a notable way in club elections. Several organizations which, in other seasons, have held elections that resulted in "feeling" and division among the members, this year have elected their slates without opposition.

In the District Federation of Women's Clubs, for instance, there was a close contest three years ago when Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel was elected over Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins. This year, Mrs. Watkins was given the nomination without question and had the full support of the organization in her election.

Much the same thing has happened in the Women's National Press Club. There, the race between Mrs. J. Fred Essary, retiring president, and Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, was so close Mrs. Essary won by a single vote. This year, Mrs. Tufty heads the ticket on which there is but one candidate for each office.

The District Congress of Parents and Teachers elected its new president, Mrs. P. C. Ellett, without opposition, but ran true to form in doing so. It has been some years since any contest has arisen there so the attention of the organization has been focused on the constructive work to which it is dedicated.

In the National Society, D. A. R., Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, was elected president general with no opposing candidate. This occurred also in the case of her predecessor, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., but D. A. R. elections in other years have been marked by bitter contests on several occasions.

The same is true of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which elected Mrs. John L. Whitehurst president at its recent triennial convention in Atlantic City.

Many local clubs in addition to those cited, among them the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase of which Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams is the new president, have done the same this year.

Maybe there is no particular significance to the fact but again perhaps there is. Perhaps it means that the petty differences are beginning to be definitely put aside while thought is given to more vital considerations. I think it does mean that, and I sincerely hope so. It means that the spirit of unity is penetrating the whole fiber of the country.

ART TEA—The Poe Sisters, Elisabeth E. Poe and Vylla Poe Wilson, have issued invitations for a tea honoring Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, newly-elected president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, next Thursday at 5 p.m. at the Newspaper Women's Club, 1604 Twentieth Street.

A collection of new small paintings by Miss Elissbeth Poe will be exhibited.

KNITTERS RESPOND—Myrtle-May Smith, who last week issued a call for members of a night unit of the American Knitters of which she has been given charge at the District Red Cross Chapter House, had prompt response from 34.

These expect to bring along many more next week. Miss Smith suggests that it is a perfect opportunity for girls in the Government who have time on their hands and want to do their bit in relief work.

The Belgian Baroness Betheune, who is here from New York for the sale, was telling of the hours of work which go into such a valuable piece of lace. The women who fashion it often begin their study of lace making at the age of 4 in convent schools. As they work they place a big bottle of water in front of their material so the light will be focused on the fine stitches they must make.

First sale made when the headquarters opened on Monday was to the Belgian Ambassador. He bought a huge basket of flowers. Countess van der Straten Ponthoz was on hand bright and early to preside, having sat up all the previous night putting price tags on the articles.

Red Cross Unit To Expand Work

The Red Cross unit of All Souls Memorial Episcopal Church on Cathedral Avenue has expanded its activities to include surgical dressings. The regular meetings have begun and will be held each Wednesday from 10 until 1 o'clock, under the direction of Mrs. Louis S. Greene, Mrs. Bryson Bruce, and Mrs. Robert L. Ghormley. Miss Paulina Block and Mrs. James Huntington Turner will instruct.

The Red Cross unit, under the direction of Mrs. Howell French, has been knitting and sewing every weekday morning for the past year and has received highest praise from headquarters for the quality of its production.

The parish hall of the church is open daily (except Saturdays and Sundays) for Red Cross workers from 9:30 to 12:30 and on Monday evenings from 7:30 until 9:30.

The unit has sewing machines and two instructors, Mrs. George E. Penn and Mrs. W. C. Spencer. Mrs. Bert J. Heller instructs in knitting. Everyone interested is welcome to join the unit.

Caricatures by Bolivian Artist to Be on View

The Minister of Bolivia has issued invitations to the opening of an exhibition of caricatures by the well-known Bolivian artist, Antonio Sotomayor.

The event will take place at the National Museum Monday afternoon, June 2, at 3 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis have again planned a garden party at Rippon Lodge, their historic home in Virginia, which will be a benefit party for the educational and patriotic work of the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. It will take place on Sunday afternoon, from 3 to 6, and is for all D. A. R. members and their friends. At 4:30 an informal program will be given. Mr. Ellis will speak of the latest news from Rippon, England, the home of Richard Blackburn, who built "Rippon Lodge" in 1725. The change of spelling of the name of the town occurred in 1800.

Mrs. Guy Withers will sing several songs in the garden, where refreshments will be served following the program. Chapter, State and national officers present will be introduced by Miss Luella Chase, sister of Mrs. Ellis. After eight years as regent, Miss Chase has retired from that office and will present the new regent, Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant.

Junior League Backs Program Of Volunteers

A motion approving the program of the Central Volunteer Bureau was passed by the Junior League of Washington at a recent meeting of its members. This bureau will be set up under the volunteer committee of the District of Columbia Counsel of Defense after registration for volunteers is held June 10, 11 and 12.

In passing the motion, which including the pledge of the Junior League to cooperate fully in the carrying out of this community program of volunteer service, the league indorses the registration of its own 350 volunteers, who are now and for years have been, actively engaged in social welfare work in 45 agencies in the District.

Minor chances in the present efficient placement set-up, under the direction of Mrs. W. Thacher Winslow, will be made to enable it to cooperate with the Central Volunteer Bureau's placement system.

Many members of the Junior League, with their background of trained volunteer service, are already working on various committees of the local Defense Council. Miss Elizabeth Houghton is vice chairman of the volunteer committee.

It Was Lord Halifax, Not a Visiting Fireman

DONNING A FIREMAN'S HAT, British Ambassador Lord Halifax climbed up on the engine beside the driver, Private J. W. Bunch, at No. 16 Engine company

The British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, spent 30 minutes with the firemen at No. 16 Engine Company yesterday and "was tickled to death at the opportunity of seeing this fire outfit."

He went to the company's station at 1018 Thirteenth Street Northwest specifically to thank the firemen for the show they will give the night of June 7 in Constitution Hall for the benefit of British fire fighters. In a lull of business the firemen gave him an informal show and the Ambassador said "it was grand."

Under direction of Capt. J. W. Kay, the firemen ran a 100-foot extention ladder against their building and stood at attention for the Ambassador's inspection. He posed on a fire truck for the photographers. People in London, he said, had "learned the value" of such apparatus.

The show June 7 is under auspices of the District Firemen's Association, will include movies of the great London fires caused by the bombings and the appearance of three London firemen who will come to America for the show. Vaudeville acts also have been arranged for the show, which begins at 7:30 p. m.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Scouts Will Make the Yankees a Great Team Again . . .

By Bill Cunningham

The old baseball varsity of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig takes more shellackings now from what used to be the lesser breeds. But it well may be that the thrill is only temporary. That's a young ball club in the Yankee regimentals. Many of the brethren have forgotten to remember that extremely vital fact. Young ball clubs are wobbly, like newly foaled colts, but they mature faster and they've been known to become front runners inside a couple of months.

The Yanks may not have the best ball club on earth at just this breathless interlude, but they undoubtedly have, and always have had, the best baseball organization on this and all affiliated planets. There's never been any blinding secret why they've been so successful in their particular line of business. The formula for their achievement is the same credited by successful firms in all lines of industry as the prescription for hitting the jack pot.

It's as old as old King Solomon, himself, who wrote it: "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men."

Hardest Working Scouts in Game

I'm thinking now mostly in terms of discovering and readying new talent. Scouting, of course, is the trade name. Don't try to say it's probably been mostly luck. The greatest star of all time, Babe Ruth, fades and blinks out. They have a Joe DiMaggio all ready to replace him. Tony Lazzeri grows old. Up they come with a Flash Gordon. Crosetti starts to falter. They have a Rizzuto ready to step in and go.

It's happened too often to be merely luck. There's obviously too much efficiency in it. The fact that other clubs can't or don't do it doesn't prove anything beyond the fact that they're too lazy, too dumb, or just too poor. The Yanks maintained their supremacy for so long and will achieve it again because they have the best, perhaps the smartest and certainly the hardest working corps of scouts in all baseball. They really go out and comb the celery. They don't just sit around barber shops reading newspapers.

These eight salaried experts, plus about 30 unofficial, or part-time ivory hunters, cover the country like the air mail. Other clubs send a young fellow letters and telegrams. The Yanks send one of these gentlemen in person. They are headed up by George Weiss, the Yankee farm system boss, who knows the minors from constant and intimate study like a crack broker knows what is left of the market.

The Weiss mind is really a card index of minor league names, dates and statistics. Say to him, "George, I saw a swell right fielder down in Little Rock during the spring training trip. He looks as if he had it, but his name just escapes me at the moment.

"Yeah," he'll say, "his name's Cameron. Good hitter and a good arm. Had a good year last year, but Detroit's got a string on him."

Rizzuto Is Typical Product

where, nor how, a Yank examiner is on the way for a personal interview. Take the case of the new current find, Phil Rizzuto—the real name, incidentally, being Fiero Rizzuto. There's a native New York kid who tried to give himself to Brooklyn, but couldn't even get himself looked at. The same thing happened at the Polo Grounds, where the same snap judgment that he was too small was made and passed along with the extra and uncalled for jibe, "You'd better go out and buy yourself a shoe-shine box."

That's not the way the Yanks do business. Paul Krichell heard about this little kid and went out to Richmond Hill High School to see him in action. He kept right by his warm side as he went into semipro ball with the Floral Park, Long Island, team, took him eventually into a morning school he was holding at Yankee Stadium and signed him at the age of 17—his father having to execute the contract—for a professional start down in Bassets, Va.

Ever Hear of Bassets, Va.?

The Yanks have a lot of them—Amsterdam, N. Y.; Easton, Md.; Wenatchee, Wash.; Butler, Pa.; Akron, Ohio; Joplin, Mo.; Norfolk, Va.; Binghamton, N. Y.;

PAUL KRICHELL

Newark, N. J., and Kansas City, Mo. That's their farm system, or most of it. They've somewhere to fit a kid for further looking no matter how tender his class. Three of them fitted Rizzuto—Bassets, Norfolk and Kansas City. Here's the finished product now right when the main team needs him. He has all the ball marks of a sensation.

That's the story of why the Yanks are great in one little nut-shell, why they have been great, and why they'll be great again.

Mistakes?

They've made one. That was in having nobody ready when Lou Gehrig was suddenly forced to retire. Truth is they'd had three men ready at various times. Buddy Hassett, now with the Braves; George McQuinn, now with the Browns, and John McCarthy, formerly a Giant.

But Gehrig crossed all this up by staying so good for so long. Rather than dry the waiters out with old age, the Yanks used them in trades. Then, just as it looked as if Gehrig would go on forever, that tragic disease finished him, and nobody stood ready. The Yanks now wish they had kept McQuinn. If that's a mistake, they made one.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Justice Employes Get 'Political' Jobs

During the 18 months that Robert Jackson has been Attorney General, scores of Justice Department employes have been promoted from within to positions generally reserved for the politicians and their friends. Eight officials within the department, for example, have been made Federal judges. Twelve others have been promoted to United States district attorneys, and two others have been United States marshals. More than 25 have been promoted to official positions of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, such as the elevation of Joseph Savoretti to deputy commissioner.

Some of the more important promotions in the department here have been Matthew F. McGuire, to Assistant Attorney General; Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Criminal Division; E. R. Butts, as general agent, and Eugene Matchett, as his assistant; S. T. Chichester as chief of the appointment section and Nellie Plumley as appointment clerk.

Most Federal agencies have at least one old-line employe who, though he may not be well-known, is sort of the wheel horse of the agency. At the Coast Guard that man is H. H. Grogan, technical aide, who this week celebrated his forty-fifth anniversary in the Federal service. Grogan has served as adviser to the commandant and chief engineer of the construction and repair section. He designed the Ossipee and Tampa class cutters and reconditioned and rebuilt many ships.

Interior Secretary Ickes contends that further decentralization of his department is impossible. At his press conference yesterday he explained that the department had 40,000 employes in the field and only 5,000 in Washington. "That," the secretary cracked, "ain't no centralization." It has been advocated by members of Congress that the Interior Department be moved out of Washington. Ickes pointed out that he had long ago placed the National Park Service and other agencies under him on a regional basis.

Francis M. Shore has been appointed chief economist of the Coal Economy Division of the Bureau of Mines. He is an old-line Federal employe having entered the service in 1901. . . . UFWA members at Commerce will hold an old-fashioned barbecue tomorrow afternoon at Vienna, Va. David Battle will roast the pig. . . . Merrell Dougherty, House Office Building employe, has written an unique poem, "Crosses In Flanders," which is not only about crosses, but is written in the shape of a cross. . . . W. E. Hoffheims has been reelected president of NFFE's District federation. Joseph Harry is vice president, Grace Reardon, secretary-treasurer, and Norah James, trustee.

Frank S. Fowler, chief of the Bureau of Accounts of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was retired yesterday at the age of 70 after spending the last 32 years in the Federal service. He was presented gifts on behalf of fellow employes by Commission Chairman Eastman. . . . Thousands of persons have applied for the junior stenographer and typist exam which is now open. The need is so pressing that the first exam will be held on June 7. Other tests will be held later. Talk about red tape—plenty of it will be woven by the Congressional order that will place all Agriculture lawyers under the solicitor. Farm Credit has hundreds of attorneys in the field. These attorneys, after July 1, must be paid by the solicitor. If a field lawyer has to take a trip, he'll need an O. K. first from Washington. If his secretary needs a typewriter ribbon or stationery, for example, a requisition must be sent to Washington and approved by the solicitor.

Benet Reads Poems Limning The Pattern of American Life

POET AND LIBRARIAN—Stephen Vincent Benet (left), the poet, converses with Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, who introduced him to last night's audience in the Coolidge Auditorium of the Library

A century of American life unfolded in the Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress last night as Stephen Vincent Benet read selections from his poetry in the last of the current series of readings by leading American poets sponsored by the library and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

Everything Bent said to his audience was included in his verse. He offered no morals and he advanced no theories. He strolled on the platform with an armful of books and was introduced by Archibald MacLeish.

The audience forgot about the books, for Benet scarcely glanced at the pages as his deliberate voice raised images of the past and present in American life.

He read first "The Ballad of William Sycamore," commenting that it was "one of the first things I wrote connected with American history."

In this ballad of a pioneer of the last century Benet struck the note of love of the soil common to his characters by virtue of being common to American life.

As William Sycamore lay dying he said:

"Go play with the towns you have built of blocks,
"The towns where you would have bound me.
"I sleep in my earth like a tired fox,
"And my buffalo have found me."

He read selection from his most popular poem, the epic of the Civil War, "John Brown's Body."

The importance of that war between North and South Benet emphasized when he said, "All the America of today comes from that struggle, that victory."

His selections from the work included John Brown's prayer before he raided Harper's Ferry; the Cumberland Valley as the Southern armies rolled toward Gettysburg; a portrait of a Southern lady; the death of Stonewall Jackson; the invocation to the book.

The selections drew together the pattern of American life Benet attempted: Love of soil, of home; firm conviction in the right as men see the right; sectional feuds and hatreds. Only the human anguish of war was missing because Benet is essentially a romanticist and not a realist in his treatment of the Civil War.

He turned to contemporary life, to a bitter indictment of totalitarian methods in "Litany for Dictatorship."

In our times he also finds humor, sane philosophy, as in a poem on a New York City sparrow:

"You'll find a sparrow, picking up crumbs,
"Taking life exactly as it comes."

Trade Board Asks Stagger Of Pay Days

Calls for Addition Of Two Per Month; Sen. Capper Ready To Hold Hearings

The Washington Board of Trade last night called for staggering of Government pay days by addition of two pay days a month and asked that it be accomplished by executive order of President Roosevelt.

At the same time, Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, announced he would hold immediate hearings on his four-pay-day-a-month bill unless he is satisfied that a stagger plan will be put into effect by the Treasury at once.

The Board of Trade's action was a virtual indorsement of Senator Capper's plan for payment of approximately half of the Federal employes on the fifteenth and last days of the month with the balance to be paid on the seventh and twenty-second. The board's statement, however, did not specify pay dates.

"Inasmuch as it understands that legislation is not necessary," the board declared in an announcement made at a meeting of its executive committee, "it would suggest that the staggering be done by executive order so that there would be ample freedom to make further adjustment if it was deemed desirable."

Treasury officials predicted last night that final arrangements soon will be made for institution of a system for paying employes in Washington on the eighth, fifteenth, twenty-third and last days of the month. It is hoped to have the system in operation about July 1, it was said.

The Board of Trade's action was taken as a result of recommendation by the Industrial and Commercial Interests Committee and a detailed study by a special committee headed by Francis G. Addison, jr.

Results of a survey, the board said, showed that a four pay day system would have "practically unanimous approval" although many Washington business houses "preferred staggering to an even greater extent."

Greater ease in cashing Government pay checks, elimination of pay day congestion and "greater opportunity to see improved service at peak periods on District transportation facilities" were some of the advantages of staggered pay days advanced by the board.

Runaway D. C. Pair Found in Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., May 29.—Two Washington boys, 12 and 16 years old, whose names police did not reveal, were picked up here by city police and kept until the father of one of them came from Washington to take them home. The boys had relatives here and in Bertyville, Va., and when they left Washington Sunday night their families communicated with officers here.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY ON EVE OF THE 30TH—R. D. Christiansen Says D. C. Lags In Recreation

Washington is ten years behind American cities of comparable size in the adequacy of its public recreation program, Milo F. Christiansen, acting District recreation coordinator, yesterday told the District Recreation Subcommittee.

Christiansen described the city's present system of play facilities administration as an "awkward organization" in which all major decisions have to be referred to the Board of Education, the District Commissioners or the National Capital Parks Office.

Similarly, he said, any program instituted by the coordinator may be ruled out at any time by any of the three agencies. He told the subcommittee that "coordinator is just a word" and that as far as public recreation here is concerned has no meaning.

Playgrounds, he declared, are in "bad shape" because of lack of maintenance funds, while no money is available for development of major recreation areas on land already purchased.

"If you had a strong recreation director ten years ago you would not be in this mess," he declared.

'Handed Hot Potato'

Recalling a recent controversy over denial of use of the Palisades Field House to the American Legion, Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, asked Christiansen if he had heard of reports that permits for use of the field house had been issued to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Interior Department.

When Christiansen, who testified that he is on the National Parks Service pay roll, replied that the reports had not come to him since he took office February 1, Hebert stated:

"It looks to me like you have been handed a hot potato and you don't know whether it is getting cool or not. I know just how you feel."

Christiansen was questioned about leasing of recreation facilities to private agencies, a leading issue of previous hearings and likely to be developed in detail at a session next week.

The play chief said no facilities in control of his office have been leased to outsiders and that it was his belief that all recreation should be under public control.

Christiansen pleaded with the subcommittee not to lose sight of the main purpose of the hearings—to act on legislation proposing changes in recreation administration. He emphatically indorsed a bill to put recreation in control of a nine-member board. He said the measure represents the "best efforts of the agencies concerned and should be passed as soon as possible."

Merit System Advocated

Miss Sibyl Baker, community center director in the Recreation Department, urged establishment of a merit system for recreation workers, but opposed limiting the staff to residents of the District because, she said, the city should have the widest possible choice from which to select staff members.

In supporting the measure, Miss Baker was joined by George A. Warren of the Midcity and Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens associations; Mrs. Warren A. Gardner of the Neighborhood Council; Leon Pretzfelder, Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, and Hugo Wolter, representing the Monday Evening Club, the Federal Employes Council and the Council of Social Agencies Recreation Division.

Edward Carmichael Apparently Hit by Car, Run Over by Second

D. C. Traffic Deaths This Year . 34
Same date last year 25
Total last year 79

One man was killed and four persons severely injured yesterday in Washington traffic.

Edward Carmichael, about 28, of 329 Virginia Avenue Southwest, was fatally injured last night at Virginia Avenue and Fourth Street Southeast.

Police said he was lying in the street—apparently the victim of a previous automobile accident or some organic ailment—when he was run over by a car driven by Robert Allison, jr., 27, of 2360 Twenty-fourth Street Southeast. He died at Casualty Hospital a few minutes later. A coroner's inquest has been set for today.

Major, Daughter Severely Hurt

Maj. Claude L. Neale, 38, Army phychiatrist, and his 7-year-old daughter, Betty, were injured in a two-car collision at Third and Hamilton Streets Northwest. A woman passenger in the other car was slightly hurt.

Maj. Neale lives at 1369 Hamilton Street Northwest and is attached to Walter Reed Hospital. His automobile struck one operated by Albert Wood, 39, of Takoma Park, Md. Mrs. H. G. Anderson, 31, also of Takoma Park, a passenger in the latter car, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Dr. Neale and his daughter were both taken to Casualty Hospital where he was treated for concussion of the brain and cuts. The child suffered a severe head laceration and her condition was said to be serious. Later they were transferred to Walter Reed Hospital. Mrs. Anderson went to a private physician.

Bicyclist Struck

Riding his bicycle at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest, Roy Terrill, 13, of 4602 Fourteenth Street Northwest, suffered a shoulder fracture and internal injuries when struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Benjamin Bennett, 41, of 412 Delafield Place Northwest. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital.

Henry E. Furr, 19, of 2007 North Stafford Street, Arlington, Va., fell to the pavement when his motorcycle skidded at Washington Drive and Twelfth Street Northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital with head injuries.

Running across Thirteenth Street Northwest in the 2100 block, Calvin H. Pendleton, colored, 5, of 1201 V Street Northwest, was struck by an automobile which police said was driven by Arthur Abbott, 57, of 4635 Forty-ninth Street Northwest. He was taken to Children's Hospital with severe lacerations of both legs and head.

Backstop Falls, Injures D. C. Worker

Pinned beneath a heavy iron backstop which fell on him at the Palisades Playground, 5100 block Sherrier Place Northwest, yesterday, Eldridge E. Keedy, 34, of 136 Ingraham Street Northwest, suffered cuts and bruises and possibly a broken right ankle. The man, a District Government employe, was repairing the framework of the backstop when it toppled over. Playground employes raised the backstop enough to free him and he was taken to Georgetown Hospital by the fire rescue squad.

U. S. Action Urged to Curb Fake Charities

An attack on "charity rackets" in Washington and a demand that Congress pass a law to put them out of business yesterday marked sessions of the District Appropriations Subcommittee.

A ranking member of the subcommittee now engaged in framing the District's 1942 appropriation bill, told the group he called on the District Commissioners to investigate the rackets and was informed there is no law under which city officials may act.

The attack was made on organizations that solicit funds for charity and are not required to make public an accounting of how the money is spent. The subcommittee member emphasized that he had no criticism of the 90 charity agencies operating under the Community Chest, which, he said, is "doing a good job."

Inasmuch as the subcommittee is without authority to legislate for the District, the member inserted into the record of the group's closed hearings a suggestion that a study be made by the House District Committee and that legislation be presented to the House to empower the Commissioners to control charity solicitations and to require audits.

Public welfare officials, it was learned, told the subcommittee that funds proposed for assistance of Washington's needy are not sufficient to care for employables in need of relief until they can find jobs.

Consideration of the welfare budget consumed the major part of morning and afternoon sessions. Subcommittee members, it was reported, displayed keen interest in proposals for construction of a new receiving home for children and a welfare center to replace the present Home for the Aged, the National Training School for Girls and the industrial home schools.

The subcommittee also was told of the District' need for participation in the food stamp plan of the Surplus Marketing Administration and of the improvement in the city's child welfare service.

Items for development of the Washington Channel and Anacostia flats and funds for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, National Capital Parks, the Zoo and the National Guard also were considered by the subcommittee before adjournment over the holiday.

Hearings will be resumed Monday with citizens associations to be heard probably later next week. Representative George H. Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, subcommittee chairman, said the measure probably will be reported to the House June 11.

Hospital Plan Would Cost $12,000,000

Savings Effected By Huge Program WouldEqualExpense, Experts Declare

The Health Security Administration's vast hospital construction program for Washington would cost $12,000,000, but savings effected by participating hospitals through its execution under the HSA's "master plan" would equal the cost, administrative officers of ten District hospitals were told last night.

Ross Garrett, HSA administrator, and Charles F. Neergaard, hospital consultant who drew up the plan, explained proposed methods of financing the program to presidents and other officers of District voluntary hospitals at a meeting in HSA headquarters.

The scheme, they said, contemplates loans and grants to the hospitals from the Federal Government under the Lanham civilian defense bill, expected to be passed soon by Congress.

Save Through Efficiency

The loans would be amortized in time by the individual hospitals with savings effected through increased efficiency of the new and improved plants and through an efficiency system of hospital operation worked out by Neegaard.

The efficiency system includes uniform cost accounting, central purchasing and economies in fuel, food, laundry, nursing and orderly service, lighting and the like.

In addition, a uniform price for services would be established on the basis of their actual cost to the hospital, thus abolishing the present practice of obtaining money for care of indigent patients by including part of the cost in the charge to paying patients.

The services-based-on-cost proposition includes charges to the District government, Group Hospitalization Association and the Community Chest for patients sent to hospitals by them.

Linked to Defense

The HSA, non-governmental organization representing the Capital's voluntary hospitals, is suggesting construction of new Georgetown, Garfield and Providence Hospitals, erection of a new hospital in Arlington, Va., and enlargement and improvement of Children's, Emergency, Casualty, Episcopal, Columbia and Alexandria Hospitals.

The program, said Garrett, ties in closely with national defense.

Neergaard's survey of District hospitals as a basis for the "master plan" is not yet complete, and the hospital officers last night voted their approval of its continuation. They also approved his drafting of a uniform cost accounting system for consideration of the hospitals.

Mrs. Byron Marks Victory Amid Hubbub Of Congratulations and Household Duties

Backs Defense Plan, But Refuses Comment On D. C. Suffrage

Mrs. Katharine Byron, Maryland's first woman Representative, after her triumphant return to Washington last night, gave an interview in which she underscored her support of the President's defense program, but declined to commit herself on District suffrage.

At her home, 3117 Woodley Road, the excitement of her victory almost reached the hubbub stage at times last night—with a telegram from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt arriving in the midst of visits by reporters and friends. One household complication consisted of the poison ivy contracted by her 8-year-old son, David.

Having been elected to the House of Representatives to fill out the unexpired term of her husband, the late William D. Byron, the new Democratic Congresswoman last night reiterated her campaign messages advocating "all aid to Britain, short of war."

"But what if it means war," she was asked. "I'll meet that question when I come to it," she answered.

District suffrage, she said, is "too controversial" for her to commit herself on until she had had more opportunity to consider it.

Although she learned more about public speaking in her campaign, she confessed last night that she meant to be a listener rather than an orator as a freshman in Congress. She credited some of the votes she won to her boys' music, as well as to her own informal talks and her tireless handshaking.

Three of the five sons went on the closing "caravan tour" with her, played their musical instruments and paraphrased a song which they called "Beautiful Ka-a-aty." The miners, especially, lapped it up, she said.

Last night the new Congresswoman looked more motherly than official, as her household revolved about her. When she went upstairs to tuck 3-year-old Louis, in bed, she noticed that he was hobnobbing with a large gray toy elephant which looked suspiciously Republican. She snatched it away before the newspaper photographers' cameras went into action.

MOTHER'S MOST ARDENT SUPPORTER—It just wouldn't seem right to 3-year-old Louis McComas Byron if his mother, Mrs. Katharine Byron, Maryland's first Congresswoman, didn't read him a bedtime story

Louis, she explained, is the namesake of her grandfather, the late Louis McComas, who was Congressman from the same district that she now represents, although he was a Republican.

Last night the outstanding message of felicitation to Mrs. Byron was the telegram signed "Eleanor Roosevelt" which said: "Congratulations on your election and every good wish for a successful future."

Mrs. Byron did not know when she would be sworn in, but she surmised that it will be the early part of next week, soon after the Governor of Maryland makes the count official.

Bathing Suits Help Army Build Bridge

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 29 (AP).—Bridge building in bathing suits took up the last two days of training of the 121st Engineers' Regiment before the holiday week-end.

First fording the steram in assault boats, the engineers laid pontoon bridges across the Patapsco River in Patapsco State Park. Bathing suits were official because the stream's depth was too great to permit the soldiers to work in regular uniforms and hip boots.

It was the first bridge building work for the 490 selectees in the Washington regiment, commanded by Col. John W. Oehmann.

Approximately 20,000 officers and men of the Army cantonment began a three-day holiday tonight. There will be no special Memorial Day observance, either in the post's Regular Army area or in the Twenty-ninth Division, except that prescribed by military regulations.

Meantime, the Twenty-ninth Division announced the following promotions:

To Major:
Capt. James H. Minter, 116th Infantry, from Martinsville, Va.

To Captain:
First Lieut. Herbert H. Butler, 110th Field Artillery, from Baltimore.

To First Lieutenant:
William W. Townes, Jr., 176th Infantry, from Petersburg, Va.; John W. P. Graham, 176th Infantry, from Richmond, Va.; Douglas L. Cliney, 176th Infantry, from Richmond; Albert R. Morris, Jr., 176th Infantry, from Richmond; Wallace E. Stanley, 176th Infantry, from Richmond; Charles H. Kidd, 116th Infantry, from Roanoke, Va.; Taylor N. House Unit Moves On Norfolk Naval Base Projects

By the Associated Press

The House Naval Affairs Committee reported a naval public works bill (H. R. 4839) to the House yesterday carrying authority for $2,200,000 in new Virginia projects, and simultaneously President Roosevelt submitted supplemental appropriation estimates to carry out the work.

The bill would authorize, and the estimates called for, $1,700,000 to expand facilities at the Norfolk Training Station, and $500,000 to replace the marine barracks building at the Norfolk operating base.

The committee reported the naval training station estimate included $600,000 for recreational facilities, $125,000 for storehouses, $375,000 for a dispensary, $180,000 for a service building, $80,000 for an instruction building, $230,000 for two barracks buildings, and $100,000 for a temporary trade school building.

12th Infantry To Be Shifted To Camp Dix

The Twelfth Infantry, long stationed in the District area, will be transferred early next month to Camp Dix, N. J., the War Department announced yesterday. Reports that the regiment, to be reorganized at Dix, would be sent to garrison an island base could not be confirmed.

Its barracks at Arlington Cantonment will be taken by the 703d Military Police Company, to be organized from 518 men and about 30 officers of the Twelfth and 52 men from the Field Artillery Replacement Center at Fort Eustis, Va. Command of the new organization will be given to Lieut. Col. Everett M. Yon, now on the staff of the Washington Provisional Brigade.

While the War Department announced the regiment would be shifted between June 1 and June 15, it was known its new commander, Col. Carroll A. Bagby, will arrive here about June 9. Col. Bagby, professor of military science and tactics at the University of Iowa, will succeed Col. O. H. Saunders, who is being transferred to the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., as director of courses.

At Fort Dix, the remnant of the Twelfth will be filled to war strength. Its second battalion, inactive for many years, will be reconstituted.

Originally divided between Forts Howard and Washington, Md., the third battalion of the Twelfth was transferred to Arlington Cantonment from the latter post in April, 1939. The first battalion was transferred from Howard last September.

Eligible Field Studied for Post Vacated by Bondy

Prominently mentioned for the welfare directorship is Ray Everett, executive secretary of the Washington Social Hygiene Society.

However, Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Public Welfare Board, said last night there was "no great rush" to fill the job. He said Bondy's successor would be "carefully selected."

Three other candidates are under consideration. They include Conrad Van Hyning, Bondy's assistant; Paul Edwards, District WPA administrator, and Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of District penal institutions.

2 Attorneys Enter Liquor Inquiry

Special Attorneys Walter Powell and Arthur Clark of the Department of Justice antitrust division entered the special grand jury investigation of Washington's liquor business yesterday.

Price fixing and intimidation of dealers who refused to cooperate with a "combine" here are being studied by a special jury empaneled Wednesday.

Thurman Arnold, antitrust division chief, conferred with District Attorney Edward M. Curran as the inquiry opened.

Army Mules Retreat Before March of Mechanized Units

1. TRAINED to haul infantry machine guns into battle, this pair of Army mules now tows a garbage wagon 'round Fort Myer, Va. When the mules were soldiers . . .

2. . . . BACK IN THE 1930's, this one furnished power for an ammunition cart. It is held by Private Thomas H. Huston, for 12 years stable sergeant of Company M, Twelfth Infantry

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Once as important a military fixture as beans, the Army mule today is a forlorn anachronism, a relic of the days when the Army moved by muscle power alone.

Though swept aside by the rapid mechanization of the Army, a few specimens of the Army mule remain, resentfully converting hay into energy in tasks beneath the dignity of veteran troopers. Fort Myer, Va., has six of them, hauling trash and garbage and refuse from the stables of the Cavalry horses in little rubber-tired wagons manned for the most part by post prisoners.

Some of these mules dropped into their present lowly station from exalted places in the hierarchy of Army muledom. A few years ago they were the motive power for machine gun carts, trained to march and maneuver like soldiers, to bear themselves calmly in the noise and smoke and dust of battle. Machine-gunners depended on them to bring up the guns and to move them out, if need be, in military fashion.

Even with the Cavalry, as they now are, the mules can have no part in the stirring events that send mounted troopers galloping through woodland trails in nearby Virginia. Cavalry transport, once pulled by mules, now moves by motor truck and the entire Third Cavalry on the march now shows not a single pair of overgrown ears wagging above its long column. The degradation of the mule is complete.

Some of the mules at Myer went to the Cavalry from the Twelfth Infantry when that regiment was motorized in June, 1939. Pvt. Thomas H. Huston, of Headquarters Company, Washington Provisional Brigade, was stable sergeant of Company M for 12 years and remembers them well.

He particularly remembers Dynamite and Dempsey and Hardboiled, three machine-gun mules who never learned to submit to military discipline and had to be destroyed or sold. He particularly remembers Hardboiled, who tangled up traffic in Baltimore in 1926 when he got loose with a machine-gun cart while the regiment was passing through on its way to the Sesquicentennial celebration at Philadelphia.

Army Plans Recreation Camp

An Army recreation camp for 1,000 soldiers will be set up on the Potomac banks just across the river from the Lincoln Memorial. The Post learned yesterday.

The camp will be used by troops in the Eastern States who wish to visit the Nation's Capital on week-end leaves or furloughs. It is the first of such recreational camps to be authorized for this section of the country, although others have been established in the far South.

Civilian Conservation Corps workers are already at work clearing the camp site, which is just beyond the traffic circle at the Virginia end of the Memorial Bridge. A C. C. C. camp formerly was located there.

Soldiers will be quartered in screened and floored tents for the length of their furlough and meals will be provided at low cost. Officers in charge of the camp will cooperate with District of Columbia officials and organizations to provide wholesome recreation for the men while visiting here.

The recreational camps established on the Gulf of Mexico have proved a great success and have been visited by thousands of soldiers since they began operations last month. Men are able to obtain complete weekends of rest and relaxation away from the grueling Army training program at nominal cost to them.

Local communities arrange swimming, boating, shows, dances and all types of games for the visiting soldiers. The Army brings them in trains and trucks from both near-by and distant posts.

Gunman Slugs Businessman In Mystery Attack

Charles Herschel, 48, president of the United States Window Cleaning Co., was recovering at his home, 611 Irving Street Northwest, last night from a blow on the head inflicted by an armed man who attacked him at his office.

Herschel said he was alone in his office at 822 E Street Northwest, when a man about 45 walked in with a small caliber pistol in his hand. The intruder, the victim said, shoved him toward a back room and his gun went off in the tussle. The bullet lodged in the floor of Herschel's office.

The man, using his gun as a club, then struck the executive over the head, inflicting a scalp wound. He then walked out.

Herschel told police the man made no attempt to rob him and he was unable to give detectives any reason for the attack.

RIVIERA MUSIC IS DRAFTED. So ingratiating is the music of Pete Macias' Band and Organist Ida Clarke, of the Lounge Riviera, that they're constantly drafted for outside parties. Ida recently played accordion for the huge and gay afternoon party that Dr. and Mrs. Pete Moran gave at their country-side place. And when Marcias and his boys were missing from the bandstand the other eve we discovered that they were around in the ballroom of Hotel "2400" playing for the dinner-dance of Hecht's Ten and Twenty-Year Club. Young Joe Cochran and his orchestra subbed for Pete, and elegantly. Ida also played interludes for the Hecht party. A few days before she had supplied music for the notable Politico-Economic Dinner at the Carlton. Such popularity!

Ina Rae Hutton and her orchestra will come to Uline's Arena tomorrow night for the first dance sponsored by the District of Columbia Defense Council. Prices are moderate and there'll be a special low rate for lads in uniform and the official hostesses of the defense council.

CASINO ROYAL MIRACLE. Once in a coon's age a floor show act comes along that makes you bat your eyes with delight and astonishment. Of this caliber is Bobby Craig's uncanny and original stepping at the Casino Royal. Bobby not only dances on stilts, he does a drunk dance on stilts. Imagine reeling and staggering on stilts! This opus winds up with a "split" and you'll hold your breath until he gets up, for he looks more helpless than a ski-er who's fallen flat, than which there is nothing more helpless. Bobby also does a bag-punching number. There's no punching bag, but if you close your eyes those tap steps sound like Joe Louis in training.

IN AND OUT AND IN. Jimmy Zurro, saxist in Paul Kain's Glen Echo band, was drafted. Then came the news that he'd been turned down in camp. Now we hear that the camp doctors changed their minds and accepted him. Jimmy's place will be taken by Bob Seidell, who formerly played at La Salle ersailles.

CONTRASTS IN VISITORS. Shoreham Terrace. Gen. Clarence

JACK COFFEY, personable and clever young maestro of the Metronome Room

C. Marshall playing the genial host to a party of 35 verra important looking people . . . Hi Hat. Buddy Baer looking as undamaged as though he'd never been near a Louis mitt and signing autographs by the score . . . Anchor Room. Barrington Sharma, the handsome Hindu-Italian singer recently heard at the Shoreham and the Capitol Theater, with his adroit lady manager, Mabelle Jennings. He delighted folks with an impromptu rendition of "Paloma" . . . Lotus. A big table of out-of-town high school boys and girls enjoying the floor show. A coterie of Eastern Star ladies. And, believe it, or believe it not, a party from St. Elizabeths! It included a large group of the hospital staff and was in compliment to a young nurse about to leave the organization. . . Plymouth. Twenty Kappa Gamma girls pitching in sans knives, sans forks. For they were dining on "chicken in the rough."

Bertie Hellman, who pianos so exquisitely at the Neptune Room, is also a chef-ess. She invaded the Neptune kitchens on Wednesday and concocted a luncheon masterpiece that looked like a birthday cake but turned out to be the ultimate glorification of the sandwich loaf. Every one of her guests came up for "seconds."

"THE HUTSUT SONG," newest melodic mystery of double-talk, figures dizzily in Jack Coffey's current Metronome Room floor show. It's supposed to be Swedish double-talk, but you can't prove it by us . . . Another diller is the impression of Abbott and Costello trying to find their way around Washington. It's done by Pat Murphy and Sidney Foster . . . Beverly Blayne's "Memory Book Song" this week is "More Than You Know" . . . Young Maestro Coffey is laying splendificent radio plans for mid-summer.

DECORATORS' CORNER. The Rainbow Room is looking no end cool and summery in its new white and green drapes . . . Paul Young is planning to do over his Romany Room this summer. Why, we don't know, for its present setting of pale beige and gold and fabulous murals is completely charming. . . . The Silver Fox has the most Pan-Americanish bar around town. It's of blue, red and orange leather.

PERFECT TEAMWORK. Harry Mitchell, leader of the Chordsmen at Mayfair, makes all the vocal arrangements for the group. Jimmy Doyle, the electric guitarist, does the instrumental arranging. The result of this apportionment of melodic chores is perfect and highly interesting. Vocals are strictly modern and you'll never hear a suggestion of "barbershop chord"—even in "Sweet Adeline." And the instrumental numbers have a tang, whether it's "Stardust" or "Beal Street Blues."

Evelyn Scott, highly brilliant young violinist of Ciro's Famous Village, has composed several charm-packed numbers. You'll enjoy them, also her own arrangement of "Play, Fiddle, Play."

FOR POLISHED DANCE MUSIC. Dick Wilson's new Society Orchestra on the Starlight Roof. Very light and sparkling, in what might be called the Park Avenue preferred style . . . Dick Koons' Orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge. While this band goes in for many novelties and glee club singing, it specializes preeminently in danceable music with the frothy touch . . . Carr and and Don's Band and the Trio Lirico at the Madrillon are an outstanding combo of New York and Latin-American dance music. They have a grand trick of blending in the last notes of the Carr and Don music, with the beginning of the Trio Lirico session to form unbroken rhythm.

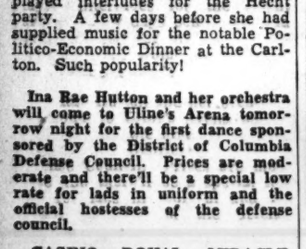
KAVAKOS GRILL DOINGS. Kelly Dressel, smart new drummer with Vincent Rose's band, is a former vaudeville performer, used to work with a magician . . . Nell Deacon is now going into her third month as singing mistress of ceremonies.

RIVER BENDING is a prize week-end pastime. Tonight is "Harvest Night" and the lucky ones will receive prizes of home made pies and baskets of fruit after an evening of dancing to George Stein's music. You'll enjoy the cool drive to River Bend, too.

IDEAS FOR LUNCHEON. Olmsted's Grill is air conditioned, near to all the theaters and the food will make your palate verree happy . . . At the Parrot you can have your luncheon in a beautiful garden . . . Hogate's is noted for its sea food and you can see the Lincoln and Jefferson memorials and the Washington Monument from its waterfront windows . . . Luncheon in the air-cooled King Cole Room on Saturday is made more delightful by Evelyn Knight's songs.

The draft made heavy inroads on Rodd Raffell's youthful Nightingale Band during the spring and early summer. But the gaps have all been filled with clever and promising youngsters.

BOULEVARD FARMS will hold a weekend fun carnival. Bill Stevens' Band will play for dancing tonight and tomorrow, with Dick Leslie as the clowning master of ceremonies and a return engagement of songstress Jacqueline Fedder. There'll also be a floor show tomorrow night.



Capudine acts fast because it's liquid—nothing to dissolve—no delay. 40 years' use proves its reliability. Follow directions on label. 10c, 30c, 60c. All druggists.

Max Schmeling Had Real Claim to Fame

Max Schmeling's reported death in a British prison camp is a sharp reminder that he was the only man ever to keep Joe Louis on the floor. The dark-visaged German will never go down as one of the great heavyweight champions of the world but in his time he was a potent figure of the prize ring industry.

POVICH

Ironically, Schmeling achieved as a beaten champion more fame than ever accrued to him while he was winning or holding the title. As champion he was under something of a cloud, having won the title while successfully claiming a foul. He was stigmatized until the Joe Louis fight developed, when he rocketed into fame as Louis' conqueror by a knockout.

Louis was not holding the title at the time, but he was recognized generally as the uncrowned champion of the world. Consensus was that the first time he got a shot at Jim Braddock's title, he'd win it without too much trouble. Eventually, he did, of course, but in those pre-title days for Louis they brought Schmeling across from the other side to give Louis one more build-up match. Schmeling was supposed to be a soft touch.

The Teuton long since had passed his peak and he was to be merely another trial horse for Louis. After losing the title to Jack Sharkey on points, Schmeling got himself thoroughly licked by Steve Hamas, a collegian not long out of Penn State. The Louis forces could be forgiven that they were taking no great chances in taking on the aging Schmeling.

Der Maxie Hit His Stride in Fourth

It was the era when Louis was winning his fights even before he stepped into the ring. Max Baer and a succession of the Brown Bomber's opponents had lately been overcome with palsy in the dressing rooms and Louis was finding himself opposed, usually, by quavering hulks. In Schmeling's camp as the fight neared, there was no great show of confidence by the big German.

In fact, at the end of the first round of the Louis fight, Schmeling wobbled back uncertainly to his corner after taking most of Louis' fire and showed no liking for the battle. "Dot Louis can hit," he mumbled to his trainer, Max Machon. His handlers were angry at Schmeling. He hadn't attempted to fight much in that first round and Machon ranted at him. "You can hit, too, Max," he shouted into Schmeling's ear. "But you cannot hit him if you do not try to hit him."

One of the talents Schmeling always did own was the ability to sharpshoot with his right hand and when in the fourth round one of his rights dumped Louis on the floor Max took renewed interest in the battle. He began to stalk the dazed Louis and kept shooting with his right hand. In the twelfth round it was Schmeling the winner by a knockout.

Schmeling might have been the first champion in history to regain a lost title, if Champion Jimmy Braddock had consented to risk his title against the German. Braddock was even older than Schmeling, and never had rated with Max as puncher. Schmeling seemed to deserve a shot at Braddock's crown at least ahead of Louis, who eventually did get it.

But Braddock, patiently waiting around for only one more big gate, wanted his farewell fight to be with Louis, not Schmeling. The Detroit Negro would draw better, especially in Chicago, Louis' adopted city, and Braddock could be forgiven for picking his opponent with a view to the profits. He waited around for a year while Louis, with another succession of quick knockout victories, re-built his prestige. But by all logic, Schmeling should have been in the ring against Braddock that night in Chicago when Louis knocked the champion out in nine rounds.

Louis' Revenge Broke All Speed Records

That second Schmeling-Louis affair, staged after Louis became champion, increased Schmeling's fistic fame in a negative sort of way. It was one of the speediest pieces of revenge that the prize ring ever saw, particularly on the part of a champion who wanted to wipe out a stain on his record. Within 2 minutes and 40 seconds Louis left Schmeling a beaten hulk.

There was no more surprising turn-about than that second Louis-Schmeling bout. Max was supposed to be the one type of fighter who could lick Louis—a clever boxer who could sharpshoot with his right hand. But Louis permitted Schmeling to use none of his cleverness that night. He stormed after his one-time conqueror with the most furious attack he has ever unleashed in any of his bouts, and rendered him helpless with body blows. Louis' handlers have declared since that Schmeling was the only man Louis was ever mad at.

Maybe that's another sort of a distinction that accrued to Schmeling—the fact that he was the only opponent Louis acually disliked. But Schmeling was the first man to set the style of dumping Louis on the floor and was the only guy who could keep him there.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Indianapolis, May 29.—The world's biggest and most aromatic picnic will be held here tomorrow. For the usual added attraction there will be a 500-mile automobile race around the old 2½-mile oval, featuring 31 native sons. But the picnic's the thing.

CONSIDINE

The crowd will be officially overestimated at 160,000. The promoters, following the lead of the Kentucky Derby promoters, won't reveal the exact attendance or the amount of the gate—except to that overpoweringly inquisitive man from the Internal Revenue Bureau. The gate must be enormous. It costs $2 to get inside the vast place, plus the price of a seat or auto-parking space, and some of these tickets go as high as $27.50. That there hasn't been a closer scrutiny of the exact facts and figures by the press and public, in respect to the Kentucky Derby and tomorrow's gas classic is a tribute to Col. Matt Winn and to Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, two nice guys with clean reputations. They run these two shows.

Capt. Rickenbacker won't be here tomorrow. He's still confined to his bed in Atlanta from the effects of that February plane crash. Eddie has lived cheerfully through a hellish beating, but will feel a lot worse tomorrow for missing one of his few Speedway events since he drove in them himself nearly 30 years ago than he'll feel over his broken hip, ribs and concussions.

They love the World War ace out here, for he has remained one of them. He knows the language of the grease monkeys in the racing pits. He knows why the eyes of good drivers are set so deep in their heads. He knows why they can never keep their hands still, why they gulp each cigarette as if it were their first of the day, and why they don't talk much about the things that go on in their heads.

The drivers sent telegrams to Eddie today, telling him to keep punching, and tomorrow there will be a little tribute to him read over the loud speakers before the cannon starts those 11 rows of three cars each on their 200 laps of the track. People on this picnic will miss him.

The 500-mile race is unlike any other sports event in the country. Perhaps we are giving it the benefit of the doubt by calling it a sports event, for much of its cost is underwritten by the big auto accessory companies. But it retains many elements of sport. Wilbur Shaw, for instance, is in there tomorrow because at heart he is a racing nut. He has money, prestige, a fine executive position with a big tire firm, a family and all the other obligations and assets fit to drive the average man into a comfortable seat on the sidelines.

But he's out to win for the sake of winning. It would be his fourth victory, a record that none of the Ralph De Palmas, Barney Oldfields, Tommy Miltons, Pete De Paolos, etc., etc., ever touched. Lou Meyer, with three victories, is now tied with Shaw, who is our pick to win tomorrow's race, for he knows more about pace and track conditions than any man in the race. He also seems to have the best car—the Maserati, which is owned by Mike Boyle, Chicago labor boss.

There are others in the race who have scraped and starved and risked their necks, in the hope of some day having that checkered flag flapped in their faces. The race is professional in flavor, but amateur at heart. We'll keep on calling it a sports event. It has killed men, and when it did we thought it had little purpose on the American scene. But it has saved considerably more lives, for it was here that much of the yeoman work in the development of America's four-wheel brakes, tires and improved strength in the automobile were achieved.

But mostly it is a picnic. The shoebox lunches carried into the Speedway tomorrow, if laid end to end, would reach from one end of occupied Europe to the other, and feed it. The cloud of cooking odors from dozens of hotdog and hamburger frying tents will lay suffocatingly over the huge Midwestern outing and blend with the heavy castor oil fumes from the sensitive racing cars.

Tomorrow is the Middle West's day out. It is a dire social blunder in this part of the country to even think of missing it.

Chicago Beats Browns 4-0; Laabs Spoils No-Hit Game With Clean Blow in Fourth

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 29.—A fourth inning single by Chet Laabs spoiled a no-hit game today for Bill Dietrich as the bespectacled Chicago White Sox hurler shut out the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 0.

Laabs's hit was a clean smash between shortstop and third base. The only other two Brownie batsmen to get on base were George McQuinn, who walked in the first inning, and Johnny Lucadello, who drew a pass in the fourth.

Dietrich, who pitched a two hitter against Detroit April 22, retired the side in order in seven innings and pitched to only 30 men. The White Sox made only six hits, one of them a homer by Julius Solters, but scored three of their runs in the fifth when they knocked George Caster from the hill.

D. C. Golfers Win 6 Places In Richmond

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Richmond, Va., May 29.—Washington's 21-man delegation to the sixth annual Hermitage Country Club Invitation tournament made off with six places in the championship flight in today's qualifying round with Gene Pittman's 75 best of the group.

Pittman barely missed a 10-foot putt on the eighteenth green which would have put him in a four-way tie for medal honors with three host-city players.

As it was, Don O'Brien, captain of the Georgetown University golf team in 1933; Harry Thompson, State Open champion in 1930, and Bill Tomlinson, a former host club titlist, deadlocked with one-over par 74's. Thompson's round included a hole-in-one on the 151-yard fourth.

Scoring was well over expectations over the par 73 course, which was baked brown due to a burning sun and little rain over the past few weeks. Not one player in the crack starting field of 118 was able to reach par figures, and among the high scorers was Russ Hollebaugh, Washington's 1939 champion, who took 44 putts, and Harry G. Pitt, who was 11 over par on the back nine. Both had 86.

Bogart Third

Second low scorer from the Nation's Capital and third in the tournament was Ralph Bogart, the 21-year-old Chevy Chase invitation titlist, who played spotty golf, but was only 3 over par with a 76.

The other Washington qualifiers in the championship sixteen were Earle Skinker, the Columbia Club youngster who had all 4s and 5s for a 77, Manor's southpaw stroker; Earl McAleer, who was consistent with 38, 39—77, and M. Parker Nolan, the Maryland State champion, who was four over par for the first five holes, but played perfect golf from there home for a 77. Charley Malone, the big Redskin end, made the grade with a 78 despite a 7 on a par 4 hole. Malone drove the green on the 285-yard third hole and dropped a 10-foot putt for an eagle deuce.

Dr. Howard L. Smith, Congressional, and A. C. Puryear, Army and Navy, deadlocked with Abe Bean, of Fredericksburg, Va., for the last place in the championship flight with 79's each, and Bean won in a 9 o'clock draw over the Washingtonians, as it was too dark for a playoff. Smith finished two under par on the last three holes to get a 79 while Puryear hit the ball all right but required 38 putts.

By the luck of the draw, Nolan and Pittman, who play together at least twice a week at Congressional and who came down together, meet in the first round. Bogart, who went to the semifinals last year,

Nats Play First Double-Header Today With A's

Griffith Stadium's first doubleheader of the season today presents the Nats vs. the Athletics. The holiday is bringing to Washington one of the chief causes why the Nats are in the league cellar, the Athletics having beaten them six times in seven clashes this season. The Nats thus will have two chances to break what has become a ten-game losing streak.

Bucky Harris is sending Dutch Leonard and Vernon Kennedy to the mound. The A's, who rose out of last place and neared the first division, have won 9 of their last 12 starts.

Army, Navy Teams Face Busy Saturday

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 29.—Army and Navy, traditional athletic foes, climax their spring sports season Saturday, colliding in five sports—lacrosse, baseball, track, tennis and golf.

The West Pointers hold the edge in the colorful spring sports rivalry between the service institutions and to even the series this year the Middies must win four of the five events.

The Cadets have won 35 spring sport events to Navy's 31, with one match a deadlock.

By past performances, Army is the favorite in the annual stick clash while Navy is given the better chance to win the diamond game. The track, tennis and golf matches are considered toss-ups.

Lacrosse, tennis and golf will be played here with the baseball and track events at West Point.

Cadets Are Favorites

The Cadets, with 7 wins and 2 losses in lacrosse, are favored to "take" the Middie stickmen because of Army's stunning 6-4 victory over Maryland, runner-up for the national collegiate stick championship. The Graylegs lost to Johns Hopkins, National Open and National Collegiate champions, 7 to 2, and to Princeton, 5 to 2.

The Tigers overwhelmed the Middies, 13 to 4. Navy has won 6, lost 1 and tied one stick contest. Swarthmore tied the Tars, 9-9.

Navy's baseball nine, however, has the edge over the Cadets. The Middie batsmen have beaten 14 opponents, losing to four. Army's baseballers won seven games and lost six.

Records of the service institutions in the other sports are: Tennis—Navy won 9, lost 4; Army won 8, lost 3. Golf—Navy won 3, lost 4; Army won 3, lost 2.

Starting Field in Today's 500-Mile Grind Cut To 32 as Sam Hanks Is Hurt in Practice Run

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, May 29.—The starting field for the 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway tomorrow was reduced to 32 cars tonight by a practice smashup which eliminated the speedster of Sam Hanks, 26, of Alhambra, Calif., and sent him to the hospital with serious back and head injuries.

Although 35 cars qualified for the event, the two slowest were eliminated by speedway rules so Hanks' position will be vacant.

Hanks' car plunged through the infield fence on the southwest turn at 6:25 p. m., shortly after he had gone onto the track for a final test run. He had qualified for a ninth row position at the comparatively slow speed of 118.211 miles an hour and his mechanics said the car was making much better time in the practice spin.

Connecting Rod Breaks

A connecting rod broke as Hanks approached the turn. The rear wheels locked and the car, completely out of control, tore down 25 feet of guard railing. It turned over with Hanks clinging to the wheel, then rolled over again and threw him clear.

Dr. Roger Smith, track physician, said the driver's back and head were injured but he was able to answer questions when he reached Methodist Hospital.

Approximately $100,000 will be at stake in the twenty-ninth running of the "500" over the perilous 2½-mile brick and asphalt track.

Start at 10 a. m.

Headed by Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, seeking his fourth speedway victory and his third in succession, the field of entrants will roar away from the starting line at 10 a. m. (C. S. T.) tomorrow.

And unless rain or serious accidents interfere the winner will get the checkered flag of victory shortly after 2 p. m. The weather forecast was none too promising. Scattered showers were predicted.

A crowd of 150,000 is expected to watch the battle of men and motors around the 2½-mile brick and asphalt track. The winner's speed may be as high as 2 miles a minute.

New Record Expected

The vanguard of the crowd began to arrive today. Tonight automobiles were lined up for miles in all directions from the 400-acre speedway grounds, awaiting opening of the gates at 6 a. m.

Predictions were plentiful that a

White Sox Hire Ben Chapman, Nats' Cast-Off; Sell Rosenthal

Indians Purchase Sox Outfielder And Ship Howell

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 29.—The Chicago White Sox, seeking more batting power, sold Outfielder Larry Rosenthal to the Cleveland Indians today and hired the veteran Ben Chapman to replace him.

Rosenthal, 29 years old and a weak hitter, has been a reserve with the Sox for five years. The Indians made room for him by shipping Murray Howell back to Baltimore, of the International League, from which club they obtained him last fall.

Chapman was a free agent, having been unconditionally released by Washington a few days ago. He is expected to report Saturday.

Manager Jimmy Dykes said the temperamental 32-year-old outfielder would be inserted in the lineup at once, playing center field and leading off the batting order.

"I have always liked Chapman's playing," Dykes said. "I think he'll do us a lot of good. I know he has beat us in plenty of ball games in the past."

Chapman started his big league career with the New York Yankees in 1930, where Manager Joe McCarthy converted him from an infielder to an outfielder. After six years there he began traveling and has played with Boston, Cleveland and Washington in his 12 years in the circuit. He has a lifetime batting average of .306 and has led the league in stolen bases four times.

Net 'Unknown' Gains National SemifinalBerth

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 29.—The "great unknown" of the current National Tennis Tournament did it again today.

John Faunce, unheralded entrant from Hollywood who caused such a stir Tuesday by eliminating the great Don Budge, advanced to the singles semifinals by defeating Karel Kozeluh, the bounding Czech from Greenwich, Conn., 1—6, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3, 6—2.

As the scores indicate, it was a blistering match in which Kozeluh, three times professional champion, could not overcome Faunce's inspired play. Faunce, 26, who has been a pro only four years and says he just "dabbled" at tennis as an amateur, was 5—3 down in the third set, yet rallied to win the next four games and sweep on to victory in the last two sets.

Dick Skeen, also of Hollywood, qualified to meet Faunce in the semifinals by defeating Joe Whalen, Coral Gables, Fla., 6—2, 6—4, 6—4. The other singles semifinals match pits Fred Perry against Keith Gledhill.

Indians Beat Tigers, 9-0, End Slump

Rapid Robert Runs Scoreless Inning Streak to 29 as He Whiffs Eight

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 29.—Rapid Robert Feller today improved his reputation as Cleveland's slump breaker by blanking the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 0, for his tenth victory of the season and extending to 29 his string of scoreless innings.

In recording his fifth consecutive victory and third straight shutout, Feller permitted only two Tigers to advance beyond first base while scattering seven singles. He was invincible where in three straight defeats Tribe hurlers had been belted by Detroit for 34 hits totaling 61 bases.

To match Feller's performance, the Indians blasted Tommy Bridges and Floyd Giebell, their 1940 nemesis, for 13 hits, including Ken Keltner's fourth-inning homer, his sixth of the year. Roy (Stormy) Weatherly gathered four safeties, two of them doubles.

The Iowa farmboy fanned eight in gaining his third triumph over the team that defeated him five times last season. In the second inning Pinky Higgins reached third with one out on a single, error and passed ball, but Feller retired the side by whiffing Birdie Tebbetts and Eric McNair.

In the third Rookie Pat Mullin, hitting safely in his eleventh consecutive game, singled and stole second base. Feller picked him off the bag and thereafter the Tigers never ventured beyond first.

Bridges was lifted for a pinch-hitter after yielding five runs in as many innings on eight blows, and Giebell was touch for four runs on five hits. Doubles by Weatherly and Jeff Heath along with a single by Gerald Walker figured in the three-run fifth that ended Bridges' stay.

Rain Halts 5-Run Yankee Rally, Nats Gain 2-2 Deadlock

Heavens Help Griffs Avert Another Loss

Sundra Pounded In First of Sixth; Game Is Called, Score Reverts

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The heavens were moved to compassion for the Nats yesterday, and there is no eleventh straight defeat to report. The Yankees were violently mauling th Nats about in the sixth inning when a sudden rainstorm drenched the premises at Griffith Stadium and washed out five Yankee runs.

The score reverted to a 2-to-2 tie when the Yankees learned sadly that the game had been called on account of rain after an hour's wait for the downpour to stop. For the Nats, it was no less than providential.

In that same sixth inning, before a wind of storm proportions whipped up the driving rain, the Yankees had rushed five runs across the plate against big Steve Sundra to break what had been a 2-to-2 tie. Manager Bucky Harris was scanning the darkening skies hopefully as the clouds brought promise of rain.

Two Yankees were out and Tom Henrich was at bat in the seventh when Umpire Ed Rommel, feeling the rain pelting his neck, called off hostilities to the joy of the Nats.

There was jockeying between Managers Harris and McCarthy before the game was called off. Harris, in an obvious attempt to delay matters until the rain could arrive in force, changed pitchers to take advantage of the time given Walter Masterson to warm up on the mound after replacing Sundra.

As Masterson started to pitch, Yankee Johnny Sturm, who was on first base, seemingly attempted to steal second while Masterson was holding the ball. He was retired, and Harris rushed to the plate to protest to Rommel that the Yankees were deliberately trying to get themselves out in an effort to complete the inning.

Rommel waved down that protest but two pitches later he called the game off.

Sundra was locked in something of a pitcher's duel with left-handed Marius Russo, of the Yanks, before the New York club burst through with its ill-fated five-run inning in the sixth. Twice George Archie drove runs across the plate to keep the Nats in the ball game.

Archie's triple against the right field wall that followed Sturm's error on Travis' grounder with two out, set the Nats up in a 1-0 lead in the third inning, but the Yankees tied the score in the fourth. DiMaggio singled and scored on singles by Gordon and Crosetti.

Yanks Take Lead

In the fifth the Yanks moved into a 2-1 lead. Tom Henrich simply hit a home run over the right field wall with two out and the bases empty, even as he had done the night before.

Singles by Lewis and Cramer set the tying run in motion for the Nats in the fifth and Archie again got a run home with a single to left to tie the game at 2-2.

Sundra invited trouble when he walked Keller to open the sixth, and it began to multiply. Gordon beat out a bunt for a hit when Bloodworth vainly waited for it to roll foul, and the next play baffled everybody. Rosar flied into left field, and George Case, after racing back to the fence, suddenly discovered that the wind had blown the ball back toward the infield. Yankee runners were holding their bases, and the ball dropped safely for a single with nobody scoring.

Sundra wild-pitched Keller across the plate for the first run of the inning, and then filled the bases again by walking Crosetti. Russo, himself, doubled two more runs home with a drive down the left-field line, and Sturm singled off Archie's glove to produce another. The fifth run of the inning scored on Rolfe's fly to Lewis and the Yanks had a 7-2 lead.

Then, happily for the Nats, it began to rain, and the boys had an entirely new appreciation of the wonders of nature.

Fishing with JACK BELL

SPECIAL WEEKEND WEATHER REPORT

Fresh northeast winds and considerable cloudiness Friday; outlook for Saturday moderate easterly winds and mostly cloudy weather, slight change to slight showers.

JACK BELL

The black bass season opened this morning here in the District of Columbia waters. No license is required to fish in the Potomac River up to Chain Bridge. Fishing in the Tidal Basin is permitted only by permit, which may be obtained upon application from Miss Mayfield, Room 1211, Department of Interior, Eighteenth and D Streets N. W.

During the season many very fine bass are caught along the seawall of the Potomac River and Tidal Basin. Fishing is allowed with either natural bait or artificial bait. It is interesting to watch many of the natural bait fishermen at either place, who fish with a line attached to a trick umbrella spline with an alarm bell perched on top. When a fish takes the bait the alarm bell awakens the angler . . . and he usually is asleep. One can spend many leisure hours fishing with bait or he may keep himself very busy and get exercise by casting.

It is regrettable, though, that the Potomacc River and Tidal Basin are so polluted. If you should catch any bass and decide to keep them, by all means skin and fillet them. It is also advisable to soak the meat a few hours in water to which some vinegar and a pinch of baking soda have been added; it will help the flavor.

Holiday anglers who do not care to drive out on the crowded highways will do well to try it here at home. Try catching those big channel catfish out of the fast water above Chain Bridge. Some also are caught below.

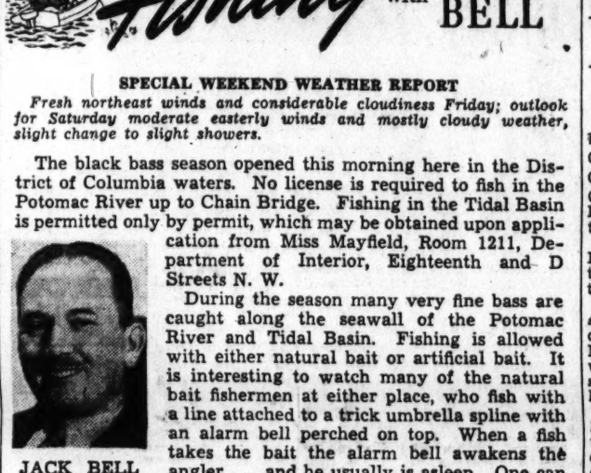
In the lower Potomac around Piney Point and Point No Point Light, out of Ridge, excellent catches of hardheads are made. Capt. Taft, of Ridge, called yesterday to tell us anglers are coming in with as many as 300. One boat came in with a catch of 32 trout or weakfish in addition to their catch of hardheads.

Broomes Island and Benedict on the Patuxent River are still the hot spots.

Anglers will find hardheads biting most anywhere along the bay.

Capt. Tony Seaman reports taking out a party from Leahsville, N. C., to Morehead Inlet who caught 200 bonita, the largest weighing four pounds. He reports there are plenty of them to be caught trolling. Good catches of bonita are also reported from Southport, N. C.

Orton Lake on the famed plantation between Southport and Wilmington, N. C., has been opened to the public for the first time. It is a 1,300 acre late teeming with bass, pike, perch, and bream. Boats with guides are available, fee $5 daily for boat and guide for one person, $8 for two anglers, $10 for three. The lake is resplendent with water lilies and is a bird lovers paradise, abounding in heron and osprey. Some alligators may also be seen in the lake.



Capt. Talbott E. Bunting, of Ocean City, Md., reports having a party of anglers from Havre de Grace, Md., including L. H. Klair and his brother, who caught 296 porgies and sea bass. The bass were all of a good size. Trout or weakfish are also beginning to show up in numbers.

The surf casters off Ocean City are having their inning now. Channel bass are striking and a few blues are showing up also.

Fishing has opened up strong in the Delaware Bay. Off of Highland Beach, N. J., big drum are running. Thursday night 14 were caught, and again Friday night 16. Mrs. Calvin H. Kimble, of Wildwood, N. J., landed a nice one of 65 pounds—it is good to hear of the weaker sex catching big fish—and it is getting quite frequent.

The prize-winning fish story of the week comes from Louise R. Davis, of 1368 Euclid Street:

When I was a girl in Oregon, we youngsters used to combine apple eating, ice skating, and fishing into an enjoyable outing. On one such occasion, the boys dug up a hill of apples, and we started out. After eating and skating for a while, the boys dug holes in the ice and started fishing, and that's when the excitement really began. Three of them hooked big pickerels at the same time, and when they started pulling them in the fish stuck up their back fins to resist capture, and literally began to cut the ice in strips. They got mad and began whirling in small circles, and the lake quickly became a mass of round ice blocks. All of us began jumping from cake to cake to escape drowning, and you never saw such a crazy, apple-throwing, arm-waving bunch in your life. We finally escaped from the fish, and the boys later stored the ice, and they not only made a lot of money the next summer selling it (although the customers kicked about it rolling out of their boxes) but we also started a new dance craze!

For that slipping, jumping, and sliding time we had on the ice was the real beginning of "THE BIG APPLE."!

Cards Slug Five Hurlers, Beat Reds, 10-9

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 29.—The big question in baseball is who will—or who can—stop the victorious St. Louis Cardinals.

Equalling a previous winning streak, the league-leading Cards captured their tenth straight game today, and their fifth in a row by one run, staving off the Cincinnati Reds, 10 to 9.

The desperate Reds, last year's world champions and this season's big disappointment, threw practically everything they had into the game. Manager Bill McKechnie shook up his batting order and used five pitchers in the wild battle.

Timely Double Play

It took the Cards' fourth double play of the game to snuff a ninth-inning rally after the Reds had scored three runs. With runners on first and second, big Ernie Lombardi lined into the twin killing.

Junior Thompson, Jim Turner, Johnny Vander Meer, Joe Beggs and Johnny Hutchins constituted the parade of Cincinnati pitchers. Turner was the victim of a freak accident after he had doubled in the fourth inning to drive in two runs.

Howard Krist, Cardinals' rookie pitcher, tried to pick Turner off second but his hard throw hit him in the ankle. Turner was forced to leave the game and he was later taken to St. John's Hospital for an X-ray examination.

Three Get Three Hits

The Cardinals scored in six different innings, with Don Padgett, Enos Slaughter and Martin Marion getting three hits each. The Reds' chief batsman was Frankie McCormick, who came through with a home run and a perfect day at the plate after being dropped from clean-up to seventh in the batting order.

Morton Cooper started on the mound for the Cardinals, but he was removed after Turner's double. Young Krist checked the Reds with one run until the ninth, when a hit, a walk and an error loaded the bases for Ernie Koy, who singled to drive in two runs.

Lefty Clyde Shoun pitched to Ival Goodman, a left-handed batter, but the strategy failed to work. Goodman singled, scoring another run. Ira Hutchinson relieved Shoun and pitched the double-play ball to Lombardi.

Carpenter, Hartnett Star As Giants Win

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—The combination of youth and age in the Giants' battery—23-year-old Bob Carpenter pitching and 40-year-old Gabby Hartnett catching—brought New York a 9-to-2 triumph over the Boston Braves today.

Carpenter gave four hits and both Boston runs in the first frame and then allowed only one single during the next eight innings.

Hartnett hit a home run and three singles in five times at bat and drove in four of the Giants' runs. Mel Ott accounted for two others with his eleventh home run of the season in the first inning and also hit two doubles.

Altogether the Giants spread a 13-hit attack over three pitchers with Bill Posedel, who lasted only one and two-thirds innings, being charged with the defeat.

I. C. 4-A Trial Heats On Today at New York

Huge Field From 41 Colleges to Compete In 65th Meet; Title Events Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—A swarm of athletes from 41 colleges will compete in the sixty-fifth annual track and field championships of the I. C. 4-A tomorrow and Saturday at Randalls Island.

The first day's schedule is devoted exclusively to trial heats, which will cut the field down to sensible size for the 16 championship events on Saturday. Most contenders are from the East and the Midwest this year, the far Western track powers having given the event the go-by.

A special feature of the closing day will be a 2-mile race around the cinders between the great Greg Rice, world champion distance merchant, and two of his favorite rivals, Mel Trutt, formerly of Indiana University, and Ralph Schwarzkopf, former Michigan captain.

Champions Return

The battle for the team championship again appears to lie between the Pittsburgh Panthers, last year's winners, and Penn State, the 1940 runner-up, but several other schools promise to be in there gunning. New York University, the metropolitan champion; Fordham, I. C. 4-A. indoor champion; Penn, the heptagonal winner, and Rhode Island State, New England champion, all have strong teams. Pittsburgh did not win a single first place in capturing team honors last year.

Champions who will be back to defend their titles are Norwood Ewell, of Penn State, winner of the 100 and 220 yard sprints and the broad jump last year; Ed Dugger, of Tufts, in the high and low hurdles; Leslie MacMitchell, of New York University, in the mile; Al Blozis, Georgetown football star, in the shot-put and discus, and N. Y. U. in the mile relay. Andy Neidmig, of Manhattan, 2-mile champion, has an injured ankle and probably will not defend.

Al Blozis to Shine

The I. C. 4-A has compiled such a fine set of records over the years that the prospects of breaking any of the existing standards this weekend are slim. Blozis is conceded the best chance of breaking his own shot-put record of 53 feet 9¼ inches, set last year. While MacMitchell is thought capable of smashing the mile mile mark of 4:11.2, set two years ago by Louis Zamperini, of U. S. C., it is doubted that the N. Y. U. star will try to do more than beat his field, however, as he also is entered in the 800. Ewell tied the 220 mark of 20.9 seconds last year.

Results in The Post's Chess Trophy Tourney

Plummer Plays Villain, Beats Len Macaluso

Lou Plummer proved for the umpteenth time last night that virtue doesn't always triumph when he defeated the erstwhile All-America fullback, Len Macaluso, in the top spot of the weekly groan drama at Turner's Arena.

True to form, Lou started the dirt and in practically no time had the crowd's blood lust aroused—for his blood. He reciprocated by hurling some choice epithets at the house, who loved it.

Just before the end came Len threw a couple of choice body blocks, but in attempting to follow one of these through with a tackle, he missed and Plummer sneaked in a back drop which he swiftly backed up with the body press that finished the brawl after just 2 minutes.

The semiwindup was a pretzelbender's nightmare that brought together Legs Grobmier and Handsome Paul Boesch in a two-man team bout against the Green Hornet and Lou Farina. Farina may be good for children, but he wasn't good for Boesch, who eliminated him in 13 minutes with a body press. With one away, Boesch and Grobby ganged the Hornet and applied a pair of arm stretches which looked extremely uncomfortable. Tiring of this, they then proceeded to plop poor Hornet in the midriff.

Leo Numa, who used to be Axel Anderson when he played in the Rose Bowl, found a body roll and press and took the decision in 26½ minutes over Milo Steinborn, and Abie Coleman disposed of Jim Austeri in the opener.

Phils Pitcher Called For Physical Exam

Philadelphia, May 29 (AP).—Roy Bruner, 23-year-old pitcher for the Philadelphia National League team, received notice from his Louisville, (Ky.) Draft Board today to appear for physical examination. Bruner, who won 7 and lost 12 for Baltimore last year, has lost three and won none for the Phillies so far this year.

Bosox Whip Macks, 6-4, Split Series

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 29.—Operating without Jimmy Foxx, their slumping slugger who was benched at his own request, the Red Sox squared a four-game series with the Philadelphia Athletics today by pounding Jack Knott for a 6-4 victory.

When Foxx was removed from the lineup, Lou Finney took over first base and Pete Fox moved into right field.

The Sockers pulled into an early 3-0 lead by belting Knott for five hits and working him for a pass. Ted Williams homered after starter Joe Dobson hit safely in the seventh and "Skeeter" Newsome provided the final Boston run in the eighth by driving a homer over the left field wall.

Frankie Hayes' triple and Pete Suder's fly produced the first Philadelphia run in the fifth and a single, a pass and doubles by Bob Johnson and Sam Chapman provided for two more tallies in the sixth. Chapman had singled and Hayes had connected for a two-bagger when Dobson retired in the final frame. After Ryba threw out Suder, Pinch Hitter Wilson "Dee" Miles singled in Chapman with the Athletics' fourth run.

Gibson, McLeod Get Prominent Places in National Open

Leo Walper to Be 1st Off Tee in Fort Worth Tournament; McLeod Plays With Von Elm

The Middle Atlantic section's six players in the National Open Championship next week at Fort Worth all will play between 9 and 10:30 o'clock next Thursday morning with Baltimore's Andy Gibson and Columbia's Fred McLeod drawing the most prominent pairings.

McLeod, the 1908 champion who is not yet sure of making the 1,500-mile trip, is scheduled to play at 10:28 on Thursday and 1:58 Friday with George Von Elm, who tied Billy Burke for the title in 1931 and Jack Tinnin, a Dallas amateur.

Gibson, who finished in the first 25 last year at Cleveland, will play at 9:32 and 1:02 on the respective days with Fred Haas, the former intercollegiate champion and Felix Serafin, Scranton, Pa.'s well-known pro.

Walper Off First

Leo Walper will be the first of this section's entrants off the tee, playing in the eighth threesome of the first round in the company of Charles Penna, the former assistant at Congressional who is now at Medinah, Ill., and Bob Goldwater, prominent Phoenix, Ariz., simonpure. His times will be 9:04 Thursday and 12:34 Friday.

Lew Worsham, jr., playing in his third Open at the age of 23, will tour the first two rounds at 9:35 Thursday and 1:23 Friday with Don Malarkey, Kilgore, Tex. pro, and B. C. Nabers, an amateur of Baton Rouge.

Cliff Spencer, low qualifier last Monday throughout the Nation, is a 10:07 player Thursday, and 1:37 Friday with Ted Huge, Ohio pro, and John Burke, Houston amateur. Two matches back Hagerstown's Rut Coffey will also play with a pro and amateur combination, Charles Miller, Macon, Ga., professional, and Joseph Bernfolo, jr., of Salt Lake City, Utah. McLeod's party is next off the tee.

Play Starts at 8:15

The field of 135 professional and 37 amateurs will start at 8:15, with host amateur, Iverson Martin, hitting the first ball. Play will continue through 3:15.

First of the big-name players will be a threesome of Jimmy Demaret, Johnny Farrell and Denny Shute, just ahead of Walper's party.

Lawson Little, the defending champion, is sandwiched between Spencer and Coffey's threesome, with Bob Byrnes and Dick Metz as partners.

The greens will be well trampled by the time Sammy Snead, Vic Ghezzi and Ray Mangrum are called to the first tee at 2:40 p. m. Gene Sarazen, Billy Burke and Henry Ransom should draw a big gallery at 2:05.

The 60 low scorers and ties will qualify for the final two rounds on Saturday.

Night Game Ban Would Close Out Minors, Giles Says

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 29.—Application of restricted use of electricity to baseball night games would be a "terrible blow to the minor leagues," General Manager Warren C. Giles, of the Cincinnati Reds, said today in commenting on a suggestion of Secretary Ickes.

"The major leagues, I am sure, would go along and do anything necessary to cooperate with the national defense program," said Giles. "So would the minors, for that mattter, but abandonment of night games would practically close them out.

"There aren't enough people away from work during the daytime to patronize their day games," he added.

Indianapolis Racer Hurt in Test Run

new record for the race will be set unless it becomes necessary to slow the pace because of rain or mishaps. The present record is 117.2 miles an hour, set by the late Floyd Roberts, of Van Nuys, Calif., in 1938.

Alignment of Shaw, Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif., and Mauri Rose, of Indianapolis, in the front row of the starting field assured a blistering pace from the start.

Rose on Pole

Rose, piloting an Italian Maserati, won the coveted pole position in the front row by qualifying at 128.691 miles an hour. Mayz will be in the middle of the front row and Shaw on the outside. Those same three started in the front row last year and finished the race in 1-2-3 order—Shaw first, Mays second and Rose third.

Of the 32 starters, only 1 is a newcomer at the speedway. He is Everett Saylor, of Dayton, Ohio, 30-year-old former school teacher. Shaw and Kelly Petillo, of Los Angeles, are the only former winners in the field.

Watching from the pits will be two Frenchmen—Rene Lebegue and Jean Trevoux—who came from unoccupied France, but failed to win a place in the starting field. Trevoux did not make a qualifying attempt and Lebegue's speed of 115.603 miles an hour wasn't good enough to place him among the starters.

First place in the race will be good for approximately $30,000. The speedway's first prize is $20,000 and extra accessory and lap prizes usually add about $10,000 to the winner's share of the spoils.

Thirty-eight persons—drivers, mechanics and spectators—have been killed at the track since it was built in 1909, but thus far this year no one has been injured.

Flamingos at Charles Town! It Shouldn't Happen to Haight

We don't know what happened to Our Man Haight when he saw two real, live-looking flamingos parked by the odds board at Charles Town. Maybe he thought he was back at Hialeah, maybe he thought they had followed him back home or maybe it was the heat and the shock was too much. Anyway, the Charles Town publicity department should have told Haight the birds are only props. The Post's intrepid racing writer is a picture of concentration as he moves in for the catch, thinking of only one thing—get that bird. We think he'll get it

G. W. Cancels Game, W.L. Claims Title

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., May 29.—Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, claimed its fourth northern Virginia "Big Three" championship of the current school year today, when it automatically gained access to the baseball title through George Washington High School's cancellation of their scheduled return engagement on the Arlington diamond.

The Alexandrians canceled the contest due to the exceptionally heavy schedule of other activities at the school, combined with the fact that they had no pitcher available as the result of yesterday's losing game with Mount Vernon High, in which the entire mound staff saw action.

Having split in two games with James Monroe, of Fredericksburg, and won an earlier decision from Alexandria, the Little Generals hold a .666 average in "Big Three" competition. James Monroe has won two and lost two, while G. W. holds one victory against two losses.

The Generals previously had won undisputed possession of the "Big Three" titles in football, basketball and track. Their claim to the northern Virginia baseball crown, however, will not be clear unless they can trim Mount Vernon High in their title series tomorrow and Saturday. The county nine, boasting 14 consecutive wins, will invade Arlington for two games tomorrow, with the Saturday engagement having been tentatively carded in the event they split the double-header.

D. C. Trapshooters Seek Title Today

Defending his 1940 crown will be Kelley Wynkoop in competition with former Champions W. F. Burrows and C. C. Fawsett. In the 100-yard battle on Saturday, Walter S. Wilson, last year's winner, will defend his title against R. D. Morgan, Julius, Fawsett, Club President Col. J. R. Hall, Cawood Oliver, George A. Ramons, Parker Cook, Dr. W. D. Monroe, H. M. Bingham and J. M. Pearce.

The Palisades nine has the use of a diamond and would like to arrange games with unlimited teams. Call EMerson 0896.

Barkless African Congo Dogs Exotic Entries in Essex Show

Strange Little Animals Able Only to Emit Small Cry of Pleasure; Bred Since 1937

By the United Press

Madison, N. J., May 29.—The Morris and Essex Kennel Club Show, biggest in the dog world, has added an exotic note to its annual exhibition Saturday.

Among the 3,874 entries at the Giralda Farms are four barkless Basenji, strange animals of the African Congo whose vocal cords permit only a little cry of pleasure, something between a crow and a yodel.

The four, nominated by Dr. A. R. B. Richmond, of Toronto, Canada, are classified among the sporting varieties for, in the words of the English Kennel Club, which granted the Basenji recognition as an established breed in 1937, "there is not a doubt that these dogs are used for hunting purposes by the natives of Africa who breed them."

The dogs stand a little higher than beagles, have erect ears, short, light-colored coats and a pronounced scowl.

Their masters fasten wooden bells or gourd rattles around Basenji necks so they can be followed in a hunt.

The dachshunds once more lead the outdoor show with 234 entries. The only other breed with more than 200 are the perennially popular American cocker spaniels, with 205.

Exceeding the century mark in entries are the fox terriers, with 145 (88 wires and 57 smooths); poodles, with 125, a new record for them in the non-specialty shows; Bostons, with 112, and bulldogs, with 100.

The miniature Pinschers have taken the play from the Pekingese in the toy group with 92 to 75.

Joe Hunt to Test Leavens in Net Match Here Today

The ability of Don Leavens, newcomer to District tennis circles, will be fully tested today when the former University of California star meets Midshipman Joe Hunt in an exhibition at 2:30 at Edgemoor.

Leavens, erstwhile high-ranking national junior player, recently defeated District Champion Barney Welsh in an exhibition. Should he defeat young Hunt, the No. 4 senior player of the country, Leavens would leave no doubt that he likely will dominate local net circles this summer.

Following the Leavens-Hunt match, there will be a doubles encounter involving Welsh and other leading players.

Tigers Meet Colesville

The Prince Georges Tigers will face the Colesville Athletic Club Sunday at Colesville at 2 p. m.

Manor Hunt Show Starts At 10 Today

Six races make up the added feature of the Manor Hunt's full program of equine events beginning at 10 o'clock this morning at Brooke Johns' farm near Norbeck, Md.

The races, which wind up the card, offer $100 purses in the brush, timber and flat events, and $10 and $20 to ponies and juniors.

Only Members Eligible

The bowl offered in competition by the host hunt is restricted to members, and must be won three times by the same member for permanent possession. All entries and riders must have hunted with the Manor hounds at least three times during the past season. Performance, manners and way of going will count 75 per cent and appointments, 25.

Although there are only two classes for the open jumping contingent, many good local horses are expected to turn up for the knockdown-and-out, which will start at 4 feet, and the triple bar, in which the spread will be 6 feet and the top bar will be at 4 feet.

Exhibitros include Dorothy Lee Counselman, Anita Mammele, Dr. Joseph Whitebread, Ralph Counselman, Mrs. Lee Counselman, Charles Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Bradley, Mrs. Gardner Hallman, Eddie Talbert, Jackie Warren, Thomas Trodden, Gloria and Lillian Crowder, Marian, Carroll and June Curran, Fenton Fadeley, Mrs. N. H. McDowell and Charles Carrico.

National Softball Loop Still Intact

Ten teams of the National Softball League last night voted to continue play under that set-up instead of splitting into two leagues. Nichols Garden Barbecue withdrew from the league feeling that competition was too stiff and the place was taken by Elite Laundry.

Because of the power shown by the Firemen, who also have knocked off Senate Beer and International Business Machines this year, the team voted to transfer the smoke-eaters to the Capital City League, Washington's strongest softball circuit.

A resodding job is necessary at the Stadium and for this purpose the park will be closed until Monday night when the second round starts for both the Capital City and National circuits. Kavakos Grill and Yellow Cab will continue their grudge fight which resulted in a Kavakos victory on the opening night. Greenbelt and Evening Star will play the second game Monday.

Desires Opponents

Alexandria's colored Eagle nine, an unlimited team, is seeking games on its home diamond. Information may be had by writing George Brooks at 1311 Cameron Street, Alexandria.

Briscuso Hurls

The Chevy Chase Dodgers, with Nino Briscuso hurling the first game, clash in a double-header with Yellow Cab nine today at Chevy Chase Playground.

D. C. Skippers Leave Today For Cove Races

At the sound of a gun fired from the committee boat Ranger, a fleet of Washington skippers today will set sail for a 13-mile race down the Potomac to historic Gunston Cove for two days of competition in the seventh annual Memorial Weekend regatta.

The race, under auspices of the Potomac River Sailing Association, will start at 12:30 p. m. off Old Dominion Boat Club in Alexandria. The Commodore's cup, donated by former Commodore Paul Tomalin, will be awarded to the first boat finishing on corrected time. First yacht to flash across the finish line will be given a trophy by Arthur A. Clephane, association secretary-treasurer.

All boats will complete the course by 6 p. m. today. Two novelty and two series races are on deck for tomorrow. Prizes for the events will be awarded at a supper and campfire on the south shore of the cove at Carpenter's Farm tomorrow night. After a Sunday breakfast, the fleet will set out at noon on the race back for the trophy donated by Dr. Ralph Barnhard, regatta chairman.

Horton Smith To Be Associated With Pinehurst Club

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., May 29.—Richard S. Tufts, president of Pinehurst, Inc., announced today that Horton Smith, long-time top-flight golf professional, would become associated with the Pinehurst Country Club in a promotional capacity and would make his permanent fall, winter and spring home here.

The exact nature of Smith's duties was not detailed but it was said he would not be a member of the teaching or managerial staff of the club. He will be associated with Donald J. Ross, golf course designer, in his new post.

Since turning pro in 1926, after playing a few years as an amateur in his home town of Springfield, Mo., Smith has won more than $75,000 in cash prizes. His winnings for 1929 alone were $15,000.

Among important events he has won were the Masters at Augusta, twice, and the Pinehurst North and South Open twice.

Hash and Mioland Head Field For $30,000 Suburban Today

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—The richest Suburban Handicap in the 56-year history of this Belmont Park classic drew a field of ten entries today, but the "big horse" will be missing when the bugle summons them to the starting post tomorrow, before an expected crowd of 30,000.

Charles S. Howard's Oregon-bred Mioland and Mrs. Payne Whitney's late-coming Hash topped the entry list, in the absence of George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, the No. 1 handicap star who suffered an injury after winning the Metropolitan Handicap last Saturday.

This year's Suburban, worth $25,450 to the winner if all ten start, as a result of the boost in added money from $20,000 to $30,000, was to have provided the year's first meeting between Eight Thirty and Mioland, generally rated as the handicap champions of the East and West. However, Eighty Thirty, last year's winner, developed a leg filing, thereby not only ending the hopes for a meeting in tomorrow's mile-and-a-quarter test, but for any get-together between the two in the near future. Mioland and the rest of the Howard gallopers are to be shipped back to California next week.

However, all the chances of a tough outing for Mioland haven't vanished. He hasn't been any too impressive since coming East, and barely nosed out Hash to take the place spot back of Whirlaway in a mile and a sixteenth allowance ten days ago. Hash ran a good third behind Eight Thirty last Saturday and is slowly rounding into top form. Mioland will pack top weight of 127, eight more than Mrs. Whitney's hopeful.

While these two loom as the standouts, the Wideners have another stretch-running star who may come up with one of his better efforts. This one is Your Chance, who races in the colors of Mrs. Widener, is carrying only 114 and will have Don Meade in the saddle to make him behave. Another distinct threat is Haltal, owned by Royce Martin of Toledo and conqueror of Mioland in the Dixie Handicap.

Shot Put Is Entered

Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put, the distance king of 1940, heads the list of the "way outsiders." The rest of the field is made up of Arnold Hanger's Dit, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Romanov, Maxwell Howard's The Chief, Barrington stable's Olympus, and The Finest, from the barn of Samuel D. Riddle, who won the Suburban back in 1926 and '27 with Crusader, the only repeater in all the 34 previous renewals of the stake.

D. C. Boy Named Track Co-Captain At U. of Virginia

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., May 29.—William B. Marbury, jr., of Washington and Beverley D. Tucker, jr., Cleveland, were named cocaptains of the University of Virginia track team today, and the university golf team elected Thomas J. Leonard, jr., of Nashua, N. H., as its captain for next year.

Marbury has been a consistent point-getter for the Cavaliers in the hurdles and Tucker a standout distance runner. Both are two-year lettermen and sons of Virginia alumni.

Leonard, former New Hampshire champion, played regularly last year but was forced out after the first match this year because of a hand injury. He will be among the Cavalier entries in the National Collegiate Tournament starting June 10 at Columbus, Ohio.

Joe Turner Seeks Pastor-Scott Bout For D. C. Show

Joe Turner, who spent two days in New York discussing a probable alliance with Mike Jacobs, yesterday was back in town with "nothing definite"—but he revealed that he is working on a Bob Pastor-Buddy Scott heavyweight fight here.

"Jacobs has all the champions tied up, but right now he doesn't really have much to offer," said Turner, who with Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, has been taking a back seat since Jacobs took over the town.

The promoter said he had offered Pastor a $1,500 guarantee. Pastor won a split decision over Scott in Dallas, Tex., some years ago when Buddy was little more than a middleweight. Scott, now a hefty 185, returned from the Coast recently, where he startled the fight world by beating Turkey Thompson, the colored light-heavy, who had figured heavily in the elimination series for the 175-pound title.

Interhigh Third-Base Theft All in Vain

Though Western's Jake Hilleary made a desperate lunge at his feet, Pitcher Kenny Curles, of Eastern, was safe at third base in the third inning of yesterday's interhigh championship series opener. A double steal made the advance possible. Rain forced calling the game in the fourth, and it will be replayed next week

Steve Andrako Signs Redskins' Contract for 1941

Steve Andrako, who enlisted in the Army Air Corps March 1, will get time off to play another season with the Redskins, General Manager Jack Espey announced yesterday as the former Ohio State star signed a 1941 contract.

The quiet-spoken 200-pound reserve center who came to the Redskins last year, is the thirteenth veteran to sign for the coming season.

In Washington on leave now, Steve learned that he is not going to be called back to active duty until some time next winter and that he is free to sign a professional football contract. He was stationed at Tulsa, Okla., and after several weeks of training in the Air Corps was transferred from the student pilot's course to that of the bombardiers. Andrako captained the Ohio State eleven in 1939 which won the Big Ten championship.

Post Wins, 11-8

A three-run homer by Pitcher Pete Ager accounted for The Washington Post pressmen's 11-8 softball victory over Times-Herald pressmen yesterday at Fairlawn. It was the Post's third triumph in four of the weekly meetings.

Dodgers Play Twin Bill

The Chevy Chase Dodgers will meet Yellow Cab in a baseball doubleheader today. Nino Briscuso will pitch the opener for the Dodgers.

Storm Halts Schoolboy Baseball Series

A good soaking for all concerned and some 90 minutes of exercise for the teams of Eastern and Western High were the only results of opening hostilities in the 1941 interhigh baseball championship series yesterday. Rain brought matters to an end in the first half of the fourth inning.

Not that it matters, since play hadn't gone far enough to constitute a legal game, but Western was leading, 5-4, when the end came. It had already scored three runs in the fourth, there were two outs and men were on second and third ready to bring home further Raider runs.

A decision on when the game will be played will be made tomorrow by the principals of Eastern and Western at a meeting with Hardy Pearce, new head of the department of health and physical education. Next week's games, on Tuesday and Friday, will probably be played as scheduled—the first at Western and the second at Anacostia.

The Raiders opened scoring yesterday in the second period, getting two runs on as many hits, but with the aid of errors by Reds Vernon and John Laycock. Eastern came back with four runs of its own in the third, needing only three hits in the process.

Finally Western chased Eastern's starting pitcher, Kenny Curles, from the mound in the fourth as it slammed three straight hits into the teeth of the sand and rain storm. Ken Deavers took over, but issued a single to Charley Hines and a walk to Jake Hilleary before the downpour.

Din Wins Battle for Chambersburg Purse at Charles Town

Palumbo's Clever Ride Pays $6

Wale Signal, Clay Hill In Dead Heat for 2d Over Sloppy Track; Double Pays $147

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 29.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo came through with one of his brilliant saddle efforts aboard C. M. Feltner's Din and carried the son of Dunlin and Clatter to a head victory in the Chambersburg Purse, featuring the day's program. Behind Din there was a dead heat for second position, the judges being unable to separate the Shenandoah Stable's Wale Signal and Capt. Ewart Johnston's Clay Hill. Only six competed in the test over the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs.

Din ran his gallant race over a sloppy track, a downpour ending the local heat wave, and it was raining some as Starter John Morrissey sent the half dozen sprinters on their way. Those who backed Palumbo and Din collected at the rate of $6 ror each $2 investment.

Palumbo, who also rode Allen Caid, winner of the seventh race, steadied Din in the early stages as Clay Hill and Zac Pam went out to battle for the peacemaking honors. Along the backstretch, Din began to gain momnetum and moved along with Wale Signal. Zac Pam tossed in the sponge at the far turn, but Clay Hill stuck to his running guns.

Entering the stretch, Din came to the outside of Clay Hill and Wale Signal was still farther from the rail. It was anybody's race from there to the wire and a beautiful battle to see. Palumbo proved the master of the situation, however. He put on a finishing ride that is generally read in story books.

A chosen few in the crowd cashed a $147.20 daily double. Most of the long price was the work of William Eichorn's Briar Bird, which came through on the rail to win the second race in a thrilling blanket finish that saw the camera place Satin Royce second and Great Sarah third. Briar Bird, with Jockey O. Hernandez riding, paid $30.60.

The 9-year-old Bill Bleiwiss, away from the winner's circle for many a day, won the third race and put the finishing touches on the double. He was handled by Jockey Albert Vesseli and paid $11.20.

BILL BLEIWEISS, closest to the pace of JEWEL SONG from the start, wore down the leader and was all out at the end. JEWEL SONG, first away, saved ground while setting a good pace and weakened in the final test. DARK ACE was badly outrun early and closed with a bold rush. WOOD DEAR showed an even race.

SEPLIN took command at the first turn, held a clear lead over HAGERSTOWN BOY, appeared to crowd WANDERING HERO approaching the finish and closed gamely under a drive. WANDERING HERO saved ground when outrun early, came to the leader on the inside, was taken up sharply when ridden close and came again right at the end. HAGERSTOWN BOY was hard ridden to hold a forward position and weakened.

VENDOR'S LIEN, going in best form, raced wide to improve his position gradually and took command to be kept to a drive to the end. POMARY was well placed after being in close quarters early and closed with good energy. RED IDOL was pulled up abruptly when shut off badly at the first turn, dropped out of it and came with a bold rush to close fastest of all. NOON STEP went to the front early, set a good pace and tired suddenly. CLOCKS, RED IDOL and SCULLERY MAID were crowded at the first turn and the race was not truly run.

ALLEN CAID, allowed to settle into his best stride, worked his way to contention gradually and wore down OLIVILO to win under a drive. JUSA JIMMIE got through on the inside to take a brief lead over OLIVILO and then tired gradually. OVERPLAY went evenly.

COUNT ME, allowed to race on his own courage to the backstretch, responded to strong hand riding and wore down JEAN C., to be up in the final strides. JEAN C. drew out to a long lead, swung wide entering the stretch and weakened gradually. BREEZING ALONG failed to reach contention at any stage and was a beaten-off third. COUNTERPASS failed to make up ground.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

A small, but select field of six has been named for the Decoration Day Handicap here today. The test is one of 6½ furlongs for 3-year-olds and up. Red Wrack, a handicap winner at the meeting, will carry top weight of 119 pounds and most of the betting money, at least all signs point that way. Red Wrack will have to be right for his rivals will be The Fop, Jungle Moon, Blablah, Indignation and Pimlico Lady. Blablah is the only one who has failed to win at the meeting so far. Fred Burton has taken no chances with the big holiday show and has two substitute races tacked on the entries. Russell Oakes and Walter Haight will air the day's feature over Station WINX at 4:45 p. m. Jockey George Cardoza got a big hand yesterday when he stuck to Glow On's saddle despite the fact the filly went to the ground and then broke through the starting gate. Those fine photographs sent out from this track by the publicity department are the work of Steve Wever, a very busy young man with a camera in his hand. Delaware Park joins the turf line-up on the Eastern front today. Racing lost a friend yesterday with the sudden passing of Earl H. Smith, of Fairmont, W. Va. He was a member of the State Senate and died en route to this point for the races. I don't know what Jockeys Hernandez and Churchill were saying up in the stewards' stand when the former claimed a foul after the fourth race, but the boys were throwing their arms like a couple of sailors wig-wagging a message. The crowd got a big kick out of the electric clock after the storm. The timepiece showed an assortment of time, stopping almost invariably at 10 o'clock. They just couldn't get it on the beam. However, those pay-off prices failed to do any jumping around. I wonder if there's any truth in the rumor that a certain man of high standing in the senatorial parade here is contemplating reporting for work in shorts. I hope yesterday's rain cooled off the two leading flamingoes in the infield. The birds were still steaming when I left the track last night. The trainers have challenged the Press Box Pests to a soft ball game next week. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—IVONIA has been showing speed in races here. Likes the route and a change of track conditions will make this one a stronger choice. SCARLET FLAME awoke last out to show a good effort and belongs close. FERNBRAKE deserves mention.

Second race—FUSIONETTE has worked good enough to defeat a field of this kind. Breaks off the rail and should make the most of the position. DANZIG comes from a barn full of fit ones and is dangerout. BILL K to take care of the others.

Third race—BROOMORIA closes ground in most races and will probably be along in time to defeat these. TAVERN defeats this kind on occasions and is ready for the best. MARIYAH has worked well.

Fourth race — GOLD SWEEP should have won that last, being impeded entering the stretch. With clear sailing and a change of riders this one will take it all. CAIDON needs a softer track and may get it. GLITTER GIRL for the show award.

Fifth race—RED WRACK is the natural choice in this field. Seldom runs two alike but deserves the call here despite top weight of 119 pounds. THE FOP knows the turns by now and is a threat. INDIGNATION has a chance due to light weight.

Sixth race—TIME HER was going to be a hard one to beat when she was carried out entering the stretch recently. With better racing luck this one will take it all. STAR STREWN is improving with leaps and bounds. NANNYKINS has whipped this kind.

Seventh race—KAI MIN has won two over this track and I've got to string along with a real fit horse. KISSIN KID gets the favored rail position and is a threat. EASTER HOLIDAY seems overweighted.

Eighth race—BROOKE HEROD is getting ready to turn back some distance company and this looks like a good spot. I'm going to string along. SUN SWEEP will be right there if the going is bad. AMERICA FIRST belongs close.

Substitute races—If No. 1 is used I'll take GRAND LUCK, DELHI DAN and ENGLE'S HOPE. If No. 2 is used, I'll take LIL'S DAUGHTER, PUSHKIN and PLEASANT LADY.

Best bet—TIME HER.

C. & P. Profit In April Rises To $175,234

Net income of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. totaled $175,234 in April, an increase of $6,606 over the same month last year. Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager, pointed out that the company's investment in telephone plant during the year advanced $7,476,959.

April operating revenues totaled $1,273,537, against $1,091,337 a year ago; operating expenses were $899,887 against $763,007. There were 286,919 telephones in service at the end of April, which was an increase of 3,771 over the previous month. Users made 36,927,000 calls during April, or 3,784,000 more than in April, 1940.

For the first months this year, net income totaled $693,937, against $637,206 in the same 1940 period. Operating revenues totaled $4,933,318 in the four-month period, against $4,317,050 in the first four months of 1940 while operating expenses advanced from $3,019,169 to $3,465,763.

Expenditures of $1,829,000 for the construction of telephone plant and installation of equipment in the District of Columbia were authorized by the directors at their regular meeting yesterday.

The major portion, approximately $1,560,000, will be spent to provide one additional unit of dial equipment in the Dupont and Lincoln central offices.

Approximately $136,000 was authorized for additional underground cable facilities in several sections of the city to take care of the increase in telephone service.

Also included among the appropriations was an item of nearly $71,000 to install private branch exchange and associated equipment for one of the company's large business subscribers.

Indicated Net Of Ford Motor Is $3.01 a Share

Boston, May 29 (AP).—Surplus and reserves of the Ford Motor Co., for the year ended December 31, 1940 increased by $10,386,726, according to the balance sheet of the company filed today with the Massachussetts commissioner of corporations and taxation.

The statement, filed annually with the commissioner, affords the first indication of the company's financial results for the previous year, no income account being made public.

At the end of 1940 the company surplus was $607,628,389, which compares with $601,239,506 at the end of 1939. Reserves were listed at $17,871,249 compared with $13,873,406 the previous year.

The combined increase in surplus and reserves was $10,386,726, which is the profit for the year indicated by balance sheet comparison exclusive of money taken out of the business for payment of dividends. No information was available concerning dividend payments, the corporation's stock being owned wholly by members of the Ford family.

The profit, exclusive of whatever dividends may have been paid, is equal to $3.01 per share on the 3,452,900 shares of $5 par stock outstanding. It compares with indicated profit of $16,402,746, equal to $4.75 per share in 1939; with indicated loss of $18,560,459 in 1938; with indicated profit of $27,426,698, equal to $7.65 per share, in 1936.

Week's Loadings Rise 0.6 Per Cent

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 866,017 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 4,740 cars, or 0.6 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 176,537 cars, or 26 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 242,475 cars, or 38.9 per cent, compared with 1939.

Loadings were the highest since the week ended November 8, 1930, when they totaled 881,517.

An increase in coal loadings was the principal factor in the rise in total shipments which was smaller than the normal seasonal expectation.

Cocoa Trade Margin Boost Is Anticipated

New York, May 29 (AP).—Financial circles said today a committee from the New York Cocoa Exchange would meet Federal price administration officials Tuesday, probably to discuss increased margin requirements to curb speculation in futures.

The trade believed new rules would follow the meeting, possibly doubling the present $300 a contract margin on nontrade accounts and setting up a close supervision over market letters.

Chile Lowers Value Of U. S. Dollar

Santiago, Chile, May 29 (AP).—Action was taken today to lower the cash value of the United States dollar in relation to the Chilean peso by, at the most, 20 per cent.

The exchange control board ordered banks to buy dollar checks, drafts, etc., at a rate of only 25 pesos to the dollar, instead of 31. No explanation was offered immediately.

Sugar Futures

New York, May 29 (AP).—Domestic sugar futures today closed unchanged to 1 point higher. Steadiness was attributed to further price improvement in raws. Sales totaled 5,900 tons.

There were no offerings of raws under 3.43 cents, compared with a spot sale late yesterday at 3.43. Distant deliveries were held at 3.50.

The world futures contract closed ¼ to 3 lower. Sales, 1,700 tons.

Heat, Holiday Boost Week's Retail Sales

By the Associated Press

New York, May 29.—Retail trade accelerated the pace of expansion this week under the influence of warm weather and pre-holiday consumer buying, the Dun & Bradstreet weekly business survey said today.

New England and the Middle West turned in the most glowing reports, with volumes estimated at from 18 to 25 per cent ahead of the same period in 1940. The gain for the Nation as a whole was placed at from 17 to 20 per cent.

"The trade spurts in most centers," said the survey, "was marked by a brisk turnover of summer wear, sporting goods and vacation accessories. Sale of these items reached a new seasonal high.

"Wholesalers were kept busy filling reorders on merchandise for current selling, in addition to handling a heavy influx of advance season orders. The situation was generally termed a 'sellers' market.

"Buyers' willingness to cover ahead on fall needs was continually restricted by the inability of sellers to accept future bookings."

N. Y. Central Gross Up $17,814,300 In Four Months

Albany, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—New York Central Railroad operating revenue the first four months of 1941 increased $17,814,300 over a similar period last year, largely due to increased war purchases from abroad and the National defense program.

Company President F. E. Williamson told the annual stockholders' meeting today $133,770,800 total revenue during the period produced net income of $6,824,800 compared with a 1940 same period deficit of $1,459,700.

Citing the problem of handling an ever-increasing volume of business, Williamson said the Association of American Railroads has estimated 120,000 additional freight cars will be required by the industry during 1942 and 150,000 during 1943.

The New York Central, he added, already has placed orders for more than 6,400 passenger and freight cars and locomotives.

All directors of the company were reelected.

Bulking large in the week's total were the huge Union Electric Co. of Missouri refunding program and sale to American investors of the stock of the hitherto British owned American Viscose Corporation.

The total included about $18,000,000 of new money raised by private corporations, almost all of it by railroads.

Holiday Cuts Week's Auto Production

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 29.—Ward's Reports, Inc., in its weekly survey of automobile plant activity says today that production for the current week will drop to 106,395 units because of the Memorial Day holiday period.

The figures compare with Ward's estimate of 133,560 cars and trucks last week and 60,980 this week a year ago.

An analysis of the June outlook, the survey said, points to "sustained production in the coming month."

Car and truck production this week is estimated by Automotive News at 103,072 vehicles, the decline from last week's 132,419 units being attributed to the Memorial Day holiday in all plants and Ford's decision not to operate Friday and Saturday this week.

In the same holiday-curtailed week last year 62,806 vehicles were assembled.

The trade publication says that with this year's assemblies, total production in May reached 547,198 new cars and trucks, which it adds, is the highest mark for the industry since 1929 when 636,250 vehicles were produced. In May, 1937, production reached 540,377 units.

Automotive News' breakdown of output this week credits General Motors' divisions with 44,137 against 54,866 last week; Chrysler with 23,624 compared with 29,532 last week and Ford with 20,468 compared with the previous week's 30,698.

Canada Imports Up $97,406,000 In Four Months

Ottawa, Ont., May 29 (By Canadian Press).—Imports of goods to Canada from overseas countries continue to show "the great strength of the seaborne power of the empire," the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in a review of Canadian import trade.

Imports to this country during the first four months this year rose to $402,265,00 in value compared with $304,859,000 in the same period of 1940, the bureau reported. The amount from foreign centers was $310,742,000 compared with $232,235,000 and from empire countries $91,523,000 compared with $72,624,000.

"The outstanding feature about imports appears to be the continuance of the trade with the United Kingdom and other countries," the bureau commented. "Notwithstanding the difficulties and stress in the United Kingdom the commodities received from the United Kingdom were $39,062,000 as against $41,525,000 and all these were goods for consumption."

Reorganization Plan Pondered For Big Board

New York, May 29 (AP).—Governors of the New York Stock Exchange are studying a reorganization plan developed from suggestions of former President William McChesney Martin and reported today to include a sharp reduction in the size of the board.

A special committee which has been working on the plan since Martin was inducted into the Army made its proposals to the board yesterday. Details were not made public.

It was understood that the board also discussed higher commissions, recently suggested as the only way members who get only commissions could break even at the present turnover of around 475,000 shares daily.

Stocks Edge Higher in Dull Preholiday Deals; Oil Issues Slip on Price Pegging Moves

New York, May 29.—The stock market today managed to make a better than even showing despite an assortment of handicaps that ordinarily would have stymied any attempt at a rally.

The list maintained its balance from the start and, while minus signs were plentiful at the close, fractional gains were well in the majority. Isolated advances of 1 to 2 points were in evidence.

Wall Street still was wondering how markets eventually would respond to the President's "unlimited emergency" decree. Bulletins telling of British reverses at Crete dimmed bullish sentiment to some extent.

There was enough shore covering, in preparation for tomorrow's holiday when major exchanges will recess, to drop prices in many departments. In addition, a little investment purchasing crept in here and there on the idea holders of stocks were not in a mood to sell at prevailing quotations notwithstanding the cloudy news picture. Helpful were a number of favorable dividends and indications defense spending would be stepped up sharply in shipping and other lines.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with an advance of .1 of a point at 39.7. Transfers totaled 345,000 shares, compared with 343,970 yesterday.

Oils slipped at the last as predictions of Government price pegging in this industry were heard and President Brown of Socony-Vacuum estimated four months earnings of this company were 30 per cent under the same 1940 period, due largely to foreign losses.

Rails never got anywhere, although last week's freight loadings mounted to a new top since November, 1930. Steels, motors, rubbers and utilities were indifferent. A brief flurry in aircrafts failed to follow through.

New highs for the year were registered for Consolidated Aircraft, Oliver Farm and Share "D," while lows for 1941 or longer were posted for South Porto Rico Sugar, Fajardo Sugar and American Chicle.

Up 1 to 2 were Dow Chemical, du Pont, Union Carbide, Savage Arms, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Chesapeake & Ohio and American Car & Foundry.

On the downside were Chrysler, General Motors, Santa Fe, Sears Roebuck, Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Corporation and J. C. Penney.

In a spotty Curb upward leanings were displayed by Todd Shipyards, Aluminum of America, American Gas and Pantepec. Losers included American Cyanamid "B," Colts Patent Fire Arms and N. J. Zinc. Turnover here was around 59,000 shares, against 48,000 Wednesday.

U. S. Government issues opened firm in the bond market today, but demand faltered and they closed about steady with Wednesday prices while other issues held irregularly higher.

The pre-holiday turnover on the Stock Exchange dropped to a face value of $4,915,900 from Wednesday's $5,775,600.

Strength was well divided among industrials, rails and foreign issues.

Alleghany Corporation stamped 5s of '50 were weak on the big board, losing 1¾ to 47, and Abitibi 5s were off 1½ to 50½.

International Telephone 5s were up ½ to 46½ on confirmation of reports the company had used funds from sale of its Rumanian properties to buy bonds on the market.

Also higher were Detroit Edison 3s up ⅜ to 104⅞; Southern Railway 4s, up ½ at 62; Missouri Pacific 5s of '77, up ⅜ to 22, and International Merchant Marine, up ¼ to 81¼.

Cuban 4½s of '77 gained ½ point to 62½ in fair volume to lead the foreign list. German 5½s of '65 were up ⅝ to 10½; Japan 6½s rose 6⅝ to 63; Sao Paulo stamped 7s of '40 gained 1⅝ to 51¾, and Canada 4s were up ½ at 97⅝.

Loft to Absorb Pepsi-Cola Co.; Suit Is Filed

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., May 29.—Stockholders of Loft, Inc., and the Pepsi-Cola Co. today approved absorption of the soft drink company by Loft and a change of the surviving corporation's name to the Pepsi-Cola Co., but consummation was postponed pending hearings on a stockholder's suit.

Under the plan, approved by more than 75 per cent of Loft and more than 95 per cent of Pepsi-Cola stockholders, each of Loft's 1,461,559 shares would be converted into one share of the new company, and each of Pepsi-Cola's 51,840 shares into 8.43 shares of the new stock.

Harriett Mnunchin, holder of ten Pepsi-Cola shares, filed suit May 15 charging the differential in favor of Pepsi-Cola stock as proposed was too low. Hearings are scheduled June 18 in the court of chancery.

Officers of the original Pepsi-Cola company were elected officers of Loft before approval of the plan and automatically became officers of the surviving corporation.

Priority Basis Seen In Freight Car Use

Louisville, Ky., May 29 (AP).—The Federal Government may resort to allotting railroad freight cars on a defense priority basis unless shippers speed up loading and unloading periods.

Orris S. Reynolds, Interstate Commerce Commission agent, told of this possibility in an interview today while here to request of Louisville firms a voluntary 50 per cent reduction in the time allowed without charge for loading and unloading.

Shippers are permitted to hold cars 48 hours before a $2-a-day demurrage charge starts.

Price Ceilings Force Further Drop in Staples

By the Associated Press

Remaining bullish sentiment in commodity futures markets continued to wilt yesterday under the force of price ceilings fixed by Price Commissioner Henderson as a part of the Government's effort to discourage excessive speculation. Nearly all the important markets closed lower.

Some liquidation was prompted by the holiday, which for most commodity markets will be a three-day affair.

New York exchanges accounted for many sizable losses: Santos Coffee closed down .07 to .11 of a cent; Cottonseed Oil, down .16 to .24 of a cent; wool tops, down 1.5 to 1.8 cents; cocoa, down .09 to .10 of a cent; rubber, down .25 to .35 of a cent; silk, down 1 to 1½ cents; cotton, down 45 to 70 cents a bale.

Hides, down sharply Wednesday on a price limitation announcement from Washington, came back .11 to .16 of a pound. This was about the only major market to show improvement on the day.

Court Approves Merger of Bay Shipping Lines

Norfolk, Va., May 29 (AP).—The Baltimore Steam Packet Company was authorized yesterday by Federal Judge Luther B. Way to acquire the assets and properties of the Chesapeake Steamship Company under procedures outlined by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Both water carriers provide virtually identical daily services for freight and passengers between Norfolk and Baltimore, and each for several years has prevented the other from showing a profitable operation, the merger petition set forth.

The Baltimore Steam Packet Company, more familiarly known as the Old Bay Line, is owned by the Seaboard Air Line Railway, which is at present in receivership and the Chesapeake Line is owned by the Southern Railway, which holds two-thirds of its capital stock, and the Atlantic Coast Line, which owns the remaining one-third.

The Old Bay Line, one of the most colorful steamship services of its kind in this section of the country, has the distinction of being the oldest steamboat line in the United States. It was chartered in 1839 and began operations in 1840, and thus is 101 years of age. It celebrated its hundredth anniversary last summer with special fanfare

Canadian and other foreign markets will transact business as usual.

Bank Excess Reserves Dip $40,000,000

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday lendable excess reserves of banks declined $40,000,000 to a total of $5,820,000,000 in the week ended May 28.

The drop, apparently, was due to withdrawal of spending money by individuals in anticipation of the Memorial Day holiday. Money in circulation increased, $108,000,000 during the week.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended May 28 member bank reserve balances increased $17,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of $59,000,000 in Treasury cash, $15,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and $46,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and increases of $8,000,000 in gold stock and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by an increase of $108,000,000 in money in circulation and a decrease of $6,000,000 in Reserve Bank credit. Excess reserves of member banks on May 28 were estimated to be approximately $5,820,000,000, a decrease of $40,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended May 28, 1941, were reported as follows:

Socony's Net Slumps 30% In 4 Months

New York, May 29.—John A. Brown, president of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., estimated today the company's earnings for the first four months of this year were $10,500,000, including its equity in 50 per cent owned companies.

Brown said the amount was a 30 per cent decrease from earnings of the first four months of 1940.

The 1941 figure included $6,500,000 from domestic operations, the balance coming from foreign business. All interest on long-term debt and general overhead was deducted from return of domestic operations before calculating net profit. None was apportioned against foreign business.

Brown disclosed the sharp drop in earnings at the annual stockholders' meeting. He said the position of the domestic oil industry had improved somewhat since the first quarter.

Regarding Socony-Vacuum's interest in Iraq Petroleum Co., which runs crude oil to the Mediterranean by pipe line, Brown said:

"Our information is that during the last few weeks of hostilities these crude oil shipments have been interrupted, but we do not know whether any damage has been done to the properties."

He reported that his company lost four tankers which were under the British flag. The Standard Vacuum Co., in which Socony has a 50 per cent interest, also lost four.

Socony's contribution to the program of diversion of American to British supply service amounted to five ships, he added.

Brown said reports from abroad indicated the company had suffered property damage or losses of around $8,000,000. France accounting for $6,400,000. Most of the losses, he said, were covered by "insurance or claims against governments, but we cannot know how it will work out."

Year's Net Profit Of U. S. Industry Put at 2.6 Billion

New York, May 28 (AP).—Net profits of all United States manufacturing corporations for 1940 were estimated today at $2,600,000,000 by the National Industrial Conference Board, as compared with $3,100,000,000 in 1937, one of the better years since the lows of the early 1930s.

The research organization said the decline was against an increase in total income from $62,500,000,000 in 1937 to $64,300,000,000 in 1940.

The conference board said Federal, State and local taxes accounted for part of the shrinkage, taking 4.7 per cent of total income in 1940 compared with 3.3 per cent in 1937.

It estimated wages, salaries and administrative expenses of the corporations surveyed at $12,000,000,000 in 1940 compared with $11,700,000,000 in 1937.

Cash dividends paid during 1940 amounted to $2,500,000,000 as compared with $3,000,000,000 in 1937, the survey said.

New York Cotton

New York, May 29 (AP).—Cotton futures today sold down 9 to 14 points, partly in sympathy with trends in other commodities affected by price ceilings.

Speculative liquidation and hedging accounted for most of the pressure. Trade support appeared on the decline.

Preholiday conditions ruled in Worth Street and cloth turnover was small.

Exports Wednesday, 6,140 bales; season so far, 960,604. Port receipts, 8,346. Port stocks, 2,381.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Wheat prices fell about 2 cents today to the lowest levels since May 12 as a result of preholiday liquidation and trade uneasiness due to war developments, approaching new-crop movement and the impending marketing quota referendum Saturday.

Except for small rallies from time to time, due partly to short covering and support of mills, the market was weak most of the session. Closing prices were at the day's low point, or 1⅝ to 2¼ cents lower than yesterday, July 93¾@93⅞, September 95⅛@95⅝.

Corn finished 1⅛ to 1⅜ lower, July 73⅛, September 74⅝; oats ⅞ lower to ⅛ higher; soybeans ⅛ to 2½ off; rye 1½ to 2 down and lard 12 to 13 lower.

Receipts of corn were large, and this, together with hedges against 83,000 bushels booked to arrive, depressed prices. Oats continued to display independent strength and at times registered gains up to ⅛ cent as a result of buying based on unfavorable crop reports, indications that soil conservation adjustments may be made at the expense of oats rather than higher-priced crops and that feeding may be stimulated by the wheat and corn loan programs.

Soybeans and lard weakened with cottonseed oil, while rye followed wheat.

Rev. J. L. Mixon Called to New Welfare Post

The Rev. John L. Mixon, for four years director of the Washington Federation of Churches' Social Welfare Department, yesterday announced his resignation to become associate executive secretary of the Los Angeles Churches' Federation. It will be effective July 15.

REV. MIXON

In his new position, the Rev. Mr. Mixon will direct the Federation's welfare department and also will the newly organized Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies serving 20 Los Angeles institutions.

In 1937, Dr. Worth M. Tippy, director of the Social Welfare Department of the Federatal Council of Churches of Christ in America, came to Washington to map out plans for putting church social welfare ideas into action. He set up a committee, which called the Rev. Mr. Mixon from his social service work in Chicago to launch the new program—today one of the best in America.

Another accomplishment of the Rev. Mr. Mixon was the establishment of a local branch of the church social workers' league, through which social workers of public and private agencies can "tackle" common problems.

The Rev. Mr. Mixon is married and has two children—Lindy, 4, and Rosemary, 8. They live at 4512 Stanford Street. Chevy Chase.

Medical Groups Plan to Appeal

Immediate appeals were announced by counsel for the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society, which were fined in the District Court yesterday for conspiracy to violate the antitrust laws.

Justice James M. Proctor fixed a $2,500 penalty for A. M. A. and $1,500 for the local group. Both were indicted in December, 1939, for their activities against Group Health Association, Inc. They were convicted April 4 after a two-month trial, in which 20 individual physicians and two other organizations were found not guilty.

Listen! with Glynn

You'll never guess what role Raymond Massey is going to play over WJSV and the Columbia network today in a special Memorial Day drama!

It seems, of all things, that he's been chosen to play the part of Abraham Lincoln in a playlet devoted to the love story of Lincoln and Ann Rutledge. It's to be done on the "Treat-time" program at 10 a. m.

"Campbell Playhouse," too, is to present a specially written Memorial Day program over WJSV at 8:30 tonight. It's Roger Quayle Denny's "The Hero," and stars Henry Hull, who, by coincidence, plays the title role in a network series known as "Honest Abe." "The Hero" is a powerful dramatic narrative about a man supposedly killed in action in the World War. Anything but a hero, he returns to his home town to find that a monument is being erected to his memory, and he decides to remain unidentified for cause.

Kate Smith is to pay special tribute to the war dead in her program over WJSV at 11 a. m.

Mady Christians and Paul Lucas, she being a native of Budapest, are to appear in C. B. S.'s "Good Guests of America" series at 3 p. m. over WJSV.

Contract Bridge

How would you play the South cards of today's hand so as to take ten tricks at spades? West opens the ace, king of diamonds and then shifts to the trump eight. Plan your play, then check with the solution below.

Today's Hand

East-West vulnerable.
East dealer

NORTH: ♠ A 5 ♡ K 9 6 4 ♢ J 8 ♣ K Q 9 6 3
WEST: ♠ 8 ♡ J 2 ♢ A K 9 7 ♣ 6 5 3
EAST: ♠ 9 4 3 2 ♡ Q 8 7 ♢ 4 3 ♣ A 10 8 4
SOUTH: ♠ K Q J 10 7 6 ♡ A 10 5 3 ♢ Q 10 ♣ 7

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	2 ♢	3 ♣
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♢.

Solution

Declarer wins his contract by immediately leading a club toward dummy after losing two diamonds and getting in with the trump king. This play of the club seven offers him three choices—to find West with the club ace, in which case he can obtain his two necessary discards on the king, queen of clubs; to drop by one ruff the jack and ten of clubs in either defender's hand, in which case one discard can be made on the established honor and another on the nine; or, if all else fails, to develop a squeeze, provided the players with the four clubs also has three hearts. This is the actual case in the hand and declarer is rewarded for his careful play.

East wins the club ace and removes the trump ace from the board. Declarer then ruffs a small club and follows with three rounds of trumps. East throws a heart, unguarding his queen. South can now take three hearts and the club king for his contract, losing two diamonds and the ace of clubs. If East throws a club instead of a heart, the result is the same.

Condensed Text of Eden's Statement on Great Britain's Post-War Objectives

Vows Cooperation With U. S. to Banish Want and Promote World Disarmament

By the Associated Press

London, May 29.—The following is a partial text of an address today by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden—the sections relating to war aims and British-United States relations:

My first words must be to welcome the great message broadcast a few hours ago by the President of the United States in which he described, with incomparable breadth of vision, the scope of the struggle in which we are engaged.

That speech is a momentous world event. By his words, the President has given resolute expression to the fixed determination of the most powerful nation upon the earth. He defined the settled policy of his country in terms which are as vigorously encouraging to us as they must be disheartening to our enemy.

To give effect to this policy, the President has decreed a state of unlimited national emergency in the United States. For our part, and I say this in the presence of a representative of the United States, we have listened with hearts full of thankfulness to the President's (expression of) determination that the cause of freedom can and will prevail.

'We do not accept and will not permit this Nazi 'shape of things to come.' In these historic words, the President expresses the determination of all the freedom-loving countries.

Must Keep Seas Free

Perhaps the keynote of the President's speech lies in his repeated declaration that the national existence of free nations must ultimately depend upon the freedom of the seas. This freedom has been maintained in the past by British and American navies and both countries have fought on many occasions to preserve it. Freedom to trade he has declared is essential to the economic life of America.

This applies with equal force to to the British Empire for, without ability of the ships of the world to sail freely on their lawful occasions no modern nation can hope to maintain its commercial or political freedom. The President has pointed the way for the free nations of the world. He has done more; he has accomplished a great act of faith and statesmanship. From the bottom of our hearts, we thank him.

. . . Hitler has destroyed the bases of political and social cooperation throughout Europe and he is destroying her economic structure. The future of Europe will depend upon how moral and material reconstruction is brought about throughout the world.

While concentrating all our strength on winning the war, His Majesty's Government have naturally been giving careful thought to this all-important matter which has been equally in the mind of the President of the United States of America.

Keynote of Purposes

We have found in President Roosevelt's message to Congress in January, 1941, the keynote of our own purposes. On that occasion the President said, "in future days which we seek to make secure we look forward to a world founded upon four essential human freedoms. The first is freedom of speech and expression—everywhere in the world. The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way—everywhere in the world. The third is freedom from want which, translated into world terms, means economic understanding which will secure to every nation a healthy peacetime life for its inhabitants — everywhere in the world. Fourth is freedom from fear which, translated into world terms, means world-wide reduction of armaments to such a point and in such a thorough fashion that no nation will be in a position to commit an act of physical aggression against any neighbor—anywhere in the world.

"That is no vision of a distant millenium. It is a definite basis for the kind of a world attainable in our time and generation. That kind of world is the very antithesis of the so-called 'new order' tyranny which the dictators seek to create with the crash of a bomb. To that new order we oppose the greater conception—the 'moral order.'"

On this occasion I will not attempt to elaborate our views about the President's first and second freedoms: Freedoms of speech and thought and freedom to worship God, save say that we realize that these freedoms are fundamental to human development and to democratic responsibility.

Nor do I today intend to discuss political questions involved in giving real effect to President Roosevelt's "freedom from fear." I will only say that as His Majesty's Government intend, as I hope to show this afternoon, to strive in cooperation with others to relieve the post-war world from fear of want so will they seek to insure that that world is freed from fear.

Free'om From Want

Today I wish to put before you certain practical ways in which "freedom from want" may be applied in Europe. We must put our own conception before the world.

We have declared that social security must be the first object of our domestic policy after the war. And social security will be our policy abroad not less than at home. It will be our wish to work with others to prevent starvation in the post-armistice period, currency disorders throughout Europe and wide fluctuations of employment markets and prices which were the cause of so much misery in the 20 years between the two wars. We shall seek to achieve this in ways which will interfere as little as possible with the proper liberty of each country over its own economic fortunes.

Countries of the British Empire and their Allies, with the United States and South America, are alone in a position to carry out such a policy. For, irrespective of the nature of the political settlement, continental Europe will end this war starved and bankrupt of all foods and raw materials which she was accustomed to obtain from the rest of the world. She will have no means, unaided, of breaking the vicious circle. She can export few goods until she has first received the necessary raw materials. Wasteful wartime cultivations in many lands will leave agriculture almost as weak as industry. Thus Europe will face vast problems of general demobilization with a general lack of the necessary means to put men to work.

No Return to Chaos

It is right to think of these things now.

Let no one suppose that we, for our part, intend to return to the chaos of the old world. To do so would bankrupt us no less than the others. When peace comes we shall make such relaxations of our wartime financial arrangements as will permit the revival of international trade on the widest possible basis. We should hope to see development of international exchange in which the trading of goods and services will be the central feature.

I echo Mr. (Secretary) Hull's admirable summing up in his recent declaration when he said "institutions and arrangements of international finance must be so set up that they lend aid to essential enterprises and continuous development of all countries and permit payment through the processes of trade, consonant with the welfare of all countries."

However, to meet problems of the immediate postwar period, action in other directions will also be required. Liberated countries, and maybe others too, will require initial pool resources to carry them through the transitional period.

Need U. S. Cooperation

To organize the transition to peaceful activities we will need the collaboration of the United States, of ourselves and of all other free countries which have not themselves suffered the ravages of war. The Dominions and ourselves can make our contribution to this because the British Empire will actually possess overseas enormous stocks of food and materials which we are accumulating so as to erase the problems of overseas producers during the war and of a reconstructed Europe after war. The prime minister has already made clear the importance he attaches to his . . .

No one can suppose that economic reorganization of Europe after the Allied victory will be an easy task. But we shall not shirk our opportunity and our responsibility will be to bear our share of these burdens.

A peaceful brotherhood of nations, with due liberty to each to develop its own balanced economic life and its characteristic culture will be the common object of us all. But it is the transition to this end which presents the problem. It is the establishment of an international economic system capable of translating the technical possibilities of production into actual plenty and maintaining the whole population in continuous fruitful activity. It is that which is difficult.

The world cannot expect to solve the economic riddle easily or completely. But the free nations, America, the Dominions and ourselves alone possess a command of the material means.

And what is more important, these nations clearly have the will and intention to evolve a post-war order which seeks no selfish national advantage for any one of us, an order where each member of the family shall realize its own character and perfect its own gifts in liberty of conscience and person.

We have learned a lesson in the interregnum between two wars. We know that no escape can be found from the curse which has been lying on Europe except by creating and preserving economic health in every country.

Under a system of free economic cooperation Germany must play a part. But here I draw the firm distinction that we must never forget that Germany is the worst master Europe has yet known. Five times in the last century she violated peace. She must never be in a position to play that role again.

Our political and military terms for peace will be designed to prevent repetition of Germony's misdeeds . . .

The right economic outcome after the war requires on our part no exceptional unselfishness but will require constructive imagination. It is obvious that we have no motive of self-interest prompting us to economic exploitation either of Germany or the rest of Europe. This is not what we want nor what we could perform. The lasting settlement and internal peace of the continent as a whole is our only aim. The fact that at the bottom of his heart every combatant knows this is the ultimate source of our strength.
